U. S. Troops Maul Viet Cong Force After Ambush Try

SAGION (AP) — Viet Cong troops, seeking a prestige-building annihilation of a sizable American unit, were mauled Saturday when they ambushed a U.S. infantry battalion in War Zone D.

A spokesman for the U.S. 1st Infantry Division said 31 Americans and, "by initial body count," 196 of the enemy were killed in a three-hour battle at a jungle clearing 50 miles north of Saigon.

Of the 600 or so Americans involved, 113 were wounded. There was no estimate of the wounded among the Viet Cong, who fled under pounding from U.S. jet planes and artillery.

U.S. military headquarters announced a revised casualty toll in the crash of a C130 transport plane Saturday night. Headquarters said 28 persons were killed and 21 injured when the plane exploded and burn airfield in the central highlands 240 miles northeast of Saigon.

First reports had placed the toll at 34 killed, including both Americans and South Vietnamese.

U.S. bombers ranged deep into North Vietnam on Saturday to attack eight railroad yards and sidings, most of them north of Hanoi. Pilots reported they destroyed or damaged 68 boxcars.

Among major strikes was a raid by Air Force F105 Thunderchiefs on the Kep railroad yard 38 miles northeast of Hanoi and close to the much-battered MIG air base at Kep.

Air Force fliers claimed destruction or damage of boxcars in raids on two other rail yards, one 37 miles northeast of Hanoi, the other 50 miles northeast of the capital.

Simultaneously, U.S. Navy fliers from the aircraft carrier Bon Homme Richard claimed damage or destruction of boxcars and four oil fires during strikes against the main rail line from Hanoi running south to the important traffic center at Thanh Hoa. Fliers from the nuclear-powered carrier Enterprise penetrated 46 miles northeast of Haiphong to hit at a highway bridge. Other planes from the Enterprise also attacked storage areas, rail sidings and bridges around Thanh Hoa and Vinh.

In air action over South Vietnam, U. S. B52 bombers staged two raids Saturday night and Sunday morning against enemy troop concentrations and base camps.

Elsewhere the Communists unleashed mortar and rocket attacks on a South Vietnamese military hospital and three other U.S. and Vietnamese positions in the central highlands, an area where allied officers expect the next big Red offensive effort.

Farther north, artillery and air strikes were reported to have killed 48 Communists in a mountain pass leading into a plain called Elephant Valley.

Troopers of the 1st Brigade, U.S. 101st Airborne Division, skirmished with North Vietnamese regulars southwest of Quang Ngai City. Spokesmen said three Americans and eight of the enemy were killed.

Air operations Friday included predawn attacks on the Bac Giang power plant, 23 miles north of Hanoi, and a Communist storage area 34 miles north of Haiphong. The pilots were unable to determine the results because of darkness.

One Vehicle Mishap Kills Ruston Youth

RUSTON (Special) — A 16-year-old youth, Ronald Ralph Tinsley, died in a hospital here early Saturday of injuries received when a pick-up truck overturned several times in a one-vehicle accident two miles Northwest of Ruston on Lincoln Parish Road 183, late Friday.

A companion, Mike Barnes, also 16 of Ruston, was listed in "satisfactory condition" at Lincoln General Hospital today with injuries received in the mishap which occurred around 11:30 p.m., according to state police.

Investigation into the mishap is continuing, state police said. Young Tinsley, sone of Mrs. and Mrs. Ralph D. Tinsley, was driver of the pickup truck in which the two youths were riding, reports said.

Funeral services for the Tinsley youth will be held at 2:30 p.m. today at the Emanuel Baptist Church in Ruston with the Rev. A. H. Johnson, pastor, officiating.

Burial will be in the Forest Lawn Cemetery under the direction of Spears Funeral Home here.

Survivors besides his parents include one sister, Miss Cindy Tinsley of Ruston, his paternal grandmother, Mrs. D. B. Tinsley of Ruston; and his maternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Rogers Sr. of Homer.

Pallbearers will be Mike Branch, David Lee, Gary Taylor, Roger Johnson, Donnie Westbrook, and Mike Frazier.

China Still Cannot Deal Fatal Blows

WASHINGTON (AP) — Red China's claimed explosion of its first hydrogen bomb failed Saturday to alter the Pentagon's belief that the Chinese probably will lack for about eight years the capacity to deal a punishing blow to the United States.

Defense Department officials said the new test, Red China's sixth announced nuclear explosion, did not change Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara's position that: "It appears unlikely that the Chinese could deploy a significant number of operational intercontinental ballistic missiles before the mid-1970s."

He did not spell out what was meant by a significant number, but it is believed he meant in the neighborhood of about 75 missiles.

Military officials noted the important thing is to be able to deliver an atomic or hydrogen weapon, and the only capability the Chinese have now is a small force of obsolescent, limited-range bombers.

Despite this apparent Pentagon confidence in its estimate of the danger to the United States, the new Chinese test is certain to bring new pressure from Congress and probably the military chiefs for a start on an antimissile system.

McNamara has contended that there is plenty of time—before Red China's atomic missile power becomes dangerous—to install a defense.

Some experts have estimated it would take about four years to deploy an antimissile system, even the elemental one that would be effective against a relatively primitive Chinese attack.

McNamara has estimated a "thin" antimissile defense against a Chinese threat through the 1970s might cost about $3.5 billion.

The United States has spent well over $2 billion in experimentation and development work on an antimissile system which now has evolved into something called the Nike X.

Writers Re-Study Report On JFK Assassination

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

Sid Moody and Bernard Gavzer, two highly experienced Associated Press writers, recently completed an exhaustive seven-month study of the public criticisms aimed at the official report on the assassination of President Kennedy.

Moody and Gavzer weighed the criticisms point by point against the 26-volume Warren Report text. They have come up with conclusions that a lot is RIGHT about the Warren Report. And a lot is WRONG about its critics.

Their story, titled, "The Lingering Shadow: the Warren Report and Its Critics," has been transmitted for use in morning papers of Sunday June 25, or for serialized use in AMs and PMs.

It runs some 20,000 words and is the longest single story ever sent over AP wires. Its length reflects the care and depth of their probe. A special hookup of AP leased wires was needed to handle its transmission, which took as long as seven hours on some of the circuits. Another four hours were required to transmit pictures and drawings which illustrate the article.

Both Moody and Gavzer previously had interviewed numerous principals involved in the assassination and its aftermath and had written thousands of words about them and the event, itself.

Moody devoted three months to detailed study of the 18,000-page Warren Report. The summary of that report said no convincing evidence had been unearthed by its investigation to indicate Lee Harvey Oswald had acted with anyone else in the slaying.

Moody checked the critical books by Edward Jay Epstein (Inquest), attorney Mark Lane (Rush to Judgment), and Harold Weisberg (Whitewash) which attacked conduct of the commission's investigation and its conclusions. That took another month as Moody compared authors' footnotes with the Warren Report text.

Gavzer talked with 11 of the 15 senior commission counsel. The remaining four would not speak to the reporter on or off the record.

You will find their extensive research — the full report — on pages B-1, B-4, B-5 and B-6 in today's Monroe Morning World.

Ship Attack Deliberate, Say Crewmen

VALLETTA, Malta (AP) — Crewmen of the U.S. Navy communications ship Liberty have testified that they believe Israeli planes and torpedo boats deliberately attacked the vessel off Israel's coast June 8, a responsible source said Saturday.

The source said the crewmen based their belief on the intensity of the attack and also testified before a Navy inquiry board that the Israelis had plenty of time to identify the Liberty.

Thirty-four men on the Liberty were killed, 25 of them in a hold struck by a torpedo. Seventy-five were wounded. The Navy board is holding closed sessions on the attack aboard the vessel while it is being repaired in a Malta drydock.

Israeli officials have apologized for the attack and have said it was made in error. The U.S. government has protested the incident but has accepted the apology.

Israeli sources have said the Liberty was flying no flag. Defense Department officials in Washington have denied this. Some have speculated that Israeli officers, unfamiliar with the Liberty's design, may have thought it was an Egyptian ship masquerading under American colors.

A converted freighter, the Liberty bristles with radio antennae but has only four 50 caliber machine guns aboard. Its announced task was to keep up communications with U.S. embassies in the Middle East during the Israeli-Arab conflict but military men say the ship was no doubt also ordered to monitor military radio messages of both sides.

"We were flying the Stars and Stripes and it's absolutely impossible that they shouldn't know who we were," a survivor said of Israeli planes that had kept the Liberty under surveillance before the strafing. "This was a deliberate and planned attack and the remarkable thing about it was the accuracy of their air fire."

Some off-duty crewmen were sunbathing when the Israeli jets swooped down. The Liberty took 81 hits from aircraft rockets and cannon, mostly on the bridge.

Dodd Charges Put Senators In Quandary

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Ethics Committee worked Saturday to shore up charges against Sen. Thomas J. Dodd. One threatened to resign from the panel if the Connecticut Democrat is exonerated.

After four days of debate, there were strong indications that the Senate would reject charges that Dodd bilked the government on expenses for seven trips.

Depending on parliamentary footwork next week, death of the double-billing charges could open the way for a lesser punishment on a second censure charge—Dodd's use of political campaign funds for personal expenses.

Sen. Eugene McCarthy, D-Minn., a member of the six-member ethics panel, told newsmen he would resign in protest if the Senate did not "substantially" go along with the charges against Dodd. If Dodd was cleared of misuse of money he received from testimonial dinners, McCarthy said it would show that the Senate had little interest in ethics.

Rains Possible This Afternoon

Today is expected to be another hot summerlike day with high temperatures in the lower to middle 90's.

Skies are predicted to be clear to partly cloudy, and a possibility exists of a few afternoon thundershowers.

The high temperature in Monroe Saturday was 93 and the low was 71. No rain was recorded in the Twin Cities Saturday.

The low temperature today will be in the upper 60's or the low 70's.

Winds will be easterly 5 to 15 mph.

Red China Explodes Hydrogen Bomb; Voice New Threat

TOKYO (AP) — Red China announced it successfully exploded its first hydrogen bomb Saturday. It said this deals a telling blow at the "nuclear blackmail" policy of the United States and the Soviet Union.

The explosion was reported set off "over the western region" of the mainland, which evidently meant at or near Lop Nor, the atomic research center in remote Sinkiang Province.

The test was the sixth in an atomic series launched Oct. 16, 1964, with the explosion of a device that Western experts said had the force of 20,000 tons of TNT, about the power of the bomb a U.S. plane dropped over Hiroshima, Japan, Aug. 6, 1945.

The most powerful of the previous explosions—rated at the equivalent of 300,000 tons or more of TNT—was the fifth, Dec. 28, 1966.

NO SURPISE

The hydrogen bomb announcement created no great surprise in Tokyo, which is especially sensitive to nuclear weapons development around the world, or in Washington, which is trying to limit the spread of such weapons.

BALANCE NOT AFFECTED

A Japanese government source said explosion of the bomb "would not affect the nuclear balance between East and West." He added, however, that it could be broken when China completes development of nuclear weapons to be used with long-range missiles.

American officials, closely following China's five previous tests, had concluded the Chinese were moving toward the hydrogen bomb development.

The Atomic Energy Comission in Washington began fresh atmospheric checks through its worldwide monitoring system to determine the nature and size of the device.

"We have no reason to question that Peking has exploded its first hydrogen bomb," a commission spokesman said.

The White House, Pentagon and State Department had no comment.

At the United Nations, Secretary-General U Thant said "any explosion of an atomic or a hydrogen bomb by any country anywhere is to be regretted in the context of the General Assembly resolutions on the matter." These resolutions oppose such tests.

The broadcast announcement from China, which is not a U.N. member, came at the adjournment of the first session of an emergency meeting of the General Assembly on the Middle East crisis.

The hydrogen bomb test, the New China News Agency said in an English-language dispatch monitored in Tokyo, "marks the entry of the development of China's nuclear weapons into an entirely new stage."

MAO'S BELIEF

The agency said Communist party Chairman Mao Tse-tung expressed belief in June 1958 that it would be entirely possible for China to "make some atomic bombs and hydrogen bombs in 10 years' time."

"We solemnly declare to the people of China and the whole world that this prediction of Chairman Mao has now been realized while our proletarian cultural revolution (the current purge) is winning resolute victory," it said.

In crediting the success to Mao's thought, the Chinese said the latest explosion "is a very great encouragement and support to the Vietnamese people in their war against the United States and to the Arab people in their resistance to aggression by the U.S. and British imperialists and their tool, Israel."

Peking reiterated that its development and testing "are en-

Shows Up Unexpectedly

Kosygin On Hand For U. N. Session

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin showed up unexpectedly at the opening of the emergency session of the U.N. General Assembly Saturday and heard a U.S. pledge to join all member countries in finding a just solution to the Middle East crisis.

Kosygin listened intently to U.S. Ambassador Arthur J. Goldberg plead also for an end to hot words and propaganda diatribes.

But neither Kosygin nor any other member of the Soviet delegation said a word in reply — obviously saving their ammunition for the start of the debate on Monday.

The opening session was brief — lasting only 43 minutes — and there was not a big dispute over adoption of the agenda, as some had anticipated.

Most delegates had expected the Soviet leader to delay his appearance until Monday, when both he and Goldberg will deliver major policy speeches on how to deal with the aftermath of the Arab-Israeli war.

Abdul Rahman Pazhwak of Afghanistan, the assembly president, in his opening speech called for a summit conference to deal with the situation.

Talk of a Big Four summit conference persisted, and also of a meeting between Kosygin and President Johnson, but there was no definite word relating to either development.

Asked by a reporter if he would meet Johnson, the Soviet leader replied that he did not know.

Johnson was understood to be awaiting the tone of the Kosygin speech to the assembly before making any decision on a meeting with the Soviet leader.

Secretary of State Dean Rusk was expected to arrive late Sunday to begin a round of private talks with foreign ministers who will attend the assembly.

A U.N. spokesman said 10 prime ministers — nine from Communist countries — one deputy prime minister and 18 foreign ministers have said they will be on hand.

Kosygin — in a dark blue suit and white shirt — did not appear tired despite his long trip. He fielded several questions of reporters through an interpreter.

The Soviet Union was expected to press the assembly to adopt a resolution seeking to condemn Israel as an aggressor, and demand a withdrawal to positions held before the war started.

Asked if he considered the Soviet resolution and all others were before the assembly, as contended by the United States, he replied: "We have made our proposals and we will discuss them."

Goldberg took the rostrum in the big blue and gold assembly hall before formal adoption of the agenda to declare that the United States considered that every proposal that had been before the Security Council was now before the assembly.

"I wish to make it explicitly clear that the United States is participating in this session on the explicit understanding that everything, every problem and every proposal that was before the Security Council in its proceedings on the crisis in the Near East is now before the General Assembly," he declared.

A U.S. resolution in the council — threatened by Soviet veto — called for direct negotiations between Israel and the Arabs in an effort to produce lasting peace in the Middle East.

Goldberg said there were press reports from Paris quoting Kosygin as saying he was going to New York with the sole aim of finding a peaceful solution to the Middle East crisis.

"If that is indeed his sole aim, and it is shared by others, he will find the United States prepared, as I explicitly stated in the Security Council, ready to consider all proposals with an open mind and infervent desire for peace in this trouble area, for a just and equitable solution to the grave problems which confront us," Goldberg added.

Lure Of Comfort Thins Ranks In Fallout Test

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — The lure of privacy and comfort was dwindling the ranks of the 750 adventurous volunteers, mostly Georgians, spending the weekend in the Civil Defense's largest simulated fallout shelter study.

The continous noise, lack of space of privacy and sleeping on concrete floors proved too much for 63 volunteers. They left in the first 15 hours of the federal psychological experiment.

Once a volunteer leaves, he cannot re-enter.

The shelterees, whose ages range from 6 months to 79 years, entered the bare, three-story building in downtown Athens late Friday to be locked in and observed for two days, under emergency conditions as if under nuclear attack.

Some of the reasons given for leaving were: "The floor is too hard" or "It's too noisy."

John Hammes, CD research director at the University of Georgia, and a psychology professor, said: "This doesn't mean 63 people wanted to leave.

"A father or mother will say, 'I'm tired of it, let's go.' When they leave they take their family group with them. Of the 63, probably 10 or 15 wanted to go," Hammes said.

CD experts peeked continuously at the volunteers through one-way mirrors to gain a working knowledge of the problems of group shelter living. The news media, while not allowed to take part in the experiment, could also observe through the mirrors during alloted hours.

Men and women lay on air mattresses jammed next to their neighbors on the concrete floor Saturday. Some read, others played cards or worked crossword puzzles.

Children ran about shouting and playing with toys, coloring books or reading comics. A baby crawled about on a blanket while her mother combed out older children's hair.

Four teen-agers danced to rock 'n' roll music blaring from a small phonograph they had brought in while youngsters operated ventilation devices furnished by the CD that look and ride like two seater bicycles. These are used for expelling stale air from the shelter.

At night, with air mattresses and blankets spread about there was barely room for an aisle. Volunteers were stepping over each other. Some were curled up trying to sleep. But during the day much of the bedding was picked up.

At night, with air mattresses and blankets spread about there was barely room for an aisle. Volunteers were stepping over each other. Some were curled up trying to sleep. But during the day much of the bedding was picked up.

CD observers made constant checks of the temperature in the building to make certain it wasn't too hot. It averaged from 70 to 80 degrees during the day and somewhat cooler at night. There were fans in each of the eight rooms and some persons opened windows. Many of the windows were darkened but there were plenty of ceiling lights.

CD officials said they were pleased with the emerging leadership. A handbook which the volunteers found in the building gave instructions on how to organize themselves. The CD also had supplies of food, sanitation and ventilation kits.

A special hookup of AP leased wires was needed to handle its transmission, which took as long as seven hours on some of the circuits. Another four hours were required to transmit pictures and drawings which illustrate the article.

Both Moody and Gavzer previously had interviewed numerous principals involved in the assassination and its aftermath and had written thousands of words about them and the event, itself.

Moody devoted three months to detailed study of the 18,000-page Warren Report. The summary of that report said no convincing evidence had been unearthed by its investigation to indicate Lee Harvey Oswald had acted with anyone else in the slaying.

Moody checked the critical books by Edward Jay Epstein (Inquest), attorney Mark Lane (Rush to Judgment), and Harold Weisberg (Whitewash) which attacked conduct of the commission's investigation and its conclusions. That took another month as Moody compared authors' footnotes with the Warren Report text.

Gavzer talked with 11 of the 15 senior commission counsel. The remaining four would not speak to the reporter on or off the record.

You will find their extensive research — the full report — on pages B-1, B-4, B-5 and B-6 in today's Monroe Morning World.

Dodd Charges Put Senators In Quandary

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Senate Ethics Committee worked Saturday to shore up charges against Sen. Thomas J. Dodd. One threatened to resign from the panel if the Connecticut Democrat is exonerated.

After four days of debate, there were strong indications that the Senate would reject charges that Dodd bilked the government on expenses for seven trips.

Depending on parliamentary footwork next week, death of the double-billing charges could open the way for a lesser punishment on a second censure charge—Dodd's use of political campaign funds for personal expenses.

Sen. Eugene McCarthy, D-Minn., a member of the six-member ethics panel, told newsmen he would resign in protest if the Senate did not "substantially" go along with the charges against Dodd. If Dodd was cleared of misuse of money he received from testimonial dinners, McCarthy said it would show that the Senate had little interest in ethics.

Rains Possible This Afternoon

Today is expected to be another hot summerlike day wtih high temperatures in the lower to middle 90's.

Skies are predicted to be clear to partly cloudy, and a possibility exists of a few afternoon thundershowers.

The high temperature in Monroe Saturday was 93 and the low was 71. No rain was recorded in the Twin Cities Saturday.

The low temperature today will be in the upper 60's or the low 70's.

Winds will be easterly 5 to 15 mph.

Ship Attack Deliberate, Say Crewmen

VALLETTA, Malta (AP) — Crewmen of the U.S. Navy communications ship Liberty have testified that they believe Israeli planes and torpedo boats deliberately attacked the vessel off Israel's coast June 8, a responsible source said Saturday.

The source said the crewmen based their belief on the intensity of the attack and also testified before a Navy inquiry board that the Israelis had plenty of time to identify the Liberty.

Thirty-four men on the Liberty were killed, 25 of them in a hold struck by a torpedo. Seventy-five were wounded. The Navy board is holding closed sessions on the attack aboard the vessel while it is being repaired in a Malta drydock.

Israeli officials have apologized for the attack and have said it was made in error. The U.S. government has protested the incident but has accepted the apology.

Israeli sources have said the Liberty was flying no flag. Defense Department officials in Washington have denied this. Some have speculated that Israeli officers, unfamiliar with the Liberty's design, may have thought it was an Egyptian ship masquerading under American colors.

A converted freighter, the Liberty bristles with radio antennae but has only four 50-caliber machine guns aboard. Its announced task was to keep up communications with U.S. embassies in the Middle East during the Israeli-Arab conflict but military men say the ship was no doubt also ordered to monitor military radio messages of both sides.

"We were flying the Stars and Stripes and it's absolutely impossible that they shouldn't know who we were," a survivor said of Israeli planes that had kept the Liberty under surveillance before the strafing. "This was a deliberate and planned attack and the remarkable thing about it was the accuracy of their air fire."

Some off-duty crewmen were sunbathing when the Israeli jets swooped down. The Liberty took 81 hits from aircraft rockets and cannon, mostly on the bridge.

Red China Explodes Hydrogen Bomb; Voice New Threat

TOKYO (AP) — Red China announced it successfully exploded its first hydrogen bomb Saturday. It said this deals a telling blow at the "nuclear blackmail" policy of the United States and the Soviet Union.

The explosion was reported set off "over the western region" of the mainland, which evidently meant at or near Lop Nor, the atomic research center in remote Sinkiang Province.

The test was the sixth in an atomic series launched Oct. 16, 1964, with the explosion of a device that Western experts said had the force of 20,000 tons of TNT, about the power of the bomb a U.S. plane dropped over Hiroshima, Japan, Aug. 6, 1945.

The most powerful of the previous explosions—rated at the equivalent of 300,000 tons or more of TNT—was the fifth, Dec. 28, 1966.

NO SURPISE

The hydrogen bomb announcement created no great surprise in Tokyo, which is especially sensitive to nuclear weapons development around the world, or in Washington, which is trying to limit the spread of such weapons.

BALANCE NOT AFFECTED

A Japanese government source said explosion of the bomb "would not affect the nuclear balance between East and West." He added, however, that it could be broken when China completes development of nuclear weapons to be used with long-range missiles.

American officials, closely following China's five previous tests, had concluded the Chinese were moving toward the hydrogen bomb development.

The Atomic Energy Comission in Washington began fresh atmospheric checks through its worldwide monitoring system to determine the nature and size of the device.

"We have no reason to question that Peking has exploded its first hydrogen bomb," a commission spokesman said.

The White House, Pentagon and State Department had no comment.

At the United Nations, Secretary-General U Thant said "any explosion of an atomic or a hydrogen bomb by any country anywhere is to be regretted in the context of the General Assembly resolutions on the matter." These resolutions oppose such tests.

The broadcast announcement from China, which is not a U.N. member, came at the adjournment of the first session of an emergency meeting of the General Assembly on the Middle East crisis.

The hydrogen bomb test, the New China News Agency said in an English-language dispatch monitored in Tokyo, "marks the entry of the development of China's nuclear weapons into an entirely new stage."

MAO'S BELIEF

The agency said Communist party Chairman Mao Tse-tung expressed belief in June 1958 that it would be entirely possible for China to "make some atomic bombs and hydrogen bombs in 10 years' time."

"We solemnly declare to the people of China and the whole world that this prediction of Chairman Mao has now been realized while our proletarian cultural revolution (the current purge) is winning resolute victory," it said.

"In crediting the success to Mao's thought, the Chinese said the latest explosion "is a very great encouragement and support to the Vietnamese people in their war against the United States and to the Arab people in their resistance to aggression by the U.S. and British imperialists and their tool, Israel."

Peking reiterated that its development and testing "are en-

Shows Up Unexpectedly

Kosygin On Hand For U. N. Session

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin showed up unexpectedly at the opening of the emergency session of the U.N. General Assembly Saturday and heard a U.S. pledge to join all member countries in finding a just solution to the Middle East crisis.

Kosygin listened intently to U.S. Ambassador Arthur J. Goldberg plead also for an end to hot words and propaganda diatribes.

But neither Kosygin nor any other member of the Soviet delegation said a word in reply — obviously saving their ammunition for the start of the debate on Monday.

The opening session was brief — lasting only 43 minutes — and there was not a big dispute over adoption of the agenda, as some had anticipated.

Most delegates had expected the Soviet leader to delay his appearance until Monday, when both he and Goldberg will deliver major policy speeches on how to deal with the aftermath of the Arab-Israeli war.

Abdul Rahman Pazhwak of Afghanistan, the assembly president, in his opening speech called for a summit conference to deal with the situation.

Talk of a Big Four summit conference persisted, and also of a meeting between Kosygin and President Johnson, but there was no definite word relating to either development.

Asked by a reporter if he would meet Johnson, the Soviet leader replied that he did not know.

Johnson was understood to be awaiting the tone of the Kosygin speech to the assembly before making any decision on a meeting with the Soviet leader..

Secretary of State Dean Rusk was expected to arrive late Sunday to begin a round of private talks with foreign ministers who will attend the assembly.

A U.N. spokesman said 10 prime ministers — nine from Communist countries — one deputy prime minister and 18 foreign ministers have said they will be on hand.

Kosygin — in a dark blue suit and white shirt — did not appear tired despite his long trip. He fielded several questions of reporters through an interpreter.

The Soviet Union was expected to press the assembly to adopt a resolution seeking to condemn Israel as an aggressor, and demand a withdrawal to positions held before the war started.

Asked if he considered the Soviet resolution and all others were before the assembly, as contended by the United States, he replied: "We have made our proposals and we will discuss them."

Goldberg took the rostrum in the big blue and gold assembly hall before formal adoption of the agenda to declare that the United States considered that every proposal that had been before the Security Council was now before the assembly.

"I wish to make it explicitly clear that the United States is participating in this session on the explicit understanding that everything, every problem and every proposal that was before the Security Council in its proceedings on the crisis in the Near East is now before the General Assembly," he declared.

A U.S. resolution in the council — threatened by Soviet veto — called for direct negotiations between Israel and the Arabs in an effort to produce lasting peace in the Middle East.

Goldberg said there were press reports from Paris quoting Kosygin as saying he was going to New York with the sole aim of finding a peaceful solution to the Middle East crisis.

"If that is indeed his sole aim, and it is shared by others, he will find the United States prepared, as I explicitly stated in the Security Council, ready to consider all proposals with an open mind and infervent desire for peace in this trouble area, for a just and equitable solution to the grave problems which confront us," Goldberg added.

Lure Of Comfort Thins Ranks In Fallout Test

ATHENS, Ga. (AP)—The lure of privacy and comfort was dwindling the ranks of the 750 adventurous volunteers, mostly Georgians, spending the weekend in the Civil Defense's largest simulated fallout shelter study.

The continous noise, lack of space of privacy and sleeping on concrete floors proved too much for 63 volunteers. They left in the first 15 hours of the federal psychological experiment.

Once a volunteer leaves, he cannot re-enter.

The shelterees, whose ages range from 6 months to 79 years, entered the bare, three-story building in downtown Athens late Friday to be locked in and observed for two days, under emergency conditions as if under nuclear attack.

Some of the reasons given for leaving were, "The floor is too hard," or, "It's too noisy."

John Hammes, CD research director at the University of Georgia, and a psychology professor, said, "This doesn't mean 63 people wanted to leave."

"A father or mother will say, 'I'm tired of it, let's go.' When they leave they take their family group with them. Of the 63, probably 10 or 15 wanted to go," Hammes said.

CD experts peeked continuously at the volunteers through one-way mirrors to gain a working knowledge of the problems of group shelter living. The news media, while not allowed to take part in the experiment, could also observe through the mirrors during alloted hours.

Men and women lay on air mattresses jammed next to their neighbors on the concrete floor Saturday. Some read, others played cards or worked crossword puzzles.

Children ran about shouting and playing with toys, coloring books or reading comics. A baby crawled about on a blanket while her mother combed out older children's hair.

Four teen-agers danced to rock 'n' roll music blaring from a small phonograph they had brought in, while youngsters operated ventilation devices furnished by the CD that look and ride like two - seater bicycles. These are used for expelling stale air from the shelter.

At night, with air mattresses and blankets spread about, there was barely room for an aisle. Volunteers were stepping over each other. Some were curled up trying to sleep. But during the day much of the bedding was picked up.

At night, with air mattresses and blankets spread about, there was barely room for an aisle. Volunteers were stepping over each other. Some were curled up trying to sleep. But during the day much of the bdding was picked up.

CD observers made constant checks of the temperature in the building to make certain it wasn't too hot. It averaged from 70 to 80 degrees during the day and somewhat cooler at night. There were fans in each of the eight rooms and some persons opened windows. Many of the windows were darkened but there were plenty of ceiling lights.

CD officials said they were pleased with the emerging leadership. A handbook which the volunteers found in the building gave instructions on how to organize themselves. The CD also had supplies of food, sanitation and ventilation kits.

Kosygin Meeting Unsettled

LBJ Ready For Informal Debate

CAMP DAVID, Md. (AP)—President Johnson, spending the weekend at this mountaintop hidaway, prepared Saturday for an indirect but public debate with Premier Alexei N. Kosygin and a possible meeting with the Soviet chief.

With Johnson at this presidential retreat 70 miles from the White House was Prime Minister Harold Holt of Australia, a previously scheduled weekend guest.

Johnson told a small group of newsmen he would not foreclose the possibility that he and Holt in their talks Saturday and Sunday would discuss a possible presidential meeting with Kosygin.

"I wouldn't want to foreclose discussing going to the moon," he said. But he added that the prospect of a meeting with Kosygin isn't on the agenda for his talks with Holt.

At the brief session with newsmen on the sun-drenched patio at Camp David, the chief executive was noncommital on other questions. He said he has no more knowledge of Kosygin's plans than the reporters do.

Johnson has scheduled for Monday morning a speech, to be broadcast by radio and television, which administration sources said in advance would contain a major statement of U.S. policy on the Middle East.

At the U.N. General Assembly emergency session reconvening in New York an hour later on Monday, Kosygin is slated to follow U.S. Ambassador Arthur J. Goldberg with the Soviet keynote address on the crisis.

Thus the clashing U.S. and Soviet views on the Middle East were headed for maximum airing—with Johnson to get in the first word in the capital and Goldberg to follow him at New York.

Just when and where Johnson and Kosygin would meet face to face for the first U.S.-Soviet summit parley in six years was still an open question, assuming they do meet.

"That's an iffy question," Johnson told a reporter who inquired about the site if he and Kosygin do meet.

Administration sources assumed from diplomatic soundings with the Russians that Kosygin would accept Johnson's invitation to meet sometime during the Soviet leader's stay in this country. Kosygin is expected to remain through next weekend.

But no specific date has been set up, the sources said—and both the Russian and American sides appeared cautious in maneuvering toward a summit parley.

Kosygin, who wants to woo Arab support from his U.N. appearance, presumably does not wish to seem too cosy with the President of the nation whom the Arabs accuse of siding with Israel.

Johnson, for his part, was reported taking a go-slow approach on meeting Kosygin until he sees how the Soviet premier deals with the United States in his U.N. oratory.

There could also be some problem about a site. Johnson is believed to favor Washington or Camp David. Kosygin may figure his prestige would be higher if the U.S. President came to see him in New York.

But in sum, U.S. diplomats figured such protocol technicalities could be threshed out in view of the large potential gain from a personal get-together by the heads of the two superpowers. Not only the Middle East, but also Vietnam, disarmament and other items are of common conern to them.

The Kremlin strategy on the Middle East is currently spearheaded by its drive to get the General Assembly to brand Israel as the aggressor and demand a pullback of Israeli forces behind Israel's old frontier.

U.S. strategists figure Moscow is trying to overcome its setback from Israel's victory in the war by using the United Nations as a global propaganda forum. The Russians hope at least to recoup their influence in the Arab world and make matters more difficult for the United States, these U.S. sources say.

Johnson said the Middle East nations must accept the rights of their neighbors to a secure existence—the Arabs so far have refused to recognize Israel's existence as a nation—and he proposed "the building of a durable peace in the area."

Detroit Police In Wage Dispute

DETROIT (AP)— Authorities urged Detroit's 4,700-man police force to end a rash of sick calls Saturday as the sick toll mounted to 449 in a continuing feud with the city administration over failure to raise wages.

Meanwhile, Mayor Jerome Cavanagh cancelled plans to attend the 34th U.S. Conference of Mayors which opened at Honolulu, Hawaii, this weekend. Cavanagh aides said he would stay in Detroit until the police dispute subsides, possibly leaving for Honolulu by Monday. He is president of the conference.

Police Commissioner Ray Girardin "strongly suggested" that police officers stop thinking in terms of the "impossible" in their fight for higher wages.

The number of officers suspended as a result of calling in sick zoomed from 61 to 123 by late Saturday. If these, 61 earlier were suspended on charges of neglect of duty for allegedly slowing down their traffic ticket writing. The others were charged with insubordination.

Girardin ordered city doctors to check those calling in sick and a number were ordered back to duty after being examined.

One officer, patrolman Joseph Callewaert, 23, collapsed in the examination lineup Saturday. He was treated and sent home.

Several officers reportedly have put in for emergency leaves, claiming illness in their families.

Meanwhile, Circuit Judge Blair Moody of Wayne (Detroit) County told the policemen at a hearing that he could not order them to return to work. But he urged them to return and continued his restraining injunction, ordering police to refrain from any work stoppages until a show cause hearing Tuesday.

Carl Parsell, president of the Detroit Police Officers Association, said all 13 precincts in Detroit would be picketed over the weekend.

Waters Subsiding In Flooded Area

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) —Eastern Nebraska's sheet of water moved slowly down the Platte and Blue River systems Saturday as flood fighters reported an optimistic situation.

Emphasis shifted to Beatrice, a city of 12,000 and the southernmost major point on the Blue, as Grand Island on the Wood River and Crete and Seward upstream on the Blue recorded drops in the water levels.

Watersheds were full as far west as Kearney in central Nebraska following 23 consecutive days of rain, but no precipitation was reported Friday and the forecast was for a dry weekend.

Four deaths were reported during the siege of violent weather. In addition to the downpours, there were 94 sightings of tornadoes in three days and nights last week.

Pressure eased at Grand Island, the hardest hit community and Nebraska's third largest city with a population of about 30,000, but officials said many residents remained away from their homes and they looked for high water to remain until Monday or Tuesday.

Bulldozers broke a railroad beltline in the southwest part of town, allowing a backup lake to drain along lowlands to the Wood River channel. But this swirled more runoff into southeast Grand Island, the latest evacuation area.

The flood water at its deepest penetration reached a point about three blocks from downtown Grand Island. About 30 per cent of the city was inundated during the flood peak, and 5,000 evacuated.

At Beatrice, residents expected a Sunday crest of 26 feet on the Big Blue, 10 feet above flood stage. This crest could be contained if the dikes hold, observers said, but some homes would be surrounded and a few might have basement water.

The Blue has been higher than 26 feet at Beatrice only three times since 1905, but the city's added dike protection diminished much of the danger.

Water also was receding upstream at Crete, where some northern residents were evacuated. Flood fighters, however, said another crest was possible in runoff of the west, north and main Blue streams. Railroad embankments held back the surge and not more than 10 per cent of the community had flooding.

On the Platte, Ashland and Louisville near the juncture with the Missouri River south of Omaha remained trouble spots. Some families were evacuated at Louisville, near the juncture with the Missouri River. Ashland had lowland flooding and campers were moved out of the Two Rivers recreation area.

The Platte and the Elkhorn to the north of the Blue system were receding.

Agricultural statistician A. W. Nordquist estimated that 500,000 acres had been covered by water and another 200,000 partially inundated. He said about 200,000 acres of corn had been washed out.

Kosygin Meeting Unsettled

LBJ Ready For Informal Debate

CAMP DAVID, Md. (AP)—President Johnson, spending the weekend at this mountaintop hidaway, prepared Saturday for an indirect but public debate with Premier Alexei N. Kosygin and a possible meeting with the Soviet chief.

With Johnson at this presidential retreat 70 miles from the White House was Prime Minister Harold Holt of Australia, a previously scheduled weekend guest.

Johnson told a small group of newsmen he would not foreclose the possibility that he and Holt in their talks Saturday and Sunday would discuss a possible presidential meeting with Kosygin.

"I wouldn't want to foreclose discussing going to the moon," he said. But he added that the prospect of a meeting with Kosygin isn't on the agenda for his talks with Holt.

At the brief session with newsmen on the sun-drenched patio at Camp David, the chief executive was noncommital on other questions. He said he has no more knowledge of Kosygin's plans than the reporters do.

Johnson has scheduled for Monday morning a speech, to be broadcast by radio and television, which administration sources said in advance would contain a major statement of U.S. policy on the Middle East.

At the U.N. General Assembly emergency session reconvening in New York an hour later on Monday, Kosygin is slated to follow U.S. Ambassador Arthur J. Goldberg with the Soviet keynote address on the crisis.

Thus the clashing U.S. and Soviet views on the Middle East were headed for maximum airing—with Johnson to get in the first word in the capital and Goldberg to follow him at New York.

Just when and where Johnson and Kosygin would meet face to face for the first U.S.-Soviet summit parley in six years was still an open question, assuming they do meet.

"That's an iffy question," Johnson told a reporter who inquired about the site if he and Kosygin do meet.

Administration sources assumed from diplomatic soundings with the Russians that Kosygin would accept Johnson's invitation to meet sometime during the Soviet leader's stay in this country. Kosygin is expected to remain through next weekend.

But no specific date has been set up, the sources said—and both the Russian and American sides appeared cautious in maneuvering toward a summit parley.

Kosygin, who wants to woo Arab support from his U.N. appearance, presumably does not wish to seem too cosy with the President of the nation whom the Arabs accuse of siding with Israel.

Johnson, for his part, was reported taking a go-slow approach on meeting Kosygin until he sees how the Soviet premier deals with the United States in his U.N. oratory.

There could also be some problem about a site. Johnson is believed to favor Washington or Camp David. Kosygin may figure his prestige would be higher if the U.S. President came to see him in New York.

But in sum, U.S. diplomats figured such protocol technicalities could be threshed out in view of the large potential gain from a personal get-together by the heads of the two superpowers. Not only the Middle East, but also Vietnam, disarmament and other items are of common conern to them.

The Kremlin strategy on the Middle East is currently spearheaded by its drive to get the General Assembly to brand Israel as the aggressor and demand a pullback of Israeli forces behind Israel's old frontier.

U.S. strategists figure Moscow is trying to overcome its setback from Israel's victory in the war by using the United Nations as a global propaganda forum. The Russians hope at least to recoup their influence in the Arab world and make matters more difficult for the United States, these U.S. sources say.

Johnson said the Middle East nations must accept the rights of their neighbors to a secure existence—the Arabs so far have refused to recognize Israel's existence as a nation—and he proposed "the building of a durable peace in the area."

Detroit Police In Wage Dispute

DETROIT (AP)— Authorities urged Detroit's 4,700-man police force to end a rash of sick calls Saturday as the sick toll mounted to 449 in a continuing feud with the city administration over failure to raise wages.

Meanwhile, Mayor Jerome Cavanagh cancelled plans to attend the 34th U.S. Conference of Mayors which opened at Honolulu, Hawaii, this weekend. Cavanagh aides said he would stay in Detroit until the police dispute subsides, possibly leaving for Honolulu by Monday. He is president of the conference.

Police Commissioner Ray Girardin "strongly suggested" that police officers stop thinking in terms of the "impossible" in their fight for higher wages.

The number of officers suspended as a result of calling in sick zoomed from 61 to 123 by late Saturday. If these, 61 earlier were suspended on charges of neglect of duty for allegedly slowing down their traffic ticket writing. The others were charged with insubordination.

Girardin ordered city doctors to check those calling in sick and a number were ordered back to duty after being examined.

One officer, patrolman Joseph Callewaert, 23, collapsed in the examination lineup Saturday. He was treated and sent home.

Several officers reportedly have put in for emergency leaves, claiming illness in their families.

Meanwhile, Circuit Judge Balir Moody of Wayne (Detroit) County told the policemen at a hearing that he could not order them to return to work. But he urged them to return and continued his restraining injunction, ordering police to refrain from any work stoppages, until a show cause hearing Tuesday.

Carl Parsell, president of the Detroit Police Officers Association, said all 13 precincts in Detroit would be picketed over the weekend.

The West Monroe Chapter No. 93 of Royal Arch Masons will confer the "most excellent master's degree at a meeting Monday at 7:30 p.m. at the West Monroe Masonic Temple.

A. P. Knight, past high priest, said that all Royal Arch Masons are invited to attend the meeting.

Waters Subsiding In Flooded Area

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) —Eastern Nebraska's sheet of water moved slowly down the Platte and Blue River systems Saturday as flood fighters reported an optimistic situation.

Emphasis shifted to Beatrice, a city of 12,000 and the southernmost major point on the Blue, as Grand Island on the Wood River and Crete and Seward upstream on the Blue recorded drops in the water levels.

Watersheds were full as far west as Kearney in central Nebraska following 23 consecutive days of rain, but no precipitation was reported Friday and the forecast was for a dry weekend.

Four deaths were reported during the siege of violent weather. In addition to the downpours, there were 94 sightings of tornadoes in three days and nights last week.

Pressure eased at Grand Island, the hardest hit community and Nebraska's third largest city with a population of about 30,000, but officials said many residents remained away from their homes and they looked for high water to remain until Monday or Tuesday.

Bulldozers broke a railroad beltline in the southwest part of town, allowing a backup lake to drain along lowlands to the Wood River channel. But this swirled more runoff into southeast Grand Island, the latest evacuation area.

The flood water at its deepest penetration reached a point about three blocks from downtown Grand Island. About 30 per cent of the city was inundated during the flood peak, and 5,000 evacuated.

At Beatrice, residents expected a Sunday crest of 26 feet on the Big Blue, 10 feet above flood stage. This crest could be contained if the dikes hold, observers said, but some homes would be surrounded and a few might have basement water.

The Blue has been higher than 26 feet at Beatrice only three times since 1905, but the city's added dike protection diminished much of the danger.

Water also was receding upstream at Crete, where some northern residents were evacuated. Flood fighters, however, said another crest was possible in runoff of the west, north and main Blue streams. Railroad embankments held back the surge and not more than 10 per cent of the community had flooding.

On the Platte, Ashland and Louisville near the juncture with the Missouri River south of Omaha remained trouble spots. Some families were evacuated at Louisville, near the juncture with the Missouri River. Ashland had lowland flooding and campers were moved out of the Two Rivers recreation area.

The Platte and the Elkhorn to the north of the Blue system were receding.

Agricultural statistician A. V. Nordquist estimated that 500,000 acres had been covered by water and another 200,000 partially inundated. He said about 200,000 acres of corn had been washed out.

Bank Picks New Director In Monroe

Charles H. Bird, North Louisiana Banker active in civic affairs, has been elected to the Board of Directors of American Bank and Trust Co. in Monroe, according to an announcement Saturday by William R. Boles, Chairman. Bird, a resident of Monroe for fifteen years, joined Bossier Bank and Trust Company, Bassier City, in January, 1967, as executive vice president. He also serves Bossier Bank as a member of its board of directors.

In welcoming Bird to American's Board, Boles said, "Charles Bird is a recognized leader in commercial and mortgage lending. He currently represents the state banks of Louisiana on the American Bankers Association Advisory Council to the Mortgage Finance Committee. We are fortunate to retain a man of his talent, knowledge, and experience, not only for American Bank, but also for the progress and growth of North Louisiana."

A Scottish Rite Mason and past master of Strong Lodge F. & A.M., Bird has also been active in Monroe in the Chamber of Commerce, Red Cross and Girl Scouts. He held directorships in all of these organizations. He remains affiliated with the American Petroleum Institute and the Society of Residential Appraisers.

Schools Blamed For Youth Problem

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's public school systems were accused Saturday night of contributing to the surging increase of juvenile delinquency in the United States. And juvenile courts also were criticized.

Two consultants to the President's crime commission, noting that juvenile delinquency is at a record high and increasing, say in a report made public by the commission, "The schools have not adequately adapted to new social and economic conditions with the result that these shortcomings contribute to heightened delinquency.'

The consultants say the schools themselves are forcing students to drop out in some cases by failing to concentrate on slow learners, prejudging all slum children as those whose learning abilities are lower than middle-class white pupils and, in instances, by labeling children as troublemakers, passing the word among teachers and making conditions so uncomfortable the youths want to leave school.

The commission reiterates its earlier stand that communities should set up youth services bureaus to handle youngsters in trouble without subjecting them to the court processes.

The recommendation and the consultants' paper are contained in a report on juvenile crime prepared by a task force of the President's Commission on Law Enforcement and Administration of Justice — more commonly called the crime commission.

The report is the sixth of nine specialized studies to be issued by the commission, which is nearing the end of its existence. All the specialized studies were summarized in the commission's over-all report published last February.

Commission Chairman Nicholas Katzenbach notes in a statement accompanying the juvenile crime report that, "The juvenile court has failed in significant respects to live up to its founders' hopes."

He calls most important of all the commission's recommendation for new methods to deal run afoul of the law, short of injecting them into the full, formal" court system.

The Supreme Court, ruling last month in the case of Gerald Francis Gault, extended to juveniles accused of delinquency substantially the same constitutional protections given adults in criminal trials.

From now on, the nation's 3,000 juvenile courts are obliged not to deny a juvenile a lawyer's help, the right to face and cross-examine witnesses, the privilege against self-incrimination and the right to know in advance of the proceeding the complaint against him.

Juvenile courts traditionally have generally followed informal procedures working on the theory that the judge, or state, is a substitute parent for the youngster in trouble.

But Supreme Court Justice Abe Fortas said in his opinion that, "Juvenile court history has again demonstrated that unbridled discretion, however benevolently motivated, is frequently a poor substitute for principle and procedure."

He said, "The absence of substantive standards has not necessarily meant that children receive careful, compassionate, individualized treatment."

The commission's youth services bureau would have as a primary function individually tailored work with troublemaking youths. This might include group and individual counseling, placement in group and foster homes, work and recreational programs, employment counseling and special education.

IEEE Slates Last Meeting Of Period

The consultants say the schools themselves are forcing students to drop out in some cases by failing to concentrate on slow learners, prejudging all slum children as those whose learning abilities are lower than middle-class white pupils and, in instances, by labeling children as troublemakers, passing the word among teachers and making conditions so uncomfortable the youths want to leave school.

The commission reiterates its earlier stand that communities should set up youth services bureaus to handle youngsters in trouble without subjecting them to the court processes.

The recommendation and the consultants' paper are contained in a report on juvenile crime prepared by a task force of the President's Commission on Law Enforcement and Administration of Justice — more commonly called the crime commission.

The report is the sixth of nine specialized studies to be issued by the commission, which is nearing the end of its existence. All the specialized studies were summarized in the commission's over-all report published last February.

Commission Chairman Nicholas Katzenbach notes in a statement accompanying the juvenile crime report that, "The juvenile court has failed in significant respects to live up to its founders' hopes."

He calls most important of all the commission's recommendation for new methods to deal run afoul of the law, short of injecting them into the full, formal" court system.

The Supreme Court, ruling last month in the case of Gerald Francis Gault, extended to juveniles accused of delinquency substantially the same constitutional protections given adults in criminal trials.

From now on, the nation's 3,000 juvenile courts are obliged not to deny a juvenile a lawyer's help, the right to face and cross-examine witnesses, the privilege against self-incrimination and the right to know in advance of the proceeding the complaint against him.

Juvenile courts traditionally have generally followed informal procedures working on the theory that the judge, or state, is a substitute parent for the youngster in trouble.

But Supreme Court Justice Abe Fortas said in his opinion that, "Juvenile court history has again demonstrated that unbridled discretion, however benevolently motivated, is frequently a poor substitute for principle and procedure."

He said, "The absence of substantive standards has not necessarily meant that children receive careful, compassionate, individualized treatment."

The commission's youth services bureau would have as a primary function individually tailored work with troublemaking youths. This might include group and individual counseling, placement in group and foster homes, work and recreational programs, employment counseling and special education.

Russians Fire 167th Rocket

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union launched No. 167 in its unmanned series of Cosmos satellites Saturday. It was the fourth Cosmos launching in 10 days and the seventh so far this month.

In the past, an unusually flurry of unmanned Cosmos launchings has sometimes preceded the launching of manned spacecraft.

But future Soviet manned launchings are expected to await the outcome of an investigation into the April 24 crash of the Soyuz 1 spaceship, which killed cosmnaut Vladimir M. Komarov.

'Y' Slates Coed Classes For Summer

The Twin Cities YMCA announced Saturday that Edwin Davis will conduct summer classes in life saving and water safety, and archery.

The co-educational lifesaving and water safety courses will be taught on Monday and Wednesday evenings at 6:30. To be eligible for the junior lifesaving class students must be at least 12 years old. Senior class eligibility begins at age 15.

Twenty-two hours of instruction and conditioning are required to complete the course.

An archery class for girls will be taught Mondays and Wednesdays at 10:15 a.m.

The boys archery class will be at 10:15 a.m. Thursday.

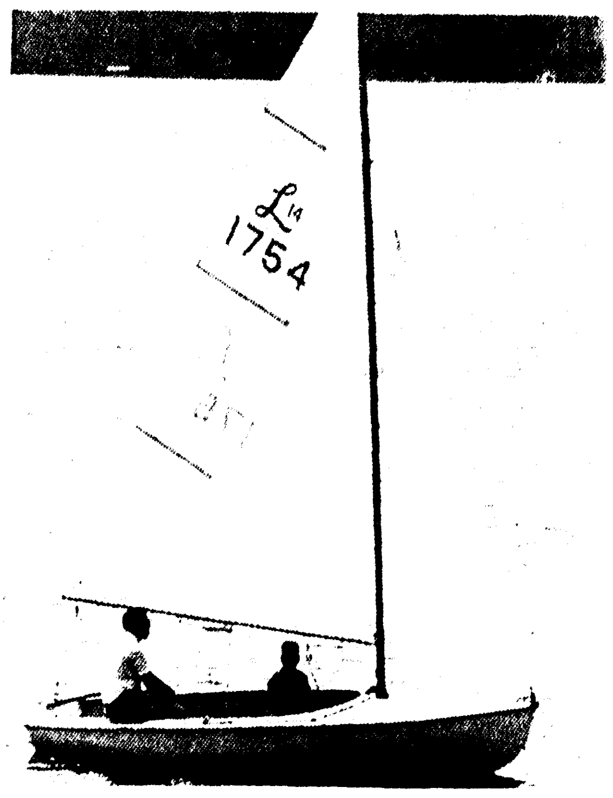
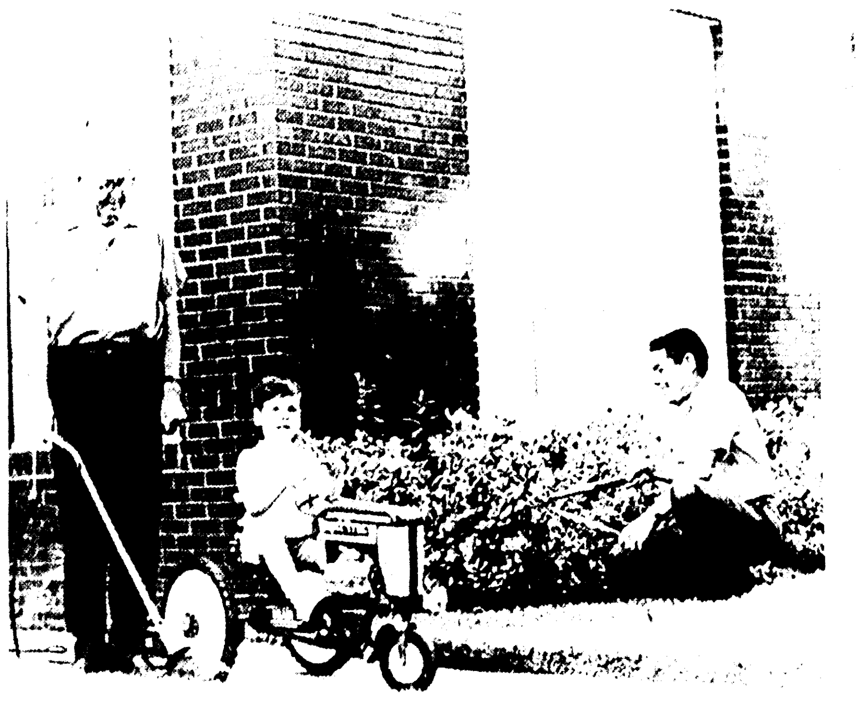
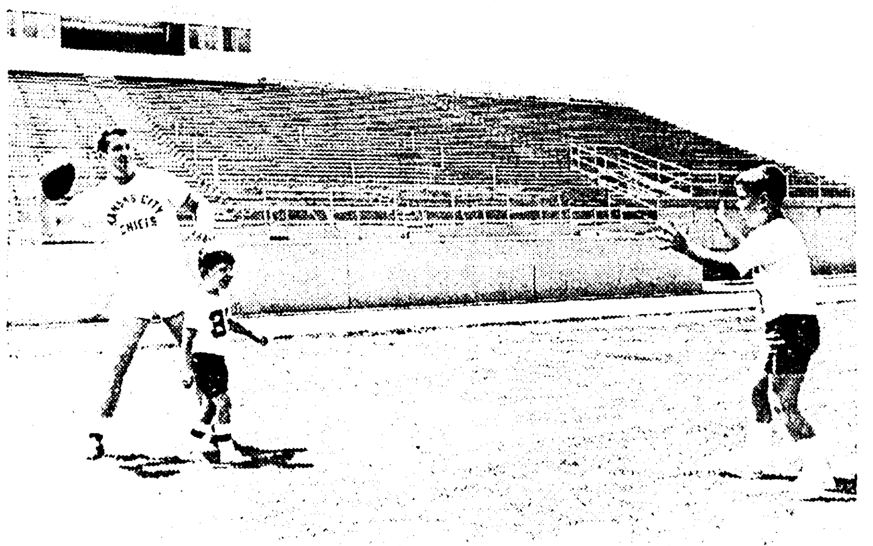
Father's Day Is Important Symbol to Many Persons In Twin Cities Area







By BILL MILTON
Staff Writer

Father's Day is not a day, it is an idea. And like most ideas it is symbolic.

It is an attempt by the American people to symbolize in one brief 24-hour period all the joys, the fun, the good times and the sad times it has taken them a year, and for some, a lifetime to accumulate in sharing life with their fathers.

It is those all too brief moments which are pulled out of the mind in later years, remembered and relived when the time is appropriate.

WHIMS OF THE FISH

Recalled are those times when Henry Alderman, of Rt 1, Freddy St., taught his son, Jeff, the wiles and whims of the fish in some shaded pond or bayou, (upper center).

They are young now, but one day the sons of Roy Naron, of 306 Woodrow St., West Monroe, Chris, Mark, Terry and Roy Jr., will relive in their minds the sunshine days when they skimmed along the waters of the Ouachita River with their Dad, (upper right).

If Tommy Dansby one day has the notion that to work on one's lawn and garden is not really work at all but kind of fun it will be because Tommy Sr., of 2703 Gouville Dr., and his grandpa, Tom Davis, of 106 Glenmar St., taught him that lesson, (lower left).

LESSONS TO BE LEARNED

The lesson which Stewart "Smokey" Stover of Monroe, teaches his sons, Stewart Jr. and Bradley, is that their Dad's game, football, is not a game at all, but the way in which he supports his family. But it is fun for them just the same, (third from left below).

Mark and David Hill are growing up without fear of, and with a love for animals, and for that they will one day thank their Dad. Don Hill of 1706 S. 10th St., shows the boys that ponies are for little men and horses are for grownups (lower right).

And so from day to day they build memories together. For as they grow older, fathers need memories, too, and perhaps the day most remembered will be today — Father's Day, 1967.

White Hats Effective In Riot Areas

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Twenty-one "White Hats" to offset racial disturbances apparently have had the desired affect on the city's racially troubled West Side.

Incidents Friday night and Saturday were few and scattered, but included a $200,000 supermarket fire which firemen believe may have been arson.

The blaze, beyond the West Side troubled area, may not have been connected with racial troubles but arson experts are investigating. "We found two separate fires which points to the possibility of arson," Fire Chief George Wintermute said.

High-ranking Dayton police officers agreed that the small group of Negro youths organized to discourage vandalism by other Negro youngsters had succeeded.

"Certainly they did," one officer said. "It's hard right now to evaluate all they did, but it's obvious there was no real trouble and the boys were out there on the streets."

The "White Hats," or youth patrolmen could be recognized by the white protective helmets and armbands they wore as they sauntered casually through the "hot red" areas, chatting offhandedly but pointedly with other neighborhood youngsters.

The youths, many of whom were athletes from local schools and most well-known in the neighborhoods, ranged in age from 17 to 21. They were on the streets, with police vehicles not far away, from 8:15 p.m. Friday to 1 a.m. Saturday and planned to carry on their work Saturday night.

Police activity not only was reduced from that of Wednesday and Thursday nights, when fire bombings and looting incidents shattered normally quiet weekday evenings, "it was actually far lower than on a normal Friday night," Capt. Kenneth Williams said.

Despite the calm which seemed to be settling over the area, police remained on 14-hour shifts and still were maintaining a tight vigil on the West Side, their standard equipment being protective headgear and riot shotguns.

Youth Hurt In Monroe Auto Mishap

Late Saturday a 19-year-old Monroe youth received minor injuries in a two-car accident on Plum Street near South 7th St.

Treated and released for minor cuts and bruises, after he had been taken to St. Francis Hospital by Gentry's Ambulance Service, was Bennie F. Norris, 102 Winnsboro Rd.

Officers said that Norris' vehicle traveling east on Plum, was in a rear-end collision with an auto driven by David V. Whitman, 20, 1404 South 9th St., Monroe.

Whitman told officers that he did not see the Norris vehicle until it was too late to stop.

Police charged Whitman with negligent driving.

Ships Resume In New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Business was ship-shape in the Port of New Orleans Saturday, with all deck officers reported back on the job despite continued striking in some ports.

A spokesman for the Harbor Police here said there was no picketing and no ships were idled by members of the International Organization of Masters, Mates & Pilots AFL-CIO.

Mrs. Becky Milton will spend Father's Day in Shreveport nursing her father, Willard Brickell, who fractured his foot-bone waterskiing on Cross Lake Saturday.

Bill, an employe with the News-Star—World, will join his wife there today. They plan to return to their home in West Monroe later tonight.

Little Boy Saved

A mighty modest little lady is Mrs. Susie Killen of Collinston. She helped save Danny Keith Fuller, 5, from drowning Thursday and has just got around to mentioning it.

Susie was visiting her in-laws, Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Killen on Crew Lake, when the small neighbor boy decided to go fishing. The boy wandered out to the end of a diving board and fell into the water. His brother Jim, 7, ran to the house telling the grown-ups of what happened.

Susie was first to the edge of the water. She grabbed hold of a board nailed to a tree and leaned out over the 14-foot hole of water, but it was not far enough. Susie is unable to swim. Meanwhile, her mother-in-law and sister-in-law, Mary, who uses crutches, had reached the lake's edge. Mary handed Susie a crutch who extended it to the floundering Danny and pulled him out.

Another neighbor helped pump water from the gasping boy's lungs. It was all worth it. When the little boy was dried out, he came up to Susie, hugged her neck and said: "Thanks."

Local Police Charge Man With Assault

Monroe Police Saturday arrested Collie "Bud" Marzett, 66, of 510 Jack McEnery St., Monroe, on charges of aggravated assault after neighbors said Marzeet threatened them with a shotgun.

In West Monroe, police placed reckless driving and driving while intoxicated charges against James T. Waldrop, 20, Old Natchitoches Road, West Monroe.

Late Saturday Monroe Police arrested A. C. Kendrix, 603½ Stone Ave., on charges of aggravated battery.

Mrs. Letha Jacobs, 63, 601 Stone Ave., his landlady, was treated and released from St. Francis hospital for a small cut on the side of her head as the result of being struck with an axe in the course of an argument concerning rent.

"We solemnly declare once again that at no time and in no circumstances will China be the first to use nuclear weapons," the broadcast said.

President Johnson warned Red China last Oct. 30 that any atomic weapons power it develops "can and will be deterred." Johnson was in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, on an Asian tour at the time. His comment was in response to news of China's announcement of success Oct. 27 in its fourth experiment, "a guided missile nuclear weapon test."

The Peking announcement Saturday said Peking had guided missiles as well as atomic bombs before the successful test of the hydrogen device.

"This greatly heightens the morale of the revolutionary people throughout the world and greatly deflates the arrogance of imperialism, modern revisionism and all reactionaries," it said.

China's development of missiles that might carry nuclear warheads is not regarded by American authorities as yet in the intercontinental range.

Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara said in May 1966 that the missiles and nuclear warheads being developed in China would have a range of up to 700 miles in the next two or three years — that is in 1968 or 1969.

McNamara estimated it would be a decade or more before the Chinese could produce intercontinental rockets which could directly threaten the United States.

Boy Sustains Auto Mishap In Monroe

A 12-year-old boy received minor injuries Saturday when struck by an auto in the parking lot of Bowaero Bowling Lanes on Louisville Ave.

Carried to St. Francis Hospital by Gentry's Ambulance and treated for minor cuts and bruises was Herbert Lee Miller, Rt. 3, Box 347, Rayville.

Officers said the Miller youth ran into the parking lot where he was struck by an auto driven by Hillery H. Graves, 20, 1716 Washington St.

No one was charged in the accident.

City Renewal Chance Slim, Bonin Says

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Gerald Bonin, the Louisiana State Commissioner of Public Welfare, said Saturday he thinks the chances of the legislature passing any urban renewal bills are very slim.

"The country legislators will never go along with it," Bonin said. "Too many look at it as creeping socialism."

Peach Festival Set To Open Thursday

RUSTON (Special) — With a weekend rash of entries for the beauty pageant in the Louisiana Peach Festival, this year's contest is expected to have a record field of entries, festival officals said.

As an additional star attraction Merredith MacRae, currently playing "Billie Jo" on television's "Petticoat Junction," will be a featured guest here, during the Peach Festival, the officials said.

Miss MacRae will begin her appearances and activities in Ruston Thursday night in Howard Auditorium during the first night of the Queen Dixie Gem XVII Pageant.

She will also appear at the Awards Luncheon Friday noon and will ride in the Peach Festival Parade Friday afternoon. Miss MacRae is scheduled to present several vocal numbers at the two nights of the Queen Dixie Gem Pageant.

Born in Houston, Tex. Miss MacRae is the daughter of the show business couple, Gordon and Sheila MacRae.

ENTRY DEADLINE

The deadline for beauty pageant entries was today with several entries received Saturday.

The festival begins a four-day run Thursday, starting with the peach cookery contest at 10 a.m. at the Holiday Inn, and the peach growers prize peach contest at 10 a.m.

The flower show will be at the Ruston Country Club, from 3-9 p.m. with hostesses being representatives from 10 clubs in Jonesboro-Hodge, Simsboro, Dubach and Ruston.

A Kiddie Carnival, featuring merry - go - rounds ferris wheels, bumper cars and horses, will open Thursday morning at the City Parking Lot near the post office and continue through Saturday.

The Peach Classic Swim Meet, AAU sanctioned, has been expanded to extend for three days this year Teams from Tennessee, Mississippi, Arkansas, Texas and Louisiana have been invited as well as several national record holders.

New Football Stadium Set For Tech

RUSTON (Special) — Work is under way on the construction of a football stadium at Louisiana Tech, the second phase in the building of an athletic complex at the college.

Terral Industries Inc., Farmerville, is contractor on the $1,612,214 project to include the football stadium and two practice fields at Tech.

The stadium is scheduled to be completed by Aug. 3, 1968. The first phase in the athletic complex project was site preparation work.

Other phases will include an athletic field house near the stadium, a track to encircle one of the football practice fields, a battery of tennis courts and a 3,000 seat facility for the present baseball field, along with lighting and dugouts for the teams.

Tech's new athletic complex will be located northwest of the main campus across the Illinois Central railroad. Under present plans, the stadium will be ready for use during the 1968-69 football season.

Interstate Highway 55 Is Dedicated

OSYKA, Miss. (Special) — A 26.5-mile section of Interstate Highway 55 was formally dedicated Friday.

The $12.3 million improvement included 18.8 miles in Louisiana and 7.7 in Mississippi.

Several hundred persons attended the dedication. Speakers included James W. Moore, vice-chairman of the Louisiana Board of Highways, and John D. Smith, Mississippi highway commissioner for the Southern District.

Moore, representing Gov. John J. McKeithen who could not be present, had said earlier that the Louisiana section was built at a cost of $9,829,724, and said it is the longest portion of an Interstate highway to be opened at one time in Louisiana.

The Mississippi portion was built at a cost of $2,500,000.

State Writers Included In Anthology

BATON ROUGE (Special) — Six Louisianians are among 36 Southern poets included in an anthology published by the Louisiana State University Press.

The book, "Southern Writing in the Sixites: Poetry," is a companion volumė to a book on fiction which was published by the LSU Press last fall. Both the fiction and poetry volumes were edited by John William Corrington and Miller Williams, former members of the LSU English department and now at Loyola University.

Louisiana poets whose work appears in the book are Ruth Laney, Baton Rouge; Ruth Dawson, a native of Boyce; Patricia Rachal, a native of Baton Rouge; Alvin Aubert, a native of Lutcher; Ted-Larry Pebworth, a native of Shreveport; and co-editor Williams of New Orleans.

Louisiana Draft Slated For July

NEW ORLEANS (Special) — The Director of Selective Service for Louisiana, Maj. Gen. Erbon W. Wise, announced this state has been called up on to furnish 266 men for induction during July.

This is about the same number called up for June and the entire group will be assigned to the Army.

Police Say Melee Just Another Day

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Police said Saturday an early morning incident in which some 50 Negroes stoned patrolmen in a slum area was just another Friday night."

They said that the incident shortly after Friday midnight was unplanned and that they expected no further outbreaks.

"It was just the work of a few drunken hoodlums," one officer said.

No one was injured in the 30-minute melee in which the crowd, angered by the arrest of four Negroes on a charge of strong-armed robbery, pelted police with rocks and bottles. Two officers were hit by the stones but were not hurt.

However, two patrol cars were damaged slightly and a fire at a furniture store in the area was caused by a gasoline bottle bomb, police said. The blaze was extinguished by police before firemen arrived.

The four persons arrested, two men and two women, were accused of beating and robbing a white gas station attendant shortly before midnight. Police said the attendant, Van Balzegar, had put his head under the hood of a car and two men slammed the hood repeatedly until he was unconscious. Baltzegar, who was also robbed of $4, was treated at a hospital and released.

Sgt. Paul Spivey denied the rock-throwing incident had any connection with three nights of racial violence earlier this week at Tampa, 25 miles to the east, across Tampa Bay.

The persons who threw rocks weren't organized, he said, "they were just looking for a reason. It wasn't planned. It was just a spur of the moment thing."

Meanwhile, Tampa authorities denied reports that a funeral was planned today for Martin Chambers, the 19-year-old Negro youth whose death last Sunday touched off the Tampa rioting.

Chambers' family could not be reached but a spokesman at the funeral home where the body was being kept said no arrangements had been made.

Chambers was shot in the back while fleeing police who wanted to question him about a burglarly.

Gov. Claude Kirk was scheduled to fly to Tampa Monday to present medals to several young Negroes who helped restore peace to the city. The governor said he would arrive in Tampa today.

Teen Drinking Under Attack

NEW ORLEANS (AP) —Vice squad officers and members of the Orleans Parish grand jury swept through more than 70 barrooms Friday night and early Saturday in a citywide attack on teen-age drinking.

"It was a shock effect type of thing," said a police spokesman. "The whole thing went off very fast and we believe it was very successful."

About 15 persons, including a 15-year-old and three 17-year-olds, were arrested during the three hours of raids.

Ten teams of officers, each including one grand juror and representatives from the district attorney's office, participated in the sudden raids.

Grand jurors were reported to have carried on their own special intelligence work prior to the raids.

Palestine Refuges Still Finds Himself The Victim

By DAVID MAZZARELLA

TEL AVIV Israel (AP) — The Palestine Arab refugee cast miserably adrift by the Arab-Israeli war of 1948 finds himself 19 years later again a victim of conflict beyond understanding — still unwanted, a problem to all sides, a negative factor in the bargaining for peace.

He and his family are among the world's most pathetic people. They and their kind were caught in the middle of the June 5-10 Middle East war and many once more set out to transplant again the uprootings of a past generation. Some moved farther away from the lands that once were their homes.

They are the people who were forced out or abandoned their holdings in Palestine when Israeli arms carved this nation out of the traditional Holy Lands of Jew, Christian and Moslem in 1948. They settled in crowded camps in Arab lands around the Israeli perimeter — some within heartache sight of their old homes.

Israel has consistently refused to pay compensation for seized Arab property but has noted that Arabs who chose to remain in Israel enjoyed rights alongside Israelis.

The Arab nations, beaten in the 1948 war, used the perimeter refugee camps as centers of agitation in their perennial wordy campaigns to destroy Israel. The United Nations undertook feeding and care of the estimated 1.3 million refugees on a budget that totaled more than $39 million for this year.

Then the six-day war of 1067 displaced in many cases and everywhere reduced what had seemed minimum security.

Winners again militarily the Israelis suddenly find themselves now with an estimated 574,000 refugees on their hands as unwelcome increment of their seizures of western Jordan and the Gaza Strip.

These refugees had lived in vast shanty towns with U.N food, shelter and minimal opportunities, with aid fed through the host countries of Jordan and Egypt.

Among the Arabs only Jordan had come out of the 1948 conflict with territorial gains — among them the great prize of Old Jerusalem, now lost by Jordan to Israel. But the biggest portion of Palestinian Arab refugees became Jordan's burden after that conflict, and many settled on Jordan's west bank of the Jordan River, another area now lost to Israel.

Jordan told the United Nations last midweek that an estimated 150,000 refugees had fled to Jordan from Israeli-occupied territory and many were forced out by Israeli soldiers. Israel maintains that the figure is greatly exaggerated.

Many in western Jordan fled their camps at the first burst of artillery fire and crossed the river to what is still Arab-held territory. Forty thousands of the 55,000 refugees living in the region's largest camp at Jericho left immediately, but soon thousands were streaming back, hoping their homes would still be there.

Israeli officials admit they have no policy yet on the refugee problem and don't foresee an easy solution. Temporary aid measures are in effect.

Much depends on whether the Israelis pull back from the positions they have captured. That is where the displaced figure in peace planning.

If the occupied territory becomes part of Israel there appears to be no choice for the refugees but to leave. One sometimes hears the comment that Israel should take the refugees, settle them and show them a better way of life.

But Israel is a country of only 2.8 million with an Arab minority that already runs over 200,000. If it were to take in all the 1.2 million Arabs now in Israeli-occupied lands, the cultural and social consequences would be tremendous.

"Israel would no longer be Israel," said one government official.

Many Arabs would have to leave, and the governments of Jordan and Egypt would have to carry the burden of resettling them.

The Israelis already have begun a bus service for Jordanians who want to leave the occupied area, but they say most of those who have taken advantage of it are not permanent residents but persons who found themselves by chance in the region when the fighting began and couldn't go back.

What the Israelis say they really want is a peace treaty with the Arab nations that would result in Israel settling for secure but not necessarily advanced boundaries in return for recognition of Israel's sovereignty and the refugees staying on the Arab side.

They say that under these circumstances a wide range of possibilities may be open to aid the refugees, including payment of long-sought compensation for lands the Arabs once inhabited here, and perhaps even Israeli aid in setting up the refugees on cooperative farms in Jordan.

The Israelis contend the Arab countries have created an artificial problem with refugees, placing them on border areas in squalid conditions as a reminder that their land was taken by Israel. As a result, political tensions maintain a high pitch.

"The Arabs don't want the refugees taken out of those camps," an official said. "Of all the Arab nations only Jordan gives them citizenship. But with a real peace treaty there would be no need for tensions and the refugees could be settled elsewhere."

Some of the displaced Arabs are militants. The Gaza city camp, an Israeli army officer said, was thick with armed men —including soldiers —after the city was taken.

"If the refugees remained with us for any length of time they would have to be treated well, much better than they are treated now," an Israeli said. "The people wouldn't stand for it any other way."

One civilian was said to have complained to authorities that the daily ration of one bottle of milk and one loaf of bread being distributed by the army to Arab families in western Jordan was miserably inadequate.

Improving the refugees' standard of living would be a costly business.

The United Nations Relief and Works Agency provides the refugees with mud and stucco homes, medical services, and a basic food ration of 1,500 calories per day. The agency also pays for teachers provided by the host country.

How closely Israel would work with the United Nations on the refugee situation is not clear. The Israelis are unhappy with the U.N. over the pull-out of the peacekeeping force in Gaza at the request of Egypt. And they have charged that the U.N. was being used — through the schools set up for refugees — for a hate Israel campaign fostered by the Arab nations.

TV Notes

NEW YORK (UPI) — What seemed like a strikeout for ABC when the network introduced "The Rat Patrol" series last fall, has turned into a two-season show. The World War II African desert war skein is now in production of next fall's episodes. Broadway star Alfred Ryder will appear in the first episode "The Darkest Raid."

NBC puts its half-hour summer series, "Sportsman's Holiday," devoted to hunting and fishing, back on the air June 18 for its third outing. Curt Gowdy again is the host.

Ed McMahon of the NBC "Tonight" show will do a bit of moonlighting—more accurately, sunlighting—this summer when he appears in a featured role in a motion picture entitled "The Incident," which will be filmed in New York. His film associates include Thelma Ritter, Jan Sterling, Gary Merrill, Mike Kellin and Jack Gilford.

Tad Mosel, Pulitzer Prize playwright of 1061 with "All the Way Home" and one of the top television writers when video plays were important some years ago, will be back on the air with an original drama for "CBS Playhouse." His script will be "The Fact of the Matter Is," dealing with a man's claim to privacy in the face of a community's curiosity to know all about him.

Blast Rips Pipeline

ADEN (UPI)—An explosion Friday night ripped through the British oil pipeline that feeds the harbor service for refueling ships. The blast followed refusal by the port workers' union to handle British and American ships and to load tankers from the two countries in protest against alleged "aggression" in the Arab-Israeli war. British troops killed three suspects in the wake of other explosions throughout Aden.

Guide To Good Reading

'Do Something' Books Are Vital

By FRANCES FLANDERS
Ouachita Parish Librarian

Following my new policy of discussing one type of book each week, today my column will deal with the new practical books in the library collection. These are the books that tell you how to do something, how to repair or how to make an object. They are known as the how - to - do - it type of books. When a person wants a book of this type, he wants it very much and expects to find it on the library shelves when he asks for it. For that reason, we have purchased several copies of each title, so that the patron will not have to wait for the book "What do You Think?" written by Alvin Schwartz is an introduction to public opinion and tells how it forms, how it functions and how you can influence it. "Job Strategy" by Allan Rood is a useful guide for the person who is looking for a job. It contains all sorts of hints on how to go about getting one. "Employment for the Handicapped" by Julietta K. Arthur is a most useful guide to a handicapped person who is looking for a job. "The Complete Estate Planning Guide for Business and Professional Men and Women and Their Advisers" is a book that many people have been looking for. The author is Robert Brosterman.

"How Business Economists Forecast" by William F. Butler contains much valuable information. "Real Estate Taxes and Urban Housing" by James Heilbrun is a very useful guide to the understanding of the tax structure. "Federal Service Entrance Examinations" by Harry Koch is a new and useful Civil Service Manual published by the Ken Books. Three other Civil Service manuals also prepared by Mr. Koch and published by the Ken-Books are "Advanced Promotional and Administrative Positions," "Civil Service Vocabulary and Grammar," and "Social Welfare Examinations." From Arco two new Civil Service Manuals prepared by David Turner are available. One is "Homestudy Course for Civil Service Jobs" and the other is "U. S. Park Ranger."

On a very personal plane are two new books: "The Plot Against the Patient" by Fred J. Cook and "How to Defend Yourself, Your Family and Your Home, A Complete Guide to Self Protection" by George Hunter. The first book discusses present conditions in hospitals and medical costs, while the second one gives valuable information on protecting yourself against intruders and criminals. In the field of education there is "Underachievers: How They Can be Helped" written by Dr. Benjamin Fine, an acknowledged leader in the field. "Understanding Physics" is a three volume set of books written by a leader in the field, "Isaac Asimov".

Ocee Ritch is the author of three very useful books "Chilton's Mustang Repair and Tune-up Guide," "Chilton's Honda Repair and Tune-Up Guide" and "Chilton's Motorcycle Trouble-Shooting Guide." Gardeners will be eager to see Claire Blake's "Greenhouse Gardening For Fun." There are several interesting new cookbooks, "A Snob in the Kitchen" by Simonetta, "Conspirator's Cookbook" by Century Downing, "The Best of Italian Cooking" by Mika Hazelton and "The Old Cook's Almanac" by Beatrice Vaughan. Businessmen will be interested in two new books "Managing For Results," a book for the executive by Peter J. Drucker and "Strategy For the Displaced Worker" by George P. Shultz.

There are three interesting new books for the homemaker and the arthitect. "House and Garden Book of Modern Houses and Conversions" which has excellent plans for repair and reconstruction of homes. W. J. Dunning is the author of "Home Planning and Architectural Drawing" and A. M. Watkins is the author of "The Complete Book of Home Remodeling, Improvement and Repair." For the sculptor there is a most interesting book, "Direct Carving in Stone" by Mark Batten. For sports enthusiasts there are two new books, "Games and Stunts for Schools, Camps and Playgrounds" by Margaret E. Mulac and "Mastering the Shotgun" by Richard Alden Knight.

Many of our patrons are devoted readers of mystery stories and for them there are nine new titles this week, which with duplicate copies come to 26 books. They are: "A Nameless Coffin" by Gwendoline Butler, "The Depths" by John Creasy, "Smiling the Boy Fell Dead" by Michael Delving, "The Passenger" by Elizabeth Fenwick, "The 9th Directive" by Adam Hall, "Evil is as Evil Does" by Rosemary Gatenby, "The Terrible Pictures" written by Ben Healey, "Flight From a Firing Wall" by Baynard Kendrick and "The Face of the Enemy" by Thomas Walsh.

I would like to remind you that the main library will not be open this afternoon because this is "Father's Day" and we do not open on holidays. It will be open again next Sunday from 2:00 to 5:00 p.m.

Enlists Advisers

SINGAPORE (UPI)—Singapore has enlisted the aid of Israeli military advisers to help train its fledgling army, it was officially revealed Saturday. Defense Minister Dr. Goh Keng Swee had an Israeli army colonel with him in the reviewing stand Saturday during a parade of civil servants newly trained in military warfare.

The exact number of Israeli military advisers has not been made public but they are believed to number about a dozen.

Palestine Refuges Still Finds Himself The Victim

By DAVID MAZZARELLA

TEL AVIV Israel (AP) — The Palestine Arab refugee cast miserably adrift by the Arab-Israeli war of 1948 finds himself 19 years later again a victim of conflict beyond understanding — still unwanted, a problem to all sides, a negative factor in the bargaining for peace.

He and his family are among the world's most pathetic people. They and their kind were caught in the middle of the June 5-10 Middle East war and many once more set out to transplant again the uprootings of a past generation. Some moved farther away from the lands that once were their homes.

They are the people who were forced out or abandoned their holdings in Palestine when Israeli arms carved this nation out of the traditional Holy Lands of Jew, Christian and Moslem in 1948. They settled in crowded camps in Arab lands around the Israeli perimeter — some within heartache sight of their old homes.

Israel has consistently refused to pay compensation for seized Arab property but has noted that Arabs who chose to remain in Israel enjoyed rights alongside Israelis.

The Arab nations, beaten in the 1948 war, used the perimeter refugee camps as centers of agitation in their perennial wordy campaigns to destroy Israel. The United Nations undertook feeding and care of the estimated 1.3 million refugees on a budget that totaled more than $39 million for this year.

Then the six-day war of 1967 displaced in many cases and everywhere reduced what had seemed minimum security.

Winners again militarily the Israelis suddenly find themselves now with an estimated 574,000 refugees on their hands as unwelcome increment of their seizures of western Jordan and the Gaza Strip.

These refugees had lived in vast shanty towns with U.N. food, shelter and minimal opportunities, with aid fed through the host countries of Jordan and Egypt.

Among the Arabs only Jordan had come out of the 1948 conflict with territorial gains — among them the great prize of Old Jerusalem, now lost by Jordan to Israel. But the biggest portion of Palestinian Arab refugees became Jordan's burden after that conflict, and many settled on Jordan's west bank of the Jordan River, another area now lost to Israel.

Jordan told the United Nations last midweek that an estimated 150,000 refugees had fled to Jordan from Israeli-occupied territory and many were forced out by Israeli soldiers. Israel maintains that the figure is greatly exaggerated.

Many in western Jordan fled their camps at the first burst of artillery fire and crossed the river to what is still Arab-held territory. Forty thousands of the 55,000 refugees living in the region's largest camp at Jericho left immediately, but soon thousands were streaming back, hoping their homes would still be there.

Israeli officials admit they have no policy yet on the refugee problem and don't foresee an easy solution. Temporary aid measures are in effect.

Much depends on whether the Israelis pull back from the positions they have captured. That is where the displaced figure in peace planning.

If the occupied territory becomes part of Israel there appears to be no choice for the refugees but to leave. One sometimes hears the comment that Israel should take the refugees, settle them and show them a better way of life.

But Israel is a country of only 2.8 million with an Arab minority that already runs over 200,000. If it were to take in all the 1.2 million Arabs now in Israeli-occupied lands, the cultural and social consequences would be tremendous.

"Israel would no longer be Israel," said one government official.

Many Arabs would have to leave, and the governments of Jordan and Egypt would have to carry the burden of resettling them.

The Israelis already have begun a bus service for Jordanians who want to leave the occupied area, but they say most of those who have taken advantage of it are not permanent residents but persons who found themselves by chance in the region when the fighting began and couldn't go back.

What the Israelis say they really want is a peace treaty with the Arab nations that would result in Israel settling for secure but not necessarily advanced boundaries in return for recognition of Israel's sovereignty and the refugees staying on the Arab side.

They say that under these circumstances a wide range of possibilities may be open to aid the refugees, including payment of long-sought compensation for lands the Arabs once inhabited here, and perhaps even Israeli aid in setting up the refugees on cooperative farms in Jordan.

The Israelis contend the Arab countries have created an artificial problem with refugees, placing them on border areas in squalid conditions as a reminder that their land was taken by Israel. As a result, political tensions maintain a high pitch.

"The Arabs don't want the refugees taken out of those camps," an official said. "Of all the Arab nations only Jordan gives them citizenship. But with a real peace treaty there would be no need for tensions and the refugees could be settled elsewhere."

Some of the displaced Arabs are militants. The Gaza city camp, an Israeli army officer said, was thick with armed men —including soldiers —after the city was taken.

"If the refugees remained with us for any length of time they would have to be treated well, much better than they are treated now," an Israeli said. "The people wouldn't stand for it any other way."

One civilian was said to have complained to authorities that the daily ration of one bottle of milk and one loaf of bread being distributed by the army to Arab families in western Jordan was miserably inadequate.

Improving the refugees' standard of living would be a costly business.

The United Nations Relief and Works Agency provides the refugees with mud and stucco homes, medical services, and a basic food ration of 1,500 calories per day. The agency also pays for teachers provided by the host country.

How closely Israel would work with the United Nations on the refugee situation is not clear. The Israelis are unhappy with the U.N. over the pull-out of the peacekeeping force in Gaza at the request of Egypt. And they have charged that the U.N. was being used — through the schools set up for refugees — for a hate Israel campaign fostered by the Arab nations.

TV Notes

NEW YORK (UPI) — What seemed like a strikeout for ABC when the network introduced "The Rat Patrol" series last fall, has turned into a two-season show. The World War II African desert war skein is now in production of next fall's episodes. Broadway star Alfred Ryder will appear in the first episode "The Darkest Raid."

NBC puts its half-hour summer series, "Sportsman's Holiday," devoted to hunting and fishing, back on the air June 18 for its third outing. Curt Gowdy again is the host.

Ed McMahon of the NBC "Tonight" show will do a bit of moonlighting—more accurately, sunlighting—this summer when he appears in a featured role in a motion picture entitled "The Incident," which will be filmed in New York. His film associates include Thelma Ritter, Jan Sterling, Gary Merrill, Mike Kellin and Jack Gilford.

Tad Mosel, Pulitzer Prize playwright of 1961 with "All the Way Home" and one of the top television writers when video plays were important some years ago, will be back on the air with an original drama for "CBS Playhouse." His script will be "The Fact of the Matter Is," dealing with a man's claim to privacy in the face of a community's curiosity to know all about him.

Blast Rips Pipeline

ADEN (UPI)—An explosion Friday night ripped through the British oil pipeline that feeds the harbor service for refueling ships. The blast followed refusal by the port workers' union to handle British and American ships and to load tankers from the two countries in protest against alleged "aggression" in the Arab-Israeli war. British troops killed three suspects in the wake of other explosions throughout Aden.

Guide To Good Reading

'Do Something' Books Are Vital

By FRANCES FLANDERS
Ouachita Parish Librarian

Following my new policy of discussing one type of book each week, today my column will deal with the new practical books in the library collection. These are the books that tell you how to do something, how to repair or how to make an object. They are known as the how - to - do - it type of books. When a person wants a book of this type, he wants it very much and expects to find it on the library shelves when he asks for it. For that reason, we have purchased several copies of each title, so that the patron will not have to wait for the book "What do You Think?" written by Alvin Schwartz is an introduction to public opinion and tells how it forms, how it functions and how you can influence it. "Job Strategy" by Allan Rood is a useful guide for the person who is looking for a job. It contains all sorts of hints on how to go about getting one. "Employment for the Handicapped" by Julietta K. Arthur is a most useful guide to a handicapped person who is looking for a job. "The Complete Estate Planning Guide for Business and Professional Men and Women and Their Advisers" is a book that many people have been looking for. The author is Robert Brosterman.

"How Business Economists Forecast" by William F. Butler contains much valuable information. "Real Estate Taxes and Urban Housing" by James Heilbrun is a very useful guide to the understanding of the tax structure. "Federal Service Entrance Examinations" by Harry Koch is a new and useful Civil Service Manual published by the Ken Books. Three other Civil Service manuals also prepared by Mr. Koch and published by the Ken-Books are "Advanced Promotional and Administrative Positions," "Civil Service Vocabulary and Grammar," and "Social Welfare Examinations." From Arco two new Civil Service Manuals prepared by David Turner are available. One is "Homestudy Course for Civil Service Jobs" and the other is "U. S. Park Ranger."

On a very personal plane are two new books: "The Plot Against the Patient" by Fred J. Cook and "How to Defend Yourself, Your Family and Your Home, A Complete Guide to Self Protection" by George Hunter. The first book discusses present conditions in hospitals and medical costs, while the second one gives valuable information on protecting yourself against intruders and criminals. In the field of education there is "Underachievers: How They Can be Helped" written by Dr. Benjamin Fine, an acknowledged leader in the field. "Understanding Physics" is a three volume set of books written by a leader in the field, "Isaac Asimov".

Ocee Ritch is the author of three very useful books "Chilton's Mustang Repair and Tune-up Guide," "Chilton's Honda Repair and Tune-Up Guide" and "Chilton's Motorcycle Trouble-Shooting Guide." 'All The Tress Of Paradise'

Tech Holds Rehearsal For Summer Musical

RUSTON (Special) — The cast, director-producer-composer-lyicist, and author of Louisiana Tech's summer musical production, "All the Trees of Paradise," held a special rehearsal recently at Tech's forestry lab cabin located on Lake D'Arbanne. The cabin, a part of the University's developmental plans, has proved to be an asset to the summer activities of various groups.

The purpose of the gathering was a reading of the play, a musical comedy with a whimsical attitude toward the founding of the lumber industry in North Louisiana. It is an original comedy written by Francis Irby Gwaltney, an assistant professor of English at Tech, and with music and lyrics composed by John J. Cooper, an associate professor of music, an his wife Marcia Lambert Cooper.

"All the trees of Paradise" represents Lousisiana Tech's first effort in the direction of original musical comedy written, composed, produced, and directed by its own faculty.

"This is the sort of thing I want to be seen on the University campus," Tech President F. Jay Taylor recently told the cast. "I'm particularly fond of the period of American history in which the story is set." The date of the story is 1867 and President Taylor, a history professor before becoming Tech's president, has published a book about that decade.

Enrollment Record Set At College

A record number of students enrolled for Northeast Louisiana State College's first 12-week summer session, according to figures announced by Dr. Lake Oxford, registrar.

A total of 3,091 students are enrolled for either of Northeast's two - six week summer terms or for both terms, Dr. Oxford said, an increase of 23.9 per cent over last year's total of 2,494 students who attended the college's nine - week term.

Of the 3,091 total, 2,879 are currently attending the first six - week term. Students registered for both terms on registration day June 1.

There are 543 graduate students attending summer school, an increase of 23.4 per cent over last year's total of 406.

As is usual in the summer term, women students outnumber males, 1,605 to 1,486.

Grand Jury Date Set On 4 Shootings

TALLULAH (Special)—A special session of the Madison Parish Grand Jury has been called for June 28 to hear evidence against four men being held here in connection with the fatal shootings of two men June 9.

The four being held in the Madison Parish Jail are Edward Grigsby, Harold Nevels, Melvin Hudson and Devon McNeese. They were charged by the sheriff's department with murder in connection with the deaths of Robert Weems and John Stephens. All six men were of Madison Parish.

The incident occurred on an abandoned stretch of U.S. 80, about five miles east of here between 10 p.m. and midnight on June 9, according to the sheriff's department.

Band Leader Workshop Set For Tech

RUSTON (Special) — Band leaders of area high schools Monday will begin attending a two-week workshop at Louisiana Tech which is designed to encourage the use of string instruments in school music programs.

The activity, supported by a $5,000 grant from the Louisiana Council of Music and Performing Arts, Inc., is known as the Governor's Honors Program in Music. Gov. John J. McKeithen is honorary chairman of the council's board of directors.

The Tech music department received the grant, which is under the direction of Joe G. Sheppard, associate professor of music.

Sheppard said the workshop's chairman will be Walter Minnicar of Shreveport. Others on the instructional staff are Roger Di Giulian of Monroe, Mrs. Elizabeth Martin of Monroe, Philip Kendall of Shreveport and John Kenney of Lafayette.

College credit in music will be offered to teachers who attend the Tech program.

The sponsoring council is a cultural and educational organization, whose primary purpose is to promote greater growth in the arts in Louisiana.

Mrs. Edwin H. Blum of New Orleans, president of the council, worked with state and federal governments on behalf of Tech to obtain funds for the project.

Dr. F. Jay Taylor, Tech president, commented that "the spendid work that is being done by Mrs. Blum and the Louisiana Council for Music and Performing Arts, Inc., will add considerable momentum to the music programs presently being conducted in Louisiana."

Dr. Marshall Bretz of the Tech faculty organized the Ruston chapter of the Louisiana Council for Music and the Performing Arts and it was through his work with Mrs. Blum and the council that the application for the grant initially was made.

Mrs. Leeves Of Tallulah Succumbs

TALLULAH (Special) — Funeral services will be at 2 p.m. today at First Baptist Church here for Mrs. Laura Gaines Leeves, 75, of Tallulah with the Rev. Clark W. Bell officiating.

Burial will be in Silver Cross Cemetery under direction of Crothers Funeral Home here.

She was a native of Rockwood, Tenn., and she had lived in Tallulah since 1905. Before moving to Tallulah she had resided at Millikins Bend. She was the daughter of the late Dr. and Mrs. George W. Gaines. Dr. Gaines was one of the first doctors in Madison Parish.

Mrs. Leeves was a member of the First Baptist Church.

Pallbearers will be Judge Cliff C. Adams, J. K. Post Jr., Edgar H. Lancaster Jr., Herbert Massey, Rufus T. Yerger, Warren Patrick, Robert N. Graves and J. C. Sherwin.

Honorary pallbearers will be all physicians and dentists in Tallulah and one physician from Vicksburg, Miss.

Sentimental Aid

CAIRO (UPI)—The weekly Akhbar el Youm suggested Saturday that engaged and married couples aid the Egyptian economy by donating their wedding rings to the government. It said the gold rings would help the government deal with a shortage of hard currency and would enable Eypt to better face a long time closure of the Suez canal and possible reductions in the tourist trade in the wake of the Mideast war.

LAKE PROVIDENCE (Special) — A package unit capable of producing 2000 KWH of electrical energy is being installed at the local light and water plant. Superintendent W. P. Key states that the unit should be ready for operation in three to four weeks.

On Dec. 8, 1966 the town council voted to purchase the dual fuel generating unit and auxiliaries from Fairbanks Morse at a cost of $298,860. Certificates of payment were issued to finance the installation and cost.

Manslaughter Charge Filed In Jonesboro

JONESBORO (Special) — A Jonesboro man, Calvin Gunn, has been charged with manslaughter in the fatal shooting of his brother, Billy E. Gunn, 42, also of Jonesboro, according to the Jackson Parish Sheriff's Department.

The shooting took place Tuesday night at the home of Calvin Gunn, the sheriff's department said. Dr. George E. Gibbons, acting coroner, said that Billy E. Gunn was pronounced dead on arrival at Jackson Parish Hospital at 11 p.m. Tuesday.

Death was attributed to multiple gunshot wounds, Dr. Gibbons said.

Grand Jury Date Set On 4 Shootings

TALLULAH (Special)—A special session of the Madison Parish Grand Jury has been called for June 28 to hear evidence against four men being held here in connection with the fatal shootings of two men June 9.

The four being held in the Madison Parish Jail are Edward Grigsby, Harold Nevels, Melvin Hudson and Devon McNeese. They were charged by the sheriff's department with murder in connection with the deaths of Robert Weems and John Stephens. All six men were of Madison Parish.

The incident occurred on an abandoned stretch of U.S. 80, about five miles east of here between 10 p.m. and midnight on June 9, according to the sheriff's department.

Band Leader Workshop Set For Tech

RUSTON (Special) — Band leaders of area high schools Monday will begin attending a two-week workshop at Louisiana Tech which is designed to encourage the use of string instruments in school music programs.

The activity, supported by a $5,000 grant from the Louisiana Council of Music and Performing Arts, Inc., is known as the Governor's Honors Program in Music. Gov. John J. McKeithen is honorary chairman of the council's board of directors.

The Tech music department received the grant, which is under the direction of Joe G. Sheppard, associate professor of music.

Sheppard said the workshop's chairman will be Walter Minniear of Shreveport. Others on the instructional staff are Roger Di Giulian of Monroe, Mrs. Elizabeth Martin of Monroe, Philip Kendall of Shreveport and John Kenney of Lafayette.

College credit in music will be offered to teachers who attend the Tech program.

The sponsoring council is a cultural and educational organization, whose primary purpose is to promote greater growth in the arts in Louisiana.

Mrs. Edwin H. Blum of New Orleans, president of the council, worked with state and federal governments on behalf of Tech to obtain funds for the project.

Dr. F. Jay Taylor, Tech president, commented that "the spendid work that is being done by Mrs. Blum and the Louisiana Council for Music and Performing Arts, Inc., will add considerable momentum to the music programs presently being conducted in Louisiana."

Dr. Marshall Bretz of the Tech faculty organized the Ruston chapter of the Louisiana Council for Music and the Performing Arts and it was through his work with Mrs. Blum and the council that the application for the grant initially was made.

Mrs. Leeves Of Tallulah Succumbs

TALLULAH (Special) — Funeral services will be at 2 p.m. today at First Baptist Church here for Mrs. Laura Gaines Leeves, 75, of Tallulah with the Rev. Clark W. Bell officiating.

Burial will be in Silver Cross Cemetery under direction of Crothers Funeral Home here.

She was a native of Rockwood, Tenn., and she had lived in Tallulah since 1905. Before moving to Tallulah she had resided at Millikins Bend. She was the daughter of the late Dr. and Mrs. George W. Gaines. Dr. Gaines was one of the first doctors in Madison Parish.

Mrs. Leeves was a member of the First Baptist Church.

Pallbearers will be Judge Cliff C. Adams, J. K. Post Jr., Edgar H. Lancaster Jr., Herbert Massey, Rufus T. Yerger, Warren Patrick, Robert N. Graves and J. C. Sherwin.

Honorary pallbearers will be all physicians and dentists in Tallulah and one physician from Vicksburg, Miss.

Sentimental Aid

CAIRO (UPI)—The weekly Akhbar el Youm suggested Saturday that engaged and married couples aid the Egyptian economy by donating their wedding rings to the government. It said the gold rings would help the government deal with a shortage of hard currency and would enable Eypt to better face a long time closure of the Suez canal and possible reductions in the tourist trade in the wake of the Mideast war.

Electrical Unit Installed In Area

LAKE PROVIDENCE (Special) — A package unit capable of producing 2000 KWH of electrical energy is being installed at the local light and water plant. Superintendent W. P. Key states that the unit should be ready for operation in three to four weeks.

On Dec. 8, 1966 the town council voted to purchase the dual fuel generating unit and auxiliaries from Fairbanks Morse at a cost of $298,860. Certificates of payment were issued to finance the installation and cost.

Manslaughter Charge Filed In Jonesboro

JONESBORO (Special) — A Jonesboro man, Calvin Gunn, has been charged with manslaughter in the fatal shooting of his brother, Billy E. Gunn, 42, also of Jonesboro, according to the Jackson Parish Sheriff's Department.

The shooting took place Tuesday night at the home of Calvin Gunn, the sheriff's department said. Dr. George E. Gibbons, acting coroner, said that Billy E. Gunn was pronounced dead on arrival at Jackson Parish Hospital at 11 p.m. Tuesday.

Death was attributed to multiple gunshot wounds, Dr. Gibbons said.

Long's Action Clouds His Future

WASHINGTON (AP) — By his abrasive defense of Sen. Thomas J. Dodd, D-Conn., against censure charges, Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., appears to have clouded his future in the Senate's Democratic leadership.

No colleague wants to be quoted publicly on Long's erratic, arm-waving efforts to convince the Senate that Dodd has done nothing wrong and nothing worse than some of his colleagues in the double billing of the Senate and private sources for travel expenses and in using testimonial dinner funds to pay personal bills.

But in the cloak rooms and in the oases around the chamber there is a shaking of heads and general agreement that the Louisiana senator has damaged his standing with the establishment to the extent that his future in the job of majority whip, or assistant leader, is in jeopardy.

Another possible aftermath of the Senate vote was underscored Saturday when Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy, D-Minn., said he will resign from the ethics committee if the Senate refuses to censure Dodd for using for personal purposes funds raised at testimonial dinners.

McCarthy said in an interview that such a vote would lead him to feel that the committee's months of work had gone down the drain.

"In that case I would feel that the Senate was not very serious about the matter of ethical conduct of its members. I couldn't justify continued service on it, in the light of my responsibilities to my other committees and the general work of the Senate," McCarthy added.

There have been hints that repudiation of the committee's findings in its first investigative case might not be limited to a single resignation.

On the eve of the debate Sen. Wallace F. Bennett, R-Utah, the vice chairman of the committee, said that even any major alteration of the pending resolution "would be an attack on our committee and its judgment."

Told of McCarthy's threat to resign from the committee, the Senate majority leader, Sen. Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., commented to a reporter, "I assume the committee feels it is on trial in this matter."

Mansfield said he hopes the Senate can reach a vote on the Dodd matter by Tuesday or Wednesday. He said he expects Dodd and chairman John Stennis, D-Miss., of the ethics committee to wind up the debate.

Long was elected to his assistant leadership post last January with strong Southern support and with President Johnson keeping hands off.

But a Southern senator, who voted for Long at that time, said that if there was a vote today, he fears the Louisianian would be dumped.

By tradition, Long's tenure lasts throughout the 90th Congress and he would not face a challenge to continue in the leadership until the beginning of the 91st Congress in January 1969. There could be a move next January to replace him, but it is not likely to materialize.

"We'll just have to suffer in silence until the next Congress, if he will let us have any silence," a Democratic senator said.

The irritation against Long seems to run deep. He aroused some bitterness among his colleagues by his on-again off-again tactics when he tied up the Senate for seven weeks earlier in unsuccessful efforts to save the income tax checkoff method of financing presidential campaigns.

The assistant leader's rough handling of his colleagues then and during the Dodd debate apparently has aroused the kind of resentment that takes a long time to wear off. Whether this will subside in 18 months may depend on his actions in that period.

The most asked question among his peers is, "What's Russell up to?" None of his colleagues has come up with any satisfactory answer for his flamboyant defense of Dodd.

Today Is Anniversary Of First American B52 Vietnam War Raids

SAIGON (AP) — Two years ago today, 30 of the Strategic Air Command's B52 jet bombers took off from Guam on a historic mission.

Their target, 2,400 miles away, was a suspected Viet Cong troop concentration and storage area 30 miles north of Saigon in the jungles of War Zone D, a Communist stronghold.

Two of the 18-million, eight-engine Stratofortresses collided and crashed at sea, killing eight crewmen. One of the other planes had to turn back en route. One that completed the flight had a malfunction preventing release of its bombs.

But the rest unloaded 300 tons of explosives on the Viet Cong positions, thus marking their first entry into a war. In this and scores of missions since, none has been lost to hostile action.

The big jets originally had been produced in the early 1950s to carry hydrogen bombs in case of a global nuclear war. They have a range of 12,500 miles. They fly at 650 miles an hour, pinpoint targets with electronic techniques.

Since the first raid two years ago, B52 pilots have logged 11,000 sorties — single combat flights — and unloaded 680,000 bombs totaling more than 200,000 tons of explosives.

Lingering Shadow - The Warren Report And Its Critics

The defendant is a book. So is the prosecutor. On trial is the Warren Commission Report, indicted by men whose own books find it guilty. Guilty of haste, Guilty of bias. Guilty of coverup. But neither critic nor commission is the jury. The public is. It, ultimately, will find where it thinks truth lies. But before considering its verdict, the public must ask for the facts. All the facts. Has it heard them—all of them? This is a report on the Warren Report and its critics.

PROLOGUE

The one slain has not died. Doubt will not let him. Doubt asks: "How did you fall? By whose hand?" Doubt has heard an answer— "Lee Harvey Oswald did it" —from doctors, lawyers, government; from police, friends, foe.

But doubt does not believe. Not quite.

Doubt knows the stature of the seven somber men of the Warren Commission, the breadth of their investigation, the depth of their report. But doubt is not appeased. Not quite.

Doubt has heard of the rifle, the shells, the fingerprints, the handwriting, the blunted bullets, the people who said they saw. But doubt is not assured. Not quite.

Why is this so?

Because doubt was denied the certainty of a trial. Because not all is known. Because not all is answered and may never be. And because there have been other seekers than the commission. They have seen what the commission did not see: different shots from different places; plots where the commission saw none; design where the commission saw chance; doubt where the commission saw fact.

IN WHAT CATEGORY?

Are these seekers scavengers, as Texas Gov. John B. Connally has called them? Or are they impassioned skeptics, refusing to take "it is most likely" for an answer. Are they creators of doubt? Or are they creatures of it? It is not always clear.

But if the Warren report is now doubted by many, it is because of the books written by these few seekers. If their number is small, their impact is not. The very existence of a printed page has an aura of authenticity above and beyond what it states. As the critics' books are increasingly read, they are increasingly believed. It is far easier to read one book from a shelf by a single critic than a whole shelf of books by a commission. So doubt takes root. The shelf lies fallow.

One could protest the whole argument is macabre-ghoulish. John F. Kennedy is gone. Talk won't bring him home. But this was a president. The people he led have a right - nay, an obligation - to know what struck him down, and why. It was not just a death in the hearts of the nation. It was murder at the heart of the national structure. Assassination unsolved is assassination at large, possibly free to strike again, certainly free to poison and corrode by suspicion, mistrust, fear.

So it is not mere curiosity, not just to add a footnote to history, to ask who killed Kennedy. To preserve the absolutely vital trust of the people in their leaders and institutions, the question must be answered. And stay answered.

The quest may be long. It is still asked: Who killed Lincoln? John Wilkes Booth is not the answer to all seekers. Nor is Lee Harvey Oswald. Lincoln, however, is for the archivist. The wound from Dallas is still red. It is tender to questions of who, or why. It may ever be.

Or, perhaps, the wound may have been salved all along. Perhaps the first investigation need be the last.

Or, perhaps, the pain of doubt may throb the less if one were to ask the doubters of their proof, ask of the askers: What have you found, what news can you bring us?

THE COMMISSION

The critics of the Warren Commission Report have made grave charges. They have made uncertainty. They have made money.

Have they made a case?

Have they proved that the most extensive murder investigation in the nation's history, directed by some of its foremost citizens, was wrong, dead wrong? Was the commission guilty of haste, of bias, of a coverup and Lee Harvey Oswald innocent of murder? Do events such as those recently in New Orleans indicate justice has not been done?

Polls suggest increasing numbers of people think so.

Book after carefully footnoted book say so. The Warren Report was once on the best-seller lists. Now Mark Lane's "Rush to Judgment" is.

Which has spoken truth? The critics say they have. And the commission has stood mute.

Mark Lane has said: "As long as we rely for information upon men blinded by the fear of what they might see, the precedent of the Warren Commission Report will continue to imperil the life of the law and dishonor those who wrote it little more than those who praise it."

And the commission has stood mute.

Leo Sauvage, in "The Oswald Affair," has said: "It is logically untenable, legally indefensible and morally inadmissable to declare Lee Harvey Oswald the assassin of President Kennedy."

And the commission has stood mute.

Edward Jay Epstein, in "Inquest," has said: "the conclusions of the Warren report must be viewed as expressions of political truth."

And the commission has stood mute.

It considered its first words, published in 27 volumes in the fall of 1964, to be its last. It has disbanded.

The public, in the jury box, may wonder at the commission's work. But it must also ask after the critics'. Is it true where the commission's is not. Are the critics innocent of the guilt they charge the commission: of distortion, sly selection of convenient fact, editing of truth?

Mark Lane wrote that the commission "cited evidence out of context, ignored and reshaped evidence and — which is worse — oversimplified evidence."

Did he?

Lane and the other critics have produced little in the way of new evidence. What they have done is use what the commission provides in its 26 volumes of testimony and exhibits —but to different conclusions. The critics' case rests on the same bedrock as the commission's — the Warren report.

How have the critics used, or abused, it?

On page 199 of the hardcover edition of "Rush to Judgment" Lane mentions an Illinois balistics expert, Joseph D. Nicol. Nicol testified before the commission on Oswald's pistol, the shells found at the scene of the slaying of officer J. D. Tippitt and bullets recovered from Tippitt's body.

Lane says Nicol "appeared less than certain," the shells came from Oswald's gun. There is a footnote in the passage referring to Volume III of the hearings, Page 511. Few readers have the volumes much less the time to check Lane's thousands of citations. A pity.

On Page 511, Volume III Nicol is asked by commission counsel Melvin Eisenberg if he was "certain in your own mind of the identification" of the shells.

Nicol replied: "Yes, the marks on the firing pin particularly were very definitive. Apparently this firing pin had been subjected to some rather severe abuse, and there were numerous small and large striations which could be matched up very easily."

DIFFERENT INTERPRETATIONS

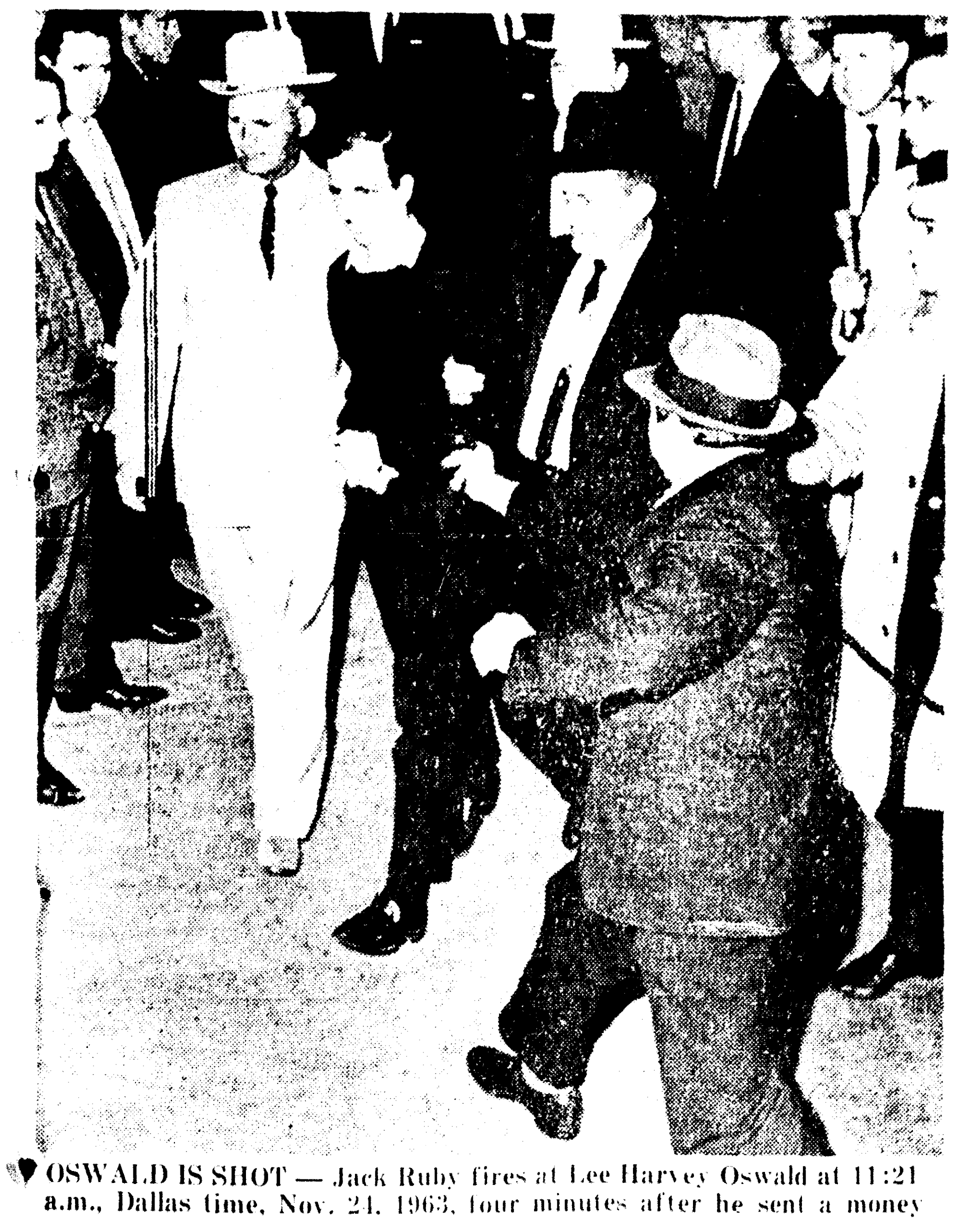
In his book Epstein questions the commission's conclusion that Oswald was a good shot. He mentions the shot at Maj. Gen. Edwin A. Walker which missed. He mentions the testimony of Nelson Delgado, a fellow Marine who had watched Oswald on the firing line. Oswald, Delgado testified, got a lot of "Maggie's drawers" — complete misses.

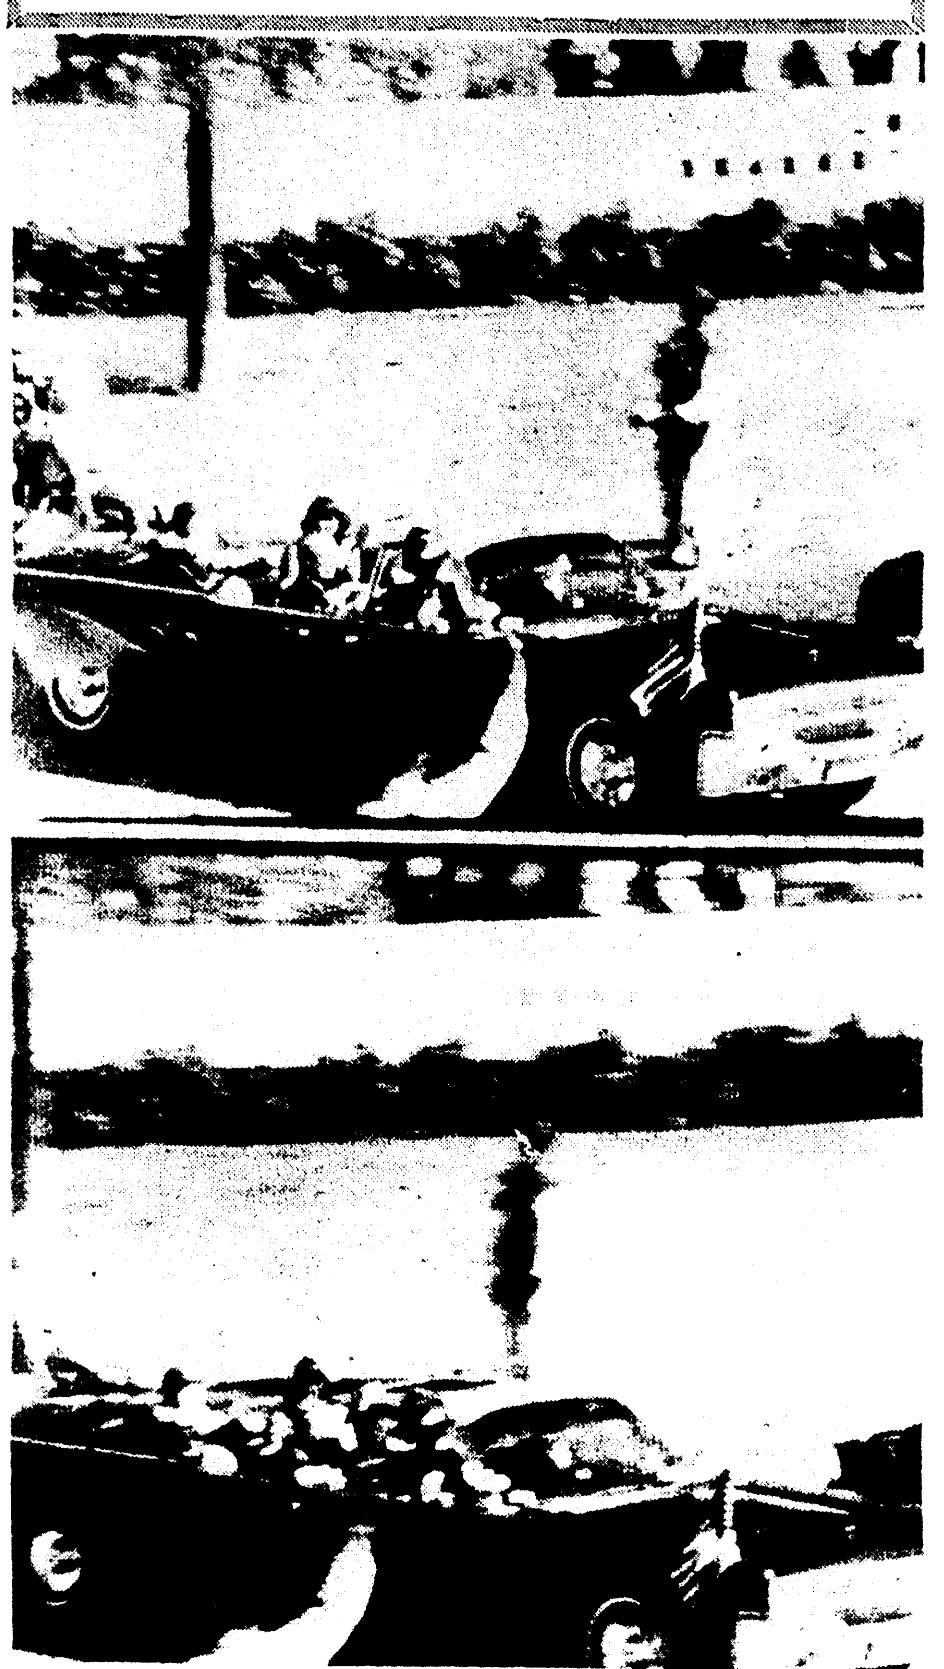
Delgado said something else.

On the rifle range he said Oswald "didn't give a darn. He just qualified. He wasn't hardly going to exert himself."

And Walker himself testified that his assailant "could have been a very good shot and just by chance the bullet hit the woodwork of a window. There was enough deflection in it to miss me."



OSWALD IS SHOT — Jack Ruby fires at Lee Harvey Oswald at 11:21 a.m., Dallas time, Nov. 24, 1963, four minutes after he sent a money order to one of his strippers from the Western Union office several minutes' walk away. The time interval is important in determining whether Ruby could have been involved in a plot to murder Oswald. (AP Wirephoto)



THE ZAPRUDER FILM—JFK is clearly wounded in Frame 230, top. Gov. Connally has turned forward but said later he did not think he had yet been hit. Commission, however, concluded that most likely the shot that hit JFK in the back also hit Connally. Connally says he was hit about time bottom frame was made. If so, however, all wounds he suffered came from one bullet. Position of his hand on car door would mean bullet hit his back at downward angle, changed direction to go through is wrist, then changed direction again to his left thigh. (Life Magazine—Copyright Time, Inc. via AP Wirephoto)

Don't these passages have some bearing on Oswald's marksmanship? Epstein evidently didn't think so. They didn't appear in his book.

Lane devotes several pages to the testimony of a former Dallas patroman, Napoleon J. Daniels, who said he saw a man resembling Jack Ruby enter police headquarters just before he shot Oswald. Lane takes issue with the commission for deciding Daniels' testimony "merits little credence."

But nowhere does Lane mention that Daniels was given a lie detector test. Daniels was asked if he had told the complete truth. He said yes. He was asked if he had deliberately made up any of his story. He answered no. The lie detector indicated both responses were "false." He was asked if he thought the person he saw enter the building was Jack Ruby. He said no. The test indicated this response was "true."

Is such evidence relevant to why the commission felt Daniels merited little credence? Lane evidently thought not.

One of Epstien's major points concerns the report of the autopsy on Kennedy. It concluded he had been shot in the back of the neck and the back of the head. An FBI reported submitted Dec. 9, 1963 contradicted the doctors in several important areas. Epstein makes much of the difference.

Inquiry by the writers, however, has established that the FBI wrote its original report before getting that of the doctors, which reached the agency Dec. 23, 1963. The FBI nonetheless stuck to its original version in a supplemental report Jan. 13, 1964. The agency felt duty bound not to alter a report by its agents - its customary policy — even though other reports might contain other facts.

CHOSE DOCTORS

It was the commission's task to choose between the FBI agents-laymen who reported what they had overhead the autopsy doctors say — and the doctors themselves who were making the one authorized examination and full report. It chose the doctors.

Shouldn't a critical appraisal of the commission have made such an inquiry? If Epstein did, it is not recorded.

Such lapses of the critics do not prove or disprove that Oswald murdered. But do these lapses, and many others to be cited later have some bearing on the objectivity the critics claim for themselves and deny the commission?

Did the critics, not the commission, "cite evidence out of context, ignore and reshape evidence?"

They did.

They have sat in judgment of the Warren Commission and found it wanting. But they are not judges. They have been prosecutors, making a case. Where fact has served, they have used it. Where it has not, they have not.

If they have read all the evidence, they have not quoted it all. They have taken evidence to form theories, to launch speculation. But they have not taken all the evidence.

They have said "perhaps" and "it seems" and "it is likely." But they must say more. They must say here is the evidence. And as yet, such evidence has not been forthcoming.

The irony of the Warren report is that it is based on the same evidence as the books that attack it. The commission provided in the 26 volumes of testimony and exhibits and additional matter in the National Archives the results of its investigation. And this is the heart of the critics' case. Their witnesses were the commission's. Their evidence was the commission's. But, again, not all of it.

A doctor said Kennedy was shot from the front. A man saw a puff of smoke from some trees ahead of the motorcade. The man, and others who saw smoke, were commission witnesses. The doctor, and others who thought Kennedy's throat wound was one of entrance, were commission witnesses. And they appear for the critics.

But not always in the critics' books does one read of the people who saw a rifle in the window of the Texas School Book Depository. Not always does one read the doctors' testimony that their first interpretation of Kennedy's wounds was not their final one.

The commission presented all the evidence it could find. The critics did not. As a group they have found the commission wrong on almost anything but the fact of assassination itself.

DENIES KENNEDY KILLED

One critic, George C. Thomson, doesn't even agree on that. He claims five persons were killed that day in Dallas. None of them was John F. Kennedy who Thomson says is alive and last winter attended Truman Capote's famous mask ball.

Space does not permit a footnote analysis of the critical books, although this was done with several of them in preparing this report. The notes made on Mark Lane's book alone amount to 50,000 words.

The intention, rather, is to focus on several key issues in contention and compare what the commission volumes said with what the critics said they said. Such comparison is often illuminating. Such a comparison may not convince the two - thirds of those questioned in a recent poll who said they doubted the commission's conclusions.

But, at the least, it may serve to have asked of the critics what they have asked of the commission - the facts. All of them.

Surely, one can fault the commission. Why didn't it call this witness, investigate more deeply in that area? When there was doubt, too often the commission spoke, needlessly, in more positive language than the facts allowed. Maybe it should have behaved more as a court than a commission.

Maybe it would have been better for Oswald to have been represented posthumously by counsel. Maybe the commission did have an eye on the political clock in turning in its report while some investigation was still under way. Maybe. Maybe. Maybe.

Without question the commission was not infallible. But it has too long been the target of critics who have not received the same scrutiny they gave the Warren report. This does credit to no one.

CRITICS CRITICIZED

But recently books have begun to appear attacking the critics, one by Charles Roberts of Newsweek magazine and another by Richard Warren Lewis, a magazine writer, and Lawrence Schiller, a photo - journalist.

And while the commission, albeit disbanded, has not spoken as an organization in its defense, many of its staff lawyers are now willing to do so. The writers interviewed 11 of the commission's 15 senior counsels.

They spoke of the contradicting eyewitnesses: those who thought the shots came from the Texas School Book Depository and those who didn't, those who didn't agree on what Tippitt's slayer was wearing or what he looked like.

Said one of the key members of the commission staff, "I know witnesses don't agree. If you have testimony that has uniformity, you have to look out for perjury."

The staff lawyers talked of some of the puzzling testimony that may never be resolved: the gunsmith who said he fixed a gun for someone named Oswald, the men who saw somone who looked like Oswald at a firing range, the persons who saw Oswald driving a car (the commission decided he couldn't drive), the woman in Dallas who said Oswald had been introduced to her as anti-Castroite who thought Kennedy should be shot, the people who thought they saw Oswald in Jack Ruby's night club.

"We were beneficiaries of fraud," said one of the senior attorneys without mentioning any specific examples. "The thing that shocked was who wanted to get involved in this great event. I do appreciate this can happen, but I thought people would have too much regard for the nature of what we were trying to do."

They talked of why the commission had not defended itself.

"If we were to answer the Lanes and the Sauvages, who would believe us? We had all kinds of suggestions. One was that Chief Justice Earl Warren, himself, come out in defense of the report.

"I don't think that means anything. If I were in the press, I wouldn't take this. You'd be fools if you did. But the press has an obligation to examine each book as it comes out and present it to the public as a searching for truth. And I think this might go on for 50 or 100 years. As long as people can make a quarter or a half-million dollars, we're going to have thes books.

"The mass media devote time to the Lanes and the Epsteins because it sells. Coming up with the establishment viewpoint doesn't have much mileage."

One staff member talked of the charge that the commission entered the investigation with a preconceived belief of Oswald's guilt. "Nonsense. We looked for the incredible as well as the credible. A lot of us were young lawyers. What greater feather could it be in our caps to prove the FBI was wrong?"

A senior counsel discussed the wisdom of having used an adversary system in the investigation, with a prosecution against and a defense for Oswald. "It would have been most unequal; the government all on one side. The report would have sounded like a brief for the prosecution.

"The staff was instructed to proceed in each instance on the possibility that Oswald was not involved. If they didn't want to proceed on that basis, the commission didn't want them to continue."

One lawyer, Wesley J. Liebeler, talked of Oswald as a marksman. "I took the position that you, well, you couldn't tell. The evidence that Oswald was able to shoot the President was that he did. He was lucky. Oswald had something in his sights that he knew he was never going to have again. I suspect he was up for it."

THE GRASSY KNOLL

Liebeler talked of the "grassy knoll" where Lane and others think shots came from, in part because people ran in that direction after the gunfire.

"Would people do this? Would you if you knew or thought someone was firing from there? It depends upon instantaneous reaction. I might run after the motorcade. I might run for cover. But I'm sure most people would run to get out of the way."

Joe Ball, another staff member, talked of the rifle found on the sixth floor of the depository building which police first identified as a Mauser. Later it was determined to be a Mannlicher - Carcano, an Italian weapon. Critics have implied this switch suggests the weapon was planted.

"Evidence shows that Seymour Weitzman who found the rifle never handled it and saw it from five feet away. Weitzman and Deputy Sheriff Eugene Boone both testified it seemed to them to be a Mauser.

"Let's make it clear. It IS a Mauser. It is built on German patents and the Mauser refers to the bolt action. But Lane never dares to go so far as to say that Weitzman or Boone in any way suggest this is not the gun which was found on the sixth floor and which has been found beyond all doubt to have fired the bullets."

This is not quite accurate. Lane, on Page 129 of the hard - cover edition of "Rush to Judgment," writes: "Boone, unlike Weitzman, was shown the Mannlicher - Carcano which he was unable to identify as the weapon Weitzman had found."

Boone said no such thing. He was shown the rifle and testified: "It looks like the same rifle. I have no way of being positive."

And why wasn't he positive? Because he said he never handled the rifle.

Ball talked of Epstein.

"He said I said Norman Redlich (one of the staff) used a 'turgid law review style.' I wrote Epstein's publisher and said I never used the word turgid in my life. I had to go to the dictionary and look it up.

"His statement that the lawyers worked as part-time consultants is a lie. I made my residence in Washington, D.C., permanently from January to July 1964. I was allowed to come to my home in Long Beach, Calif., once a month, and I did. Epstein quotes me 39 times and I didn't talk to that man for over half an hour and that was in a New York hotel lobby."

Nine of the 10 staff members quoted by Epstein that these writers interviewed charge him with misstatements. Several of them wrote letters of protest to his professor for whom he wrote what became "Inquest," as a master's thesis. The professor replied to one that "experience has shown that all too often when a person is shown his own words on paper he is inclined to state that he did not make those remarks."

Liebeler talked of finger and palm prints.

Oswald's palm print found on the rifle had little probative value, said Lane, "especially since local and federal police officials who issued inaccurate statements . . . were alone with Oswald and the weapon." The implication seems obvious.

"Well," said Liebeler, "we had to consider that in view of the performance of the Dallas Police Department, God rest their souls, were they so devilishly clever that they could have taken Oswald's print and planted it on the rifle and then taken it off again, or that they could have handed the rifle to Oswald to get the print? Of course, that would involve the judgment of Oswald, and do you think any one could have gotten Oswald to touch that rifle with a 10-foot pole? Of course not."

Lane also suggests it is "curious" that a Dallas police officer found a print on the rifle and "lifted" it off the weapon and that an FBI expert was unable to find any trace of the print on the gun several days later. The reader might also find it curious that Lane does not mention that subsequent FBI photographs of the lifted print showed minute gaps. They exactly matched nicks and pitting in the metal of the rifle from which the print was taken.

"He attempts to discredit the commission on hundreds of counts and to suggest such an enormous level of incompetence or dishonesty as to make his entire argument ridiculous. Had someone set out to design a commission of the incompetence Lane attributes to it, I doubt very seriously that it could ever have been done. Had he focused upon some weaknesses of the commission or the report, he might have had an area of argument."

THE STAFF AGREES

And the staff agrees there were weaknesses. Some were of omission: the commission most certainly could have called to testify witnesses who had only given statements to law officials. Some weaknesses were of commission: the report could easily have been more explicit on autopsy conflict. Some were inevitable: no one will ever be able to say with absolute certainty which bullet produced the fragments that were found in Kennedy's car or just what struck a bystander in the cheek or why Oswald did it or even, perhaps, if he did it unaided.

But to read the report, all of it, is to appreciate the depth of the investigation. Perhaps the commission should have had its own investigatory staff, regardless of the huge expense. But that is to suggest that the FBI and the Secret Service and other investigative agencies on which it relied were somehow not to be trusted.

Some critics suggest that they were not trustworthy: either subconsciously they sought to defend their professionalism by charitable treating evidence and witnesses or, far worse, they were involved in a superplot. If the latter were the case, it would mean, because of the intricacy and range of the investigation, a conspiracy of almost universal dimensions. As yet, there is no such evidence.

The report volumes themselves are an irritating thing. The first 15 are testimony, most of it taken by the commission staff. The remaining 11, which lamentably have no central index, are, as tidily packed as a beatnik's duffle bag. There is little or no order. A search for a specific statement or affidavit can take hours. One of the intense coterie of assassination buffs, Sylvia Meagher, has made an index of her own. But it, too, is fallible.

Yet the volumes, particularly the testimony, have a certain fascination. The range of characters is Tolstoyan. There is the President of the United States, the secretary of state. And a prostitute. There is a dashing, Russian-born oil man who knew both Oswald and Jacqueline Kennedy and whose amatory troubles with a Latin beauty are truly comic. And there is a laborer who told the august members of the commission in blunt terms of the locker room what he thought when he heard a rifle go off above his head in the depository building.

The critics are equally diverse. There is Harold Weisberg, a Maryland poultry man who was once National Barbecue King and claims his "Geese for Peace" campaign got the Peace Corps its first good publicity break. Weiseberg, who knows the report as an evangelist knows his Bible, has published two books, "Whiteweash" and "Whitewash II", is planning a third and thinks there were two Oswalds, one a look-alike stand-in.

Sauvage, a French journalist, argues with Gallic logic, no index and membership in the "perhaps" and "it seems" school. He raises some pointed questions in areas where uncertainty is and may remain forever.

Epstein makes much of the doctor-FBI autopsy discrepancy. It is answerable. He makes a criticism of many of the commission's methods. This is arguable. Both ways. But he raises his questions from fact in the commission volumes. Sometimes not all the facts. And sometimes not facts at all.

Lane — Lane's name predominates. He has made a movie based on his book and given numerous lectures here and abroad. At the very end of his book he files a disclaimer explaining why he accepted material contrary to the commission's conclusions and rejected material that supports it. So, on almost his last page, Lane identifies himself: he is a prosecutor, using the defendant commission's own witnesses and testimony. But not all of it.

"I haven't found anything of theirs that even makes a positive contribution," said one of the senior commission counsels of the critics.

One can assume the commission staff would stand by its work. Its statement should be considered with that in mind. One, however, should approach the critics with similar dispassion. Read them. But read what they criticize as well. If it is ironic that the report is their foundation, it is also convenient. One can read and compare.

Epstein presumably read. He found the commission had uttered "political truth." It sought to dispel rumor and keep America clean, not to determine fact.

But neither Edward Jay Epstein nor Earl Warren is the jury. The public is. And there is more to the case for the government than the public may have heard.

The public may know of the single bullet theory. It is a chain of circumstance, linked by assumptions. It is a chain that leads to Lee Harvey Oswald as the assassin. But it is vulnerable, as all chains. If one of its links breaks, it does not hold.

Lingering Shadow - The Warren Report And Its Critics

The defendant is a book. So is the prosecutor. On trial is the Warren Commission Report, indicted by men whose own books find it guilty. Guilty of haste, Guilty of bias. Guilty of coverup. But neither critic nor commission is the jury. The public is. It, ultimately, will find where it thinks truth lies. But before considering its verdict, the public must ask for the facts. All the facts. Has it heard them—all of them? This is a report on the Warren Report and its critics.

PROLOGUE

The one slain has not died. Doubt will not let him. Doubt asks: "How did you fall? By whose hand?" Doubt has heard an answer— "Lee Harvey Oswald did it" —from doctors, lawyers, government; from police, friends, foe.

But doubt does not believe. Not quite.

Doubt knows the stature of the seven somber men of the Warren Commission, the breadth of their investigation, the depth of their report. But doubt is not appeased. Not quite.

Doubt has heard of the rifle, the shells, the fingerprints, the handwriting, the blunted bullets, the people who said they saw. But doubt is not assured. Not quite.

Why is this so?

Because doubt was denied the certainty of a trial. Because not all is known. Because not all is answered and may never be. And because there have been other seekers than the commission. They have seen what the commission did not see: different shots from different places; plots where the commission saw none; design where the commission saw chance; doubt where the commission saw fact.

IN WHAT CATEGORY?

Are these seekers scavengers, as Texas Gov. John B. Connally has called them? Or are they impassioned skeptics, refusing to take "it is most likely" for an answer. Are they creators of doubt? Or are they creatures of it? It is not always clear.

But if the Warren report is now doubted by many, it is because of the books written by these few seekers. If their number is small, their impact is not. The very existence of a printed page has an aura of authenticity above and beyond what it states. As the critics' books are increasingly read, they are increasingly believed. It is far easier to read one book from a shelf by a single critic than a whole shelf of books by a commission. So doubt takes root. The shelf lies fallow.

One could protest the whole argument is macabre-ghoulish. John F. Kennedy is gone. Talk won't bring him home. But this was a president. The people he led have a right - nay, an obligation - to know what struck him down, and why. It was not just a death in the hearts of the nation. It was murder at the heart of the national structure. Assassination unsolved is assassination at large, possibly free to strike again, certainly free to poison and corrode by suspicion, mistrust, fear.

So it is not mere curiosity, not just to add a footnote to history, to ask who killed Kennedy. To preserve the absolutely vital trust of the people in their leaders and institutions, the question must be answered. And stay answered.

The quest may be long. It is still asked: Who killed Lincoln? John Wilkes Booth is not the answer to all seekers. Nor is Lee Harvey Oswald. Lincoln, however, is for the archivist. The wound from Dallas is still red. It is tender to questions of who, or why. It may ever be.

Or, perhaps, the wound may have been salved all along. Perhaps the first investigation need be the last.

Or, perhaps, the pain of doubt may throb the less if one were to ask the doubters of their proof, ask of the askers: What have you found, what news can you bring us?

THE COMMISSION

The critics of the Warren Commission Report have made grave charges. They have made uncertainty. They have made money.

Have they made a case?

Have they proved that the most extensive murder investigation in the nation's history, directed by some of its foremost citizens, was wrong, dead wrong? Was the commission guilty of haste. of bias, of a coverup and Lee Harvey Oswald innocent of murder? Do events such as those recently in New Orleans indicate justice has not been done?

Polls suggest increasing numbers of people think so.

Book after carefully footnoted book say so. The Warren Report was once on the best-seller lists. Now Mark Lane's "Rush to Judgment" is.

Which has spoken truth? The critics say they have. And the commission has stood mute.

Mark Lane has said: "As long as we rely for information upon men blinded by the fear of what they might see, the precedent of the Warren Commission Report will continue to imperil the life of the law and dishonor those who wrote it little more than those who praise it."

And the commission has stood mute.

Leo Sauvage, in "The Oswald Affair," has said: "It is logically untenable, legally indefensible and morally inadmissable to declare Lee Harvey Oswald the assassin of President Kennedy."

And the commission has stood mute.

Edward Jay Epstein, in "Inquest," has said: "the conclusions of the Warren report must be viewed as expressions of political truth."

And the commission has stood mute.

It considered its first words, published in 27 volumes in the fall of 1964, to be its last. It has disbanded.

The public, in the jury box, may wonder at the commission's work. But it must also ask after the critics'. Is it true where the commission's is not. Are the critics innocent of the guilt they charge the commission: of distortion, sly selection of convenient fact, editing of truth?

Mark Lane wrote that the commission "cited evidence out of context, ignored and reshaped evidence and — which is worse — oversimplified evidence."

Did he?

Lane and the other critics have produced little in the way of new evidence. What they have done is use what the commission provides in its 26 volumes of testimony and exhibits —but to different conclusions. The critics' case rests on the same bedrock as the commission's — the Warren report.

How have the critics used, or abused, it?

On page 199 of the hardcover edition of "Rush to Judgment" Lane mentions an Illinois ballistics expert, Joseph D. Nicol. Nicol testified before the commission on Oswald's pistol, the shells found at the scene of the slaying of officer J. D. Tippitt and bullets recovered from Tippitt's body.

Lane says Nicol "appeared less than certain," the shells came from Oswald's gun. There is a footnote in the passage referring to Volume III of the hearings, Page 511. Few readers have the volumes much less the time to check Lane's thousands of citations. A pity.

On Page 511, Volume III Nicol is asked by commission counsel Melvin Eisenberg if he was "certain in your own mind of the identification" of the shells.

Nicol replied: "Yes; the marks on the firing pin particularly were very definitive. Apparently this firing pin had been subjected to some rather severe abuse, and there were numerous small and large striations which could be matched up very easily."

DIFFERENT INTERPRETATIONS

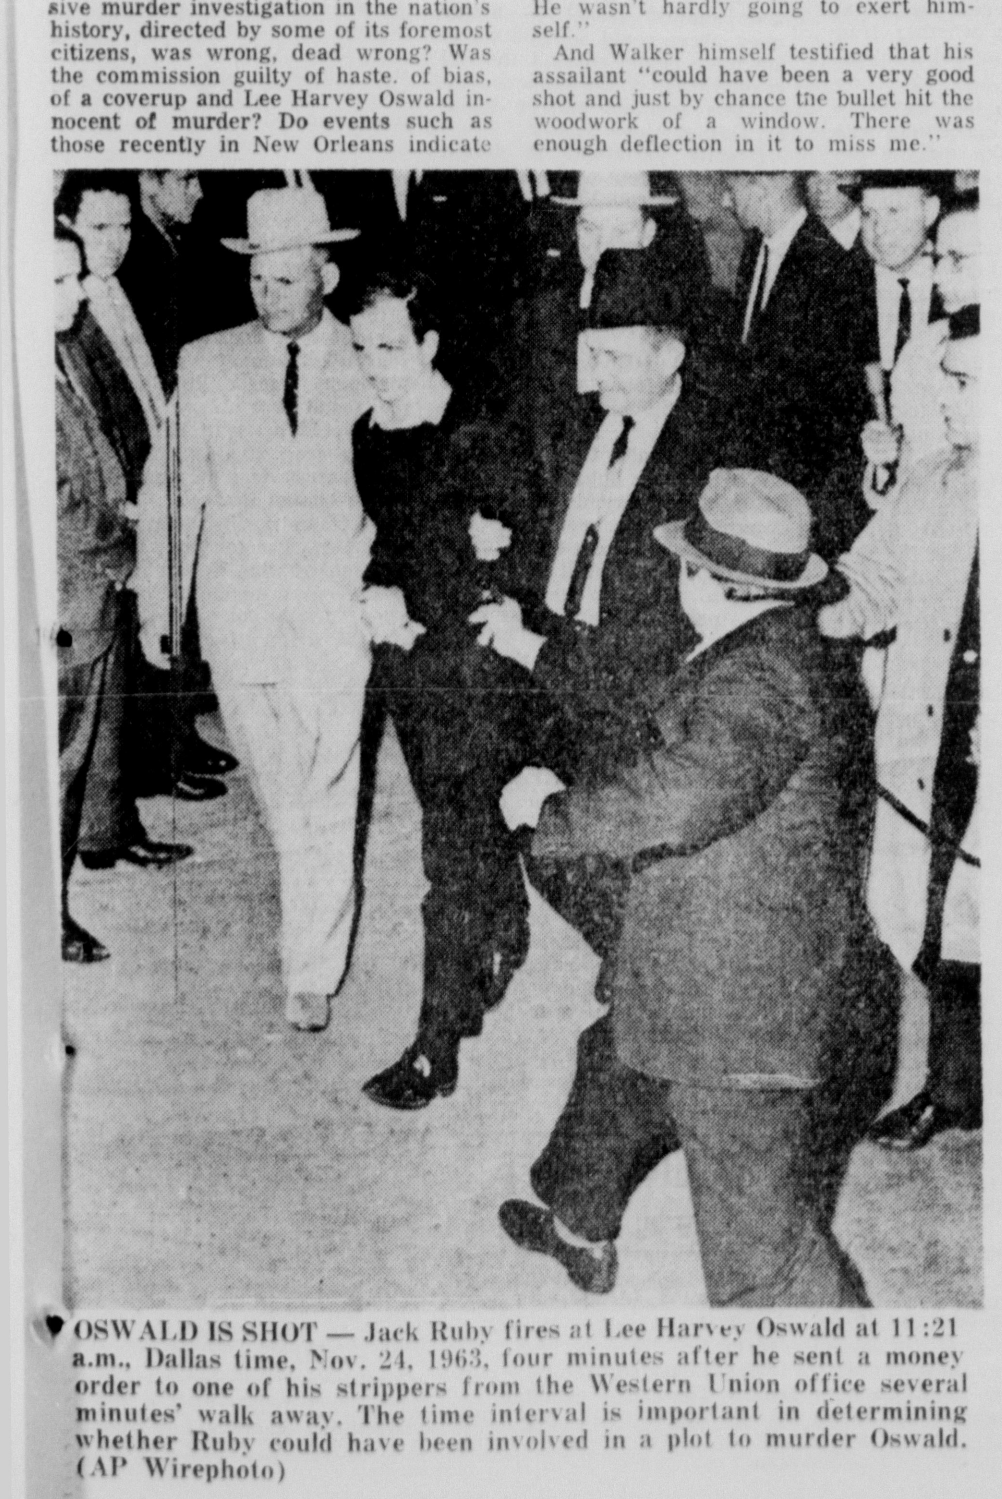
In his book Epstein questions the commission's conclusion that Oswald was a good shot. He mentions the shot at Maj. Gen. Edwin A. Walker which missed. He mentions the testimony of Nelson Delgado, a fellow Marine who had watched Oswald on the firing line. Oswald, Delgado testified, got a lot of "Maggie's drawers" — complete misses.

Delgado said something else.

On the rifle range he said Oswald "didn't give a darn. He just qualified. He wasn't hardly going to exert himself."

And Walker himself testified that his assailant "could have been a very good shot and just by chance the bullet hit the woodwork of a window. There was enough deflection in it to miss me."



OSWALD IS SHOT — Jack Ruby fires at Lee Harvey Oswald at 11:21 a.m., Dallas time, Nov. 24, 1963, four minutes after he sent a money order to one of his strippers from the Western Union office several minutes' walk away. The time interval is important in determining whether Ruby could have been involved in a plot to murder Oswald. (AP Wirephoto)

THE ZAPRUDER FILM—JFK is clearly wounded in Frame 230, top. Gov. Connally has turned forward but said later he did not think he had yet been hit. Commission, however, concluded that most likely the shot that hit JFK in the back also hit Connally. Connally says he was hit about time bottom frame was made. If so, however, all wounds he suffered came from one bullet. Position of his hand on car door would mean bullet hit his back at downward angle, changed direction to go through is wrist, then changed direction again to his left thigh. (Life Magazine—Copyright Time, Inc. via AP Wirephoto)

Don't these passages have some bearing on Oswald's marksmanship? Epstein evidently didn't think so. They didn't appear in his book.

Lane devotes several pages to the testimony of a former Dallas patroman, Napoleon J. Daniels, who said he saw a man resembling Jack Ruby enter police headquarters just before he shot Oswald. Lane takes issue with the commission for deciding Daniels' testimony "merits little credence."

But nowhere does Lane mention that Daniels was given a lie detector test. Daniels was asked if he had told the complete truth. He said yes. He was asked if he had deliberately made up any of his story. He answered no. The lie detector indicated both responses were "false." He was asked if he thought the person he saw enter the building was Jack Ruby. He said no. The test indicated this response was "true."

Is such evidence relevant to why the commission felt Daniels merited little credence? Lane evidently thought not.

One of Epstien's major points concerns the report of the autopsy on Kennedy. It concluded he had been shot in the back of the neck and the back of the head. An FBI reported submitted Dec. 9, 1963 contradicted the doctors in several important areas. Epstein makes much of the difference.

Inquiry by the writers, however, has established that the FBI wrote its original report before getting that of the doctors, which reached the agency Dec. 23. 1963. The FBI nonetheless stuck to its original version in a supplemental report Jan. 13, 1964. The agency felt duty bound not to alter a report by its agents-its customary policy — even though other reports might contain other facts.

CHOSE DOCTORS

It was the commission's task to choose between the FBI agents-laymen who reported what they had overhead the autopsy doctors say — and the doctors themselves who were making the one authorized examination and full report. It chose the doctors.

Shouldn't a critical appraisal of the commission have made such an inquiry? If Epstein did, it is not recorded.

Such lapses of the critics do not prove or disprove that Oswald murdered. But do these lapses, and many others to be cited later have some bearing on the objectivity the critics claim for themselves and deny the commission?

They did.

They have sat in judgment of the Warren Commission and found it wanting. But they are not judges. They have been prosecutors, making a case. Where fact has served, they have used it. Where it has not, they have not.

If they have read all the evidence, they have not quoted it all. They have taken evidence to form theories, to launch speculation. But they have not taken all the evidence.

They have said "perhaps" and "it seems" and "it is likely." But they must say more. They must say here is the evidence. And as yet, such evidence has not been forthcoming.

The irony of the Warren report is that it is based on the same evidence as the books that attack it. The commission provided in the 26 volumes of testimony and exhibits and additional matter in the National Archives the results of its investigation. And this is the heart of the critics' case. Their witnesses were the commission's. Their evidence was the commission's. But, again, not all of it.

A doctor said Kennedy was shot from the front. A man saw a puff of smoke from some trees ahead of the motorcade. The man, and others who saw smoke, were commission witnesses. The doctor, and others who thought Kennedy's throat wound was one of entrance, were commission witnesses. And they appear for the critics.

But not always in the critics' books does one read of the people who saw a rifle in the window of the Texas School Book Depository. Not always does one read the doctors' testimony that their first interpretation of Kennedy's wounds was not their final one.

The commission presented all the evidence it could find. The critics did not. As a group they have found the commission wrong on almost anything but the fact of assassination itself.

DENIES KENNEDY KILLED

One critic, George C. Thomson, doesn't even agree on that. He claims five persons were killed that day in Dallas. None of them was John F. Kennedy who Thomson says is alive and last winter attended Truman Capote's famous mask ball.

Space does not permit a footnote analysis of the critical books, although this was done with several of them in preparing this report. The notes made on Mark Lane's book alone amount to 50,000 words.

The intention, rather, is to focus on several key issues in contention and compare what the commission, volumes said with what the critics said they said. Such comparison is often illuminating. Such a comparison may not convince the two - thirds of those questioned in a recent poll who said they doubted the commission's conclusions.

But, at the least, it may serve to have asked of the critics what they have asked of the commission - the facts. All of them.

Surely, one can fault the commission. Why didn't it call this witness, investigate more deeply in that area? When there was doubt, too often the commission spoke, needlessly, in more positive language than the facts allowed. Maybe it should have behaved more as a court than a commission.

Maybe it would have been better for Oswald to have been represented posthumously by counsel. Maybe the commission did have an eye on the political clock in turning in its report while some investigation was still under way. Maybe. Maybe. Maybe.

Without question the commission was not infallible. But it has too long been the target of critics who have not received the same scrutiny they gave the Warren report. This does credit to no one.

CRITICS CRITICIZED

But recently books have begun to appear attacking the critics, one by Charles Roberts of Newsweek magazine and another by Richard Warren Lewis, a magazine writer, and Lawrence Schiller, a photo - journalist.

And while the commission, albeit disbanded, has not spoken as an organization in its defense, many of its staff lawyers are now willing to do so. The writers interviewed 11 of the commission's 15 senior counsels.

They spoke of the contradicting eyewitnesses: those who thought the shots came from the Texas School Book Depository and those who didn't, those who didn't agree on what Tippitt's slayer was wearing or what he looked like.

Said one of the key members of the commission staff, "I know witnesses don't agree. If you have testimony that has uniformity, you have to look out for perjury."

The staff lawyers talked of some of the puzzling testimony that may never be resolved: the gunsmith who said he fixed a gun for someone named Oswald, the men who saw somone who looked like Oswald at a firing range, the persons who saw Oswald driving a car (the commission decided he couldn't drive), the woman in Dallas who said Oswald had been introduced to her as anti-Castroite who thought Kennedy should be shot, the people who thought they saw Oswald in Jack Ruby's night club.

"We were beneficiaries of fraud," said one of the senior attorneys without mentioning any specific examples. "The thing that shocked was who wanted to get involved in this great event. I do appreciate this can happen, but I thought people would have too much regard for the nature of what we were trying to do."

They talked of why the commission had not defended itself.

"If we were to answer the Lanes and the Sauvages, who would believe us? We had all kinds of suggestions. One was that Chief Justice Earl Warren, himself, come out in defense of the report.

"I don't think that means anything. If I were in the press, I wouldn't take this. You'd be fools if you did. But the press has an obligation to examine each book as it comes out and present it to the public as a searching for truth. And I think this might go on for 50 or 100 years. As long as people can make a quarter or a half-million dollars, we're going to have thes books.

"The mass media devote time to the Lanes and the Epsteins because it sells. Coming up with the establishment viewpoint doesn't have much mileage."

One staff member talked of the charge that the commission entered the investigation with a preconceived belief of Oswald's guilt. "Nonsense. We looked for the incredible as well as the credible. A lot of us were young lawyers. What greater feather could it be in our caps to prove the FBI was wrong?"

A senior counsel discussed the wisdom of having used an adversary system in the investigation, with a prosecution against and a defense for Oswald. "It would have been most unequal; the government all on one side. The report would have sounded like a brief for the prosecution.

"The staff was instructed to proceed in each instance on the possibility that Oswald was not involved. If they didn't want to proceed on that basis, the commission didn't want them to continue."

One lawyer, Wesley J. Liebeler, talked of Oswald as a marksman. "I took the position that you, well, you couldn't tell. The evidence that Oswald was able to shoot the President was that he did. He was lucky. Oswald had something in his sights that he knew he was never going to have again. I suspect he was up for it."

THE GRASSY KNOLL

Liebeler talked of the "grassy knoll" where Lane and others think shots came from, in part because people ran in that direction after the gunfire.

"Would people do this? Would you if you knew or thought someone was firing from there? It depends upon instantaneous reaction. I might run after the motorcade. I might run for cover. But I'm sure most people would run to get out of the way."

Joe Ball, another staff member, talked of the rifle found on the sixth floor of the depository building which police first identified as a Mauser. Later it was determined to be a Mannlicher - Carcano, an Italian weapon. Critics have implied this switch suggests the weapon was planted.

"Evidence shows that Seymour Weitzman who found the rifle never handled it and saw it from five feet away. Weitzman and Deputy Sheriff Eugene Boone both testified it seemed to them to be a Mauser.

"Let's make it clear. It IS a Masuer. It is built on German patents and the Mauser refers to the bolt action. But Lane never dares to go so far as to say that Weitzman or Boone in any way suggest this is not the gun which was found on the sixth floor and which has been found beyond all doubt to have fired the bullets."

This is not quite accurate. Lane, on Page 120 of the hard - cover edition of "Rush to Judgment," writes: "Boone, unlike Weitzman, was shown the Mannlicher - Carcano which he was unable to identify as the weapon Weitzman had found."

Boone said no such thing. He was shown the rifle and testified: "It looks like the same rifle. I have no way of being positive."

And why wasn't he positive? Because he said he never handled the rifle.

Ball talked of Epstein.

"He said I said Norman Redlich (one of the staff) used 'a turgid law review style.' I wrote Epstein's publisher and said I never used the word 'turgid' in my life. I had to go to the dictionary and look it up.

"His statement that the lawyers worked as part-time consultants is a lie. I made my residence in Washington, D.C., permanently from January to July 1964. I was allowed to come to my home in Long Beach, Calif., once a month, and I did. Epstein quotes me 39 times and I didn't talk to that man for over half an hour and that was in a New York hotel lobby."

Nine of the 10 staff members quoted by Epstein that these writers interviewed charge him with misstatements. Several of them wrote letters of protest to his professor for whom he wrote what became "Inquest," as a master's thesis. The professor replied to one that "experience has shown that all too often when a person is shown his own words on paper he is inclined to state that he did not make those remarks." Experience showed this in Epstein's case, anyway.

Liebeler talked of finger and palm prints.

Oswald's palm print found on the rifle had little probative value, said Lane, "especially since local and federal police officials who issued inaccurate statements . . . were alone with Oswald and the weapon." The implication seems obvious.

"Well," said Liebeler, "we had to consider that in view of the performance of the Dallas Police Department, God rest their souls, were they so devilishly clever that they could have taken Oswald's print and planted it on the rifle and then taken it off again, or that they could have handed the rifle to Oswald to get the print? Of course, that would involve the judgment of Oswald, and do you think any one could have gotten Oswald to touch that rifle with a 10-foot pole? Of course not."

Lane also suggests it is "curious" that a Dallas police officer found a print on the rifle and "lifted" it off the weapon and that an FBI expert was unable to find any trace of the print on the gun several days later. The reader might also find it curious that Lane does not mention that subsequent FBI photographs of the lifted print showed minute gaps. They exactly matched nicks and pitting in the metal of the rifle from which the print was taken.

"He attempts to discredit the commission on hundreds of counts and to suggest such an enormous level of incompetence or dishonesty as to make his entire argument ridiculous. Had someone set out to design a commission of the incompetence Lane attributes to it, I doubt very seriously that it could ever have been done. Had he focused upon some weaknesses of the commission or the report, he might have had an area of argument."

THE STAFF AGREES

And the staff agrees there were weaknesses. Some were of omission: the commission most certainly could have called to testify witnesses who had only given statements to law officials. Some weaknesses were of commission: the report could easily have been more explicit on autopsy conflict. Some were inevitable: no one will ever be able to say with absolute certainty which bullet produced the fragments that were found in Kennedy's car or just what struck a bystander in the cheek or why Oswald did it or even, perhaps, if he did it unaided.

But to read the report, all of it, is to appreciate the depth of the investigation. Perhaps the commission should have had its own investigatory staff, regardless of the huge expense. But that is to suggest that the FBI and the Secret Service and other investigative agencies on which it relied were somehow not to be trusted.

Some critics suggest that they were not trustworthy: either subconsciously they sought to defend their professionalism by charitable treating evidence and witnesses or, far worse, they were involved in a superplot. If the latter were the case, it would mean, because of the intricacy and range of the investigation, a conspiracy of almost universal dimensions. As yet, there is no such evidence.

The report volumes themselves are an irritating thing. The first 15 are testimony, most of it taken by the commission staff. The remaining 11, which lamentably have no central index, are, as tidily packed as a beatnik's duffle bag. There is little or no order. A search for a specific statement or affidavit can take hours. One of the intense coterie of assassination buffs, Sylvia Meagher, has made an index of her own. But it, too, is fallible.

Yet the volumes, particularly the testimony, have a certain fascination. The range of characters is Tolstoyan. There is the President of the United States, the secretary of state. And a prostitute. There is a dashing, Russian-born oil man who knew both Oswald and Jacqueline Kennedy and whose amatory troubles with a Latin beauty are truly comic. And there is a laborer who told the august members of the commission in blunt terms of the locker room what he thought when he heard a rifle go off above his head in the depository building.

The critics are equally diverse. There is Harold Weisberg, a Maryland poultry man who was once National Barbecue King and claims his "Geese for Peace" campaign got the Peace Corps its first good publicity break. Weiseberg, who knows the report as an evangelist knows his Bible, has published two books, "Whiteweash" and "Whitewash II", is planning a third and thinks there were two Oswalds, one a look-alike stand-in.

Sauvage, a French journalist, argues with Gallic logic, no index and membership in the "perhaps" and "it seems" school. He raises some pointed questions in areas where uncertainty is and may remain forever.

Epstein makes much of the doctor-FBI autopsy discrepancy. It is answerable. He makes a criticism of many of the commission's methods. This is arguable. Both ways. But he raises his questions from fact in the commission volumes. Sometimes not all the facts. And sometimes not facts at all.

Lane — Lane's name predominates. He has made a movie based on his book and given numerous lectures here and abroad. At the very end of his book he files a disclaimer explaining why he accepted material contrary to the commission's conclusions and rejected material that supports it. So, on almost his last page, Lane identifies himself: he is a prosecutor, using the defendant commission's own witnesses and testimony. But not all of it.

One can assume the commission staff would stand by its work. Its statements should be considered with that in mind. One, however, should approach the critics with similar dispassion. Read them. But read what they criticize as well. If it is ironic that the report is their foundation, it is also convenient. One can read and compare.

But neither Edward Jay Epstein nor Earl Warren is the jury. The public is. And there is more to the case for the government than the public may have heard.

The public may know of the single bullet theory. It is a chain of circumstance, linked by assumptions. It is a chain that leads to Lee Harvey Oswald as the assassin. But it is vulnerable, as all chains. If one of its links breaks, it does not hold.

'Personal Identity'

If there is one characteristic, more than any other that distinguishes people of "the new generation" from their forebears, it is "personal identity." This "personal identity," labelled by the late President John F. Kennedy, as his "image," has gone beyond the stage of being a fad and has become a fetish.

In a book entitled "Ill-at-Ease in Compton," author Richard Elman pictures Compton, Calif., an unhearlded Los Angeles suburb, a middle and lower class, white and black community, which borders on Watts, another suburb formerly torn by violent race-rioting, as a window of future America. He shows "personal identity" as the outstanding urge, surpassing the desire for money or power.

After the Bay of Pigs debacle in Cuba, the then President John F. Kennedy was pictured as getting into the war in Vietnam as a means of improving his "image." Many believed his desire for an "image" was his undoing and that if he had considered justice and the fundamentals to be more important he could have made a good President.

Author Elman paints clearly the gap between Compton residents who arrived before World War II and those who have just been there for a while.

The younger group baffles the older residents because it is not committed to homes, jobs, neighborhoods or professions — the marks of security the older generation was raised on.

One leading liberal attorney in the city found he could not keep office help, white or Negro, even by offering wages of $150 a week, plus extras. They were not interested in jobs with a future, only in jobs to pay the rent.

Members of "the new generation," like the younger residents of Compton, were pictured by Elman as being "on the move, seeking a more personal identity than they have been led to expect from a profession or financial security."

"Personal identity," as a goal within itself, is a cruel illusion, a fantasy, a mirage on life's desert. Its sole motivation is selfishness — perhaps not more than in a desire for riches — and its ultimate end is as bodyless as a thin vapor. At least, in a desire for achievement, there is a goal that offers some substance and life. That is the difference between "personal identity" and the fundamentals — the substantial things of life, whether material or spiritual.

"The new generation's" desire for "personal identity," as a fad or fetish, is a transitory thing. The innate desire for homes, jobs, neighborhoods, professions and security, is as timeless as time itself. It will never die, although fads and fetishes will come and go.

The desire of "the new generation" for "personal identity" is most crudely and pathetically demonstrated by the "beatniks." In order to draw a little personal attention, which they think is "personal identity," they are willing to make themselves loathsome and disgusting.

It is difficult to determine whether our irresponsible government is born of people who want only "personal identity" or whether the government's irresponsibility bred people of this sort.

As in all idisyncracies, time is a great changer. Truths and fundamentals always survive. Since man is always searching, "the new generation" will always come up with some things new, a large part of which will be good and will mean advancement, but the things that are worthless will fall away. This includes the desire for "personal identity" as a goal within itself. Actually, only achievement brings "personal identity."

The Cool Hot Line

The "hot line" between Washington and Moscow was used for the first time during the early stages of the Middle East crisis. President Johnson and Premier Kosygin exchanged messages aimed at limiting the conflict; they succeeded, but not without considerable help from Gen. Moshe Dayan's lightning troops. Had the war not ended so quickly in the field, the hot line would have been put to an even greater test.

The line was installed four years ago so that the Super Powers could contact one another immediately in the event of a misunderstanding that might lead to war. The necessity for quick telephonic contact in such cases was made apparent in the Cuban missile crisis.

On the day Israeli and Arab armies clashed, Premier Kosygin sent the first Mideast message to the White House. He expressed a desire for peace in the area. Later President Johnson replied in kind, and also to reassure the Russians that American aircraft heading for the research naval ship Liberty — mistakenly bombed by the Israeli — were on a rescue mission, and not provocateurs.

Washington officials claim the use of the hot line helped to restrict the war. It also showed how eager both Super Powers are to avoid a head-on confrontation. No one knows for sure just how committed the Soviets were to helping their Arab clients, but judging from King Hussein's words following the defeat of the Jordan troops, certain "friends" let them down. He didn't name them, but no one supposed he was talking about Ethiopia or Madagascar.

The same may be said for Nasser, the hero of failure. Surely he must have wondered where his Russian friends were when Israeli planes and tanks knocked out the Egyptian air force and tank units. He should not have been surprised. The Russians will never enter a war to fight someone else's battle. They will fight to the last Arab, the last Chinese, to the last North Vietnamese, but not the last Russian — unless their homeland is attacked.

It is a fearful commentary on today's world that a telephone contact may mean the difference between peace and a global holocaust. After the Mideast experience, perhaps it should be renamed the "cool line." It allowed both Super Powers to keep their heads cool and to get diplomacy involved. Talking is always better than fighting, unless there's no other way.

Styles Change Fast

"When the Paris model is imitated in Podunk, it is usually safe to assume that Paris itself has adopted other styles." That is an apt quotation, and it applies to actions as well as clothes.

Minskirts apparently got their start in London but they have found their way into many podunks of many nations. That means they are on their way out.

The same thing could happen to student misconduct in the colleges.

Student populations making news with disorderly conduct at such institutions as Harvard, Chicago, California, Wisconsin and Dartmouth have been condemned by editorial writers from coast to coast. We joined in reproaching them.

Now there have been riotous expressions of misplaced energy at little places — Platteville and La Crosse, Wis., and Denison, Ia. Joe College does not have to be Ivy League to scuffle with police, burn the governor in effigy or destroy college property.

LBJ Wants To Aid Arab Nations

Persuading Congress May Be Difficult Matter

PRESIDENT Johnson has his work cut out persuading Congress to empower him to continue giving large amounts of surplus food and other economic aid to the Arab countries, particularly the five recent belligerents.

Not only is there strong bipartisan opposition to that, but determined efforts are underway to flatly and explicitly bar it in the President's $3.126 billion foreign aid authorization bill now under consideration in the Senate and House foreign affairs committees.

Two significant disclosures that shed revealing light on the administration's carefully unannounced foreign aid-dispensing operations are providing potent ammunition for this bipartisan drive. They are:

—BY THE SENATE Subcommittee on Foreign Aid Expenditures — that 45 million pounds of food are in the process of being shipped to the Arab countries, despite the fact they have severed diplomatic relations and are stridently echoing Russia's denunciations of the U.S.

—By Representative Delbert Latta, O., chairman of the Republican Task Force on East-West Trade — the Export-Import Bank, now seeking additional billions from Congress for more foreign loans, has $62,943,000 in outstanding commitments to the Arab countries.

Representative Vernon Thomson, R-Wis., member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, in spearheading the bipartisan opposition in that chamber against more aid to the Arabs, is vigorously pressing the following amendment to the multi-billion dollar foreign aid authorization measure:

"From and after the date of enactment of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1967, no assistance shall be furnished to any country whose armed forces have been aggressor participants in the Arab-Israeli armed conflict in the Middle East, nor to any country which has severed diplomatic relations with the United States on or after June 5, 1967, nor shall any sales be made to such countries under the Agricultural Trade Development Assistance Act of 1954."

If the Foreign Affairs Committee does not approve this provision, Thomson and his bipartisan supporters will wage a determined fight for it in the full House when this legislation is considered there.

STARTLING DETAILS — The Senate Subcommittee on Foreign Aid Expenditures, headed by Senator Ernest Gruening, D-Alaska, has uncovered the following backstage details on the 45 million lbs. of food still being shipped to the Arab countries despite their breaking off of diplomatic relations and violently denouncing the U.S.:

—This food is part of a 150.7 million lb. program for this fiscal year under the Food for Peace Act. Of this food, given the Arabs without charge, all but 45 million lbs. have been delivered and this is now in the pipeline.

—While the Middle East fighting was in progress, the State Department permitted a freighter loaded with 10,000 tons of wheat to sail for Iraq. Reason given by insiders is that State Department lawyers were at loggerheads over whether Iraq fell in the category of an "aggressor nation."

—On June 3, the day the war erupted, an agreement was signed with Sudan for the delivery of $11.45 million in agricultural commodities to be paid for in local currency that remains in that country. This food is being shipped to Sudan despite its termination of diplomatic ties with and excoriation of the U.S.

Representative Latta, in a memorandum to House members, listed the following Export-Import Bank commitments to the Arab countries:

Egypt, $25,906,000; Iraq, $14,038,000; Saudi Arabia, $8,979,000; Lebanon, $4,662,000; Syria, $3,407,000; Sudan, $3,258,000; Jordan $2,689,000. All but Saudi Arabia, Jordan and Lebanon have severed diplomatic relations.

WHAT THEY'RE SAYING — Representative Thomson is seeking an explanation for the continued shipment of large amounts of food to the Arab countries, but so far to no avail.

The former Wisconsin governor sent the following telegram to William Gaud, head of the Agency for International Development, that administers the multi-billion-dollar foreign aid program:

"I have been advised that agricultural commodities are still being shipped to the eight Arab nations that have broken diplomatic relations with the U.S., and that under an agreement signed June 3, 1967, $11.45 million in such commodities are being shipped to Sudan in spite of the break in diplomatic relations.

Senator Vance Hartke, D-Ind., was even more critical. He singled out the huge amounts of economic aid given India and Jordan, and demanded a far-reaching "re-thinking of our foreign aid policy."

Civil Rights? Just what are they? It has been stated repeatedly, and printed in the News-Star—World that Stokely Carmicheal has threatened several big cities with riots, and trouble and has even threatened to burn Washington, D. C. to the ground, if the Negro doesn't get all of his demands satisified. In the Morning World, dated June 5, 1967, Carmichael, "Black Powers" leading advocate remarked, "68 per cent of the population in Washington is black and Washington will be ours, lock, stock and barrel by any means necessary."

What has happened to our country? Twenty-five years ago, if a man had threatened our cities and people like this he'd have been prosecuted and very quickly. In the June 1st issue of the Morning World, J. Edgar Hoover stated that Martin Luther King has stated that big cities, especially like Cleveland, Chicago, New York and others, can expect BIG TROUBLE this summer.

Now, if a white man jokingly says something in a threatening manner about the president, he's immediately arrested and prosecuted, even though he may be only joking. If a man even mentions the word "bomb" on or near an airplane, he's immediately arrested. Yet these so-called civil rights Negroes threaten whole cities with riots and destruction in the papers and on TV and nothing is ever done about them. If I threatened to burn down our capital at Baton Rouge, what do you think would happen to me? People, you'd better wake up and speak up and do something before it's too late. Demand that our elected officials put a stop to this nonsense.

Stop King and Carmichael and Evers before we have a Civil War in this country, plus all this other mess we are already in overseas. By the way, I understand Carmichael isn't even a citizen of the United States. If nothing else, can't he be deported for making these threats? Can't we enact laws to protect our people and cities from these power mad Negro instigators who, after all, don't really care about helping anybody, except themselves.

Secretary of Defense McNamara may not be the real war boss, after all, but he shows a disposition and a certain kind of attitude that is upsetting.

Since he is so inconsistent and undependable, do you suppose there is a behind-the-scenes factor, or person, that is telling him what to do.

Sir, is Mr. Goldberg's suggestion of certain concessions in Vietnam so bad after a second look? Haven't we already made or allowed rights of Russian freedom or safe travel to North Vietnam points? If we can get something by openly declaring a policy we have been observing quietly, shouldn't we do so?

I wonder who really struck the first actual blows in the present Israel, Arab war. Listening to each side just about convinces one that they both struck about the same time, but this is simple guessing. What do you think? If Israel knew she was going to be attacked and she struck the first actual blow, would you call that aggression or a good military action?

Mr. Ralph Toledano has a very good article entitled "Middle East Policy Brings Up Sad 'Ifs'." I certainly agree with most of his statements and his conclusions that we, the U.S.A., have made our share of blunders, and the question was not whether trouble would break out in the Middle East, but when.

It does happen! A little gopher five inches long carried a trap three times his weight. Although he was determined, as well as strong, death was his tragic and final fate. To the Editor

I want to know why the people who have work to be done will only hire the boy who says he is a student or is going to college.

I know and you know it's pretty bad when a boy has to lie to get a job. Just being a student does not always mean they are good workers.

Of course, if they can go to college or stay in school, they won't be drafted.

My son has been turned down when he applied for work because he wouldn't lie and say he was a student. So he can't get a job to earn a living. Yet he can be drafted to go to fight while those people sit at home.

No wonder the kids think this is a rotten world to live in. So why won't some one realize the poor boys need the jobs to live, and give them a break. They may not be highly educated but that does not keep them from being good workers if given a chance.

Marshall Nomination Pleasing To Liberals

THE NOMINATION of Thurgood Marshall to the U. S. Supreme Court has produced cries of jubilation within the liberal left. On the conservative side of the fence, the prospect produces only a sharp dismay. Where goes the Constitution now?

The big news in Marshall's nomination, of course, is that he is the first Negro ever to be named to the court. In the larger view, the matter of his race is immaterial. The overriding fact is that in choosing Marshall to replace the retiring Tom Clark, President Johnson deliberately has moved to upset the rough balance of liberalism and conservatism that recently has prevailed upon the high tribunal. Next term, the forces of judicial restraint will be represented only by Harlan, Stewart, and White, with an occasional vote from Black. The judicial activists will be in full control.

To either view — conservative or liberal — the consequences of this replacement cannot be emphasized enough. When the founding fathers created the Supreme Court in the Constitution of 1787, it was widely supposed that the court always would be the weakest branch of the central government. The driving force of the court's first Mr. Justice Marshall — Chief Justice John — changed all that. By a process of evolution, culminating dramatically in the Warren Court, the tribunal has become the most powerful authority in the whole of our federal system. Its members, serving for life, are in a commanding position to shape national policies as they please. These days, they often are pleased to turn the Constitution into wax.

NOTHING THAT is said here is intended as criticism of Thurgood Marshall, the man. He is an immensely attractive fellow, as charming as his predecessor of 150 years ago. During a decade of bitter litigation on civil rights issues, Southern attorneys developed an abiding respect and affection for him. At one time, it might have been possible to oppose his nomination by reason of Marshall's total concentration on the narrow field of Negro rights, but his service on the U. S. Second Circuit and his experience as Solicitor General have removed that objection. Beyond cavil, he is qualified for the high court — more qualified, in truth, than many of his predecessors.

Neither is this intended to say that Clark was a wholly consistent conservative on the bench, or that members of the high court in every case follow predictable lines. Clark had his activist relapses, as in the reapportionment cases; he was not above using his high office to vent his personal spleen, as in the Toilet Goods Association case of May 22. Most judges jump the philosophical traces now and then.

Nevertheless, the briefest glance at key cases of this past term will make the point.

IN ADDERLEY v. Florida, Clark was one of five who voted to sustain the convictions of 32 Negro students who undertook to trespass upon the Leon County jail in the name of civil rights. The opinion put a brake on some of the excesses of racial demonstrations. How would Marshall have voted in that case?

This past Monday, in Walker v. Birmingham, Clark was one of five who voted to sustain the conviction of Martin Luther King for putting his own view of the law above the order of a court. Would Marshall have voted to send Martin Luther King to jail?

In Fortson v. Morris, Clark was one of five who upheld the power of the Georgia legislature to name a Governor when no candidate obtained a majority in the popular election. Nothing in the Fourteenth Amendment, said the majority, prevents a State from so ordering its own affairs. But Marshall's whole record demonstrates a doctrinaire view of the Fourteenth; he reads into "equal protection" all sorts of provisions the framers of that amendment never intended.

IN COOPER V. California, and again in McCraw v. Illinois, Clark was one of five who voted to strengthen the hand of police officials in securing evidence of crime. The two decisions served to bring some common sense back to the law of Fourth Amendment searches. How would Marshall have voted in these critically important cases? It is a fair surmise that he would have voted with Warren Douglas, Brennan and Fortas to reverse.

What the court and country will be getting in Marshall will be a more congenial Fortas, a less truculent Goldberg, a more disarming Brennan. The appointment is a great tribute to Marshall's own skill and industry; he is the grandson of a slave, the son of a Pullman waiter. No critic would wish to take away from the heartwarming success story that came to its climax Tuesday. All the same, in any conservative view of the workings of the court, the nomination is something worse than net no-gain. This was bad news — almost disastrous news — and we shall be living with it for the next ten years at least.

BARRY GOLDWATER

NO SOONER HAD war erupted in the Middle East than a disturbing rash of rumors erupted in Washington. That they could hang so persistently on the Washington grapevine is a sad commentary on the lack of confidence that has developed regarding the administration's public statements as opposed to private actions.

The rumors concerned certain "package deals" with which the administration would try to buy Soviet help in calling off the war against Israel — a war most agree could not and would not have begun without the full co-operation of the Soviets with Egypt's socialist empire builder, Gamal Abdel Nasser.

Despite variations in detail, the main content of the package rumors involved Vietnam: the United States would halt its bombing of North Vietnam in return for the Soviets halting their support of Nasser, thus forcing an end to the fighting.

SUCH A DEAL would have had two profound effects. First would be the obvious effect in Vietnam where a halt of the bombing would turn the war into an endless quagmire of jungle fighting. It would enable the Communists to continue the war at their own pace and on their own terms until they were ready to negotiate an end to it all — presumably on their own terms.

The second would be the major impact on the world at large. Should the Soviets have taken any action to cool the fighting, you can bet your boots they would have taken the most extravagant public credit for it, becoming overnight the world's greatest peacemaker.

DEAL OR NO DEAL, the Soviet Union stands to come out the winner in the Middle East war if for no other reason than having shattered every tie this nation had built up with the various Arab nations.

Their weapon was the cold, calculated, tactical decision that they would gladly see the nation of Israel wiped off the face of the earth if it would advance by a foot the plans of Communist conquest. This country, on the other hand, has attempted in all its diplomacy to avoid facing the blunt fact that the Arab nations have never been talking about anything less than exterminating Israel.

Our diplomacy, had it been realistic, would have openly acknowledged this and then have taken every firm step possible to bring the Arab world around to acknowledging, whether they hated us for the effort or not, that Arabs and Israelis would have to learn to live together and that an act of virtual genocide against Israel could not be tolerated.

AT THE SAME TIME, all legitimate Arab claims against Israel, as, for instance, the plight of the Palestinian refugees, would have to be faced with equal frankness.

Instead, the situation has been permitted to drift — with inept secret diplomacy substituting for open firmness. War has been the result.

It would be comforting to be able to scoff at all such rumors as a secret deal to gain Soviet aid in ending that war. That is difficult to do, however, when to this day the terms of the settlement of the Cuban missile crisis remain under a cloud and when, despite all official denials, the strange fact is that this nation did dismantle various of its missile bases after the Soviets took down its launchers in Cuba.

'Personal Identity'

If there is one characteristic, more than any other that distinguishes people of "the new generation" from their forebears, it is "personal identity." This "personal identity," labelled by the late President John F. Kennedy, as his "image," has gone beyond the stage of being a fad and has become a fetish.

In a book entitled "Ill-at-Ease in Compton," author Richard Elman pictures Compton, Calif., an unhearlded Los Angeles suburb, a middle and lower class, white and black community, which borders on Watts, another suburb formerly torn by violent race-rioting, as a window of future America. He shows "personal identity" as the outstanding urge, surpassing the desire for money or power.

After the Bay of Pigs debacle in Cuba, the then President John F. Kennedy was pictured as getting into the war in Vietnam as a means of improving his "image." Many believed his desire for an "image" was his undoing and that if he had considered justice and the fundamentals to be more important he could have made a good President.

Author Elman paints clearly the gap between Compton residents who arrived before World War II and those who have just been there for a while.

The younger group baffles the older residents because it is not committed to homes, jobs, neighborhoods or professions — the marks of security the older generation was raised on.

One leading liberal attorney in the city found he could not keep office help, white or Negro, even by offering wages of $150 a week, plus extras. They were not interested in jobs with a future, only in jobs to pay the rent.

Members of "the new generation," like the younger residents of Compton, were pictured by Elman as being "on the move, seeking a more personal identity than they have been led to expect from a profession or financial security."

"Personal identity," as a goal within itself, is a cruel illusion, a fantasy, a mirage on life's desert. Its sole motivation is selfishness — perhaps not more than in a desire for riches — and its ultimate end is as bodyless as a thin vapor. At least, in a desire for achievement, there is a goal that offers some substance and life. That is the difference between "personal identity" and the fundamentals — the substantial things of life, whether material or spiritual.

"The new generation's" desire for "personal identity," as a fad or fetish, is a transitory thing. The innate desire for homes, jobs, neighborhoods, professions and security, is as timeless as time itself. It will never die, although fads and fetishes will come and go.

The desire of "the new generation" for "personal identity" is most crudely and pathetically demonstrated by the "beatniks." In order to draw a little personal attention, which they think is "personal identity," they are willing to make themselves loathsome and disgusting.

It is difficult to determine whether our irresponsible government is born of people who want only "personal identity" or whether the government's irresponsibility bred people of this sort.

As in all idisyncracies, time is a great changer. Truths and fundamentals always survive. Since man is always searching, "the new generation" will always come up with some things new, a large part of which will be good and will mean advancement, but the things that are worthless will fall away. This includes the desire for "personal identity" as a goal within itself. Actually, only achievement brings "personal identity."

The Cool Hot Line

The "hot line" between Washington and Moscow was used for the first time during the early stages of the Middle East crisis. President Johnson and Premier Kosygin exchanged messages aimed at limiting the conflict; they succeeded, but not without considerable help from Gen. Moshe Dayan's lightning troops. Had the war not ended so quickly in the field, the hot line would have been put to an even greater test.

The line was installed four years ago so that the Super Powers could contact one another immediately in the event of a misunderstanding that might lead to war. The necessity for quick telephonic contact in such cases was made apparent in the Cuban missile crisis.

On the day Israeli and Arab armies clashed, Premier Kosygin sent the first Mideast message to the White House. He expressed a desire for peace in the area. Later President Johnson replied in kind, and also to reassure the Russians that American aircraft heading for the research naval ship Liberty — mistakenly bombed by the Israeli — were on a rescue mission, and not provocateurs.

Washington officials claim the use of the hot line helped to restrict the war. It also showed how eager both Super Powers are to avoid a head-on confrontation. No one knows for sure just how committed the Soviets were to helping their Arab clients, but judging from King Hussein's words following the defeat of the Jordan troops, certain "friends" let them down. He didn't name them, but no one supposed he was talking about Ethiopia or Madagascar.

The same may be said for Nasser, the hero of failure. Surely he must have wondered where his Russian friends were when Israeli planes and tanks knocked out the Egyptian air force and tank units. He should not have been surprised. The Russians will never enter a war to fight someone else's battle. They will fight to the last Arab, the last Chinese, to the last North Vietnamese, but not the last Russian — unless their homeland is attacked.

It is a fearful commentary on today's world that a telephone contact may mean the difference between peace and a global holocaust. After the Mideast experience, perhaps it should be renamed the "cool line." It allowed both Super Powers to keep their heads cool and to get diplomacy involved. Talking is always better than fighting, unless there's no other way.

Styles Change Fast

"When the Paris model is imitated in Podunk, it is usually safe to assume that Paris itself has adopted other styles." That is an apt quotation, and it applies to actions as well as clothes.

Minskirts apparently got their start in London but they have found their way into many podunks of many nations. That means they are on their way out.

The same thing could happen to student misconduct in the colleges.

Student populations making news with disorderly conduct at such institutions as Harvard, Chicago, California, Wisconsin and Dartmouth have been condemned by editorial writers from coast to coast. We joined in reproaching them.

Now there have been riotous expressions of misplaced energy at little places — Platteville and La Crosse, Wis., and Denison, Ia. Joe College does not have to be Ivy League to scuffle with police, burn the governor in effigy or destroy college property.

LBJ Wants To Aid Arab Nations

Persuading Congress May Be Difficult Matter

PRESIDENT Johnson has his work cut out persuading Congress to empower him to continue giving large amounts of surplus food and other economic aid to the Arab countries, particularly the five recent belligerents.

Not only is there strong bipartisan opposition to that, but determined efforts are underway to flatly and explicitly bar it in the President's $3.126 billion foreign aid authorization bill now under consideration in the Senate and House foreign affairs committees.

When the founding fathers created the Supreme Court in the Constitution of 1787, it was widely supposed that the court always would be the weakest branch of the central government. The driving force of the court's first Mr. Justice Marshall — Chief Justice John — changed all that. By a process of evolution, culminating dramatically in the Warren Court, the tribunal has become the most powerful authority in the whole of our federal system. Its members, serving for life, are in a commanding position to shape national policies as they please. These days, they often are pleased to turn the Constitution into wax.

NOTHING THAT is said here is intended as criticism of Thurgood Marshall, the man. He is an immensely attractive fellow, as charming as his predecessor of 150 years ago. During a decade of bitter litigation on civil rights issues, Southern attorneys developed an abiding respect and affection for him. At one time, it might have been possible to oppose his nomination by reason of Marshall's total concentration on the narrow field of Negro rights, but his service on the U. S. Second Circuit and his experience as Solicitor General have removed that objection. Beyond cavil, he is qualified for the high court—more qualified, in truth, than many of his predecessors.

Neither is this intended to say that Clark was a wholly consistent conservative on the bench, or that members of the high court in every case follow predictable lines. Clark had his activist relapses, as in the reapportionment cases; he was not above using his high office to vent his personal spleen, as in the Toilet Goods Association case of May 22. Most judges jump the philosophical traces now and then.

Nevertheless, the briefest glance at key cases of this past term will make the point.

IN ADDERLEY v. Florida, Clark was one of five who voted to sustain the convictions of 32 Negro students who undertook to trespass upon the Leon County jail in the name of civil rights. The opinion put a brake on some of the excesses of racial demonstrations. How would Marshall have voted in that case?

This past Monday, in Walker v. Birmingham, Clark was one of five who voted to sustain the conviction of Martin Luther King for putting his own view of the law above the order of a court. Would Marshall have voted to send Martin Luther King to jail?

In Fortson v. Morris, Clark was one of five who upheld the power of the Georgia legislature to name a Governor when no candidate obtained a majority in the popular election. Nothing in the Fourteenth Amendment, said the majority, prevents a State from so ordering its own affairs. But Marshall's whole record demonstrates a doctrinaire view of the Fourteenth; he reads into "equal protection" all sorts of provisions the framers of that amendment never intended.

IN COOPER V. California, and again in McCraw v. Illinois, Clark was one of five who voted to strengthen the hand of police officials in securing evidence of crime. The two decisions served to bring some common sense back to the law of Fourth Amendment searches. How would Marshall have voted in these critically important cases? It is a fair surmise that he would have voted with Warren Douglas, Brennan and Fortas to reverse.

What the court and country will be getting in Marshall will be a more congenial Fortas, a less truculent Goldberg, a more disarming Brennan. The appointment is a great tribute to Marshall's own skill and industry; he is the grandson of a slave, the son of a Pullman waiter. No critic would wish to take away from the heartwarming success story that came to its climax Tuesday. All the same, in any conservative view of the workings of the court, the nomination is something worse than net no-gain. This was bad news — almost disastrous news — and we shall be living with it for the next ten years at least.

NO SOONER HAD war erupted in the Middle East than a disturbing rash of rumors erupted in Washington. That they could hang so persistently on the Washington grapevine is a sad commentary on the lack of confidence that has developed regarding the administration's public statements as opposed to private actions.

The rumors concerned certain "package deals" with which the administration would try to buy Soviet help in calling off the war against Israel — a war most agree could not and would not have begun without the full co-operation of the Soviets with Egypt's socialist empire builder, Gamal Abdel Nasser.

Despite variations in detail, the main content of the package rumors involved Vietnam: the United States would halt its bombing of North Vietnam in return for the Soviets halting their support of Nasser, thus forcing an end to the fighting.

SUCH A DEAL would have had two profound effects. First would be the obvious effect in Vietnam where a halt of the bombing would turn the war into an endless quagmire of jungle fighting. It would enable the Communists to continue the war at their own pace and on their own terms until they were ready to negotiate an end to it all — presumably on their own terms.

The second would be the major impact on the world at large. Should the Soviets have taken any action to cool the fighting, you can bet your boots they would have taken the most extravagant public credit for it, becoming overnight the world's greatest peacemaker.

DEAL OR NO DEAL, the Soviet Union stands to come out the winner in the Middle East war if for no other reason than having shattered every tie this nation had built up with the various Arab nations.

Their weapon was the cold, calculated, tactical decision that they would gladly see the nation of Israel wiped off the face of the earth if it would advance by a foot the plans of Communist conquest. This country, on the other hand, has attempted in all its diplomacy to avoid facing the blunt fact that the Arab nations have never been talking about anything less than exterminating Israel.

Our diplomacy, had it been realistic, would have openly acknowledged this and then have taken every firm step possible to bring the Arab world around to acknowledging, whether they hated us for the effort or not, that Arabs and Israelis would have to learn to live together and that an act of virtual genocide against Israel could not be tolerated.

AT THE SAME TIME, all legitimate Arab claims against Israel, as, for instance, the plight of the Palestinian refugees, would have to be faced with equal frankness.

Instead, the situation has been permitted to drift — with inept secret diplomacy substituting for open firmness. War has been the result.

It would be comforting to be able to scoff at all such rumors as a secret deal to gain Soviet aid in ending that war. That is difficult to do, however, when to this day the terms of the settlement of the Cuban missile crisis remain under a cloud and when, despite all official denials, the strange fact is that this nation did dismantle various of its missile bases after the Soviets took down its launchers in Cuba.

This, too, is part of the credibility gap in Washington.

On The Defense

The Nashville (Tenn.) Tennessean stuck out its neck—or at least an editorial writer did—the other day in commenting on the dispute in the Los Angeles municipal court building.

The unhappiness developed when Judge Noel Cannon, a pretty blonde woman judge angered the city's male judges by holding a press conference to show women how to fight off male attackers.

A majority of the 52 male judges signed a resolution censuring the woman judge for seeking "personal publicity." Judge Cannon had shown the women how they could fight off male attackers by using hatpins, guns that squirt fluids, and even a derringer.

Said the Tennessean:

"It seems the male judges may not be so much concerned over the "publicity" as they are over the fact that Judge Cannon wore a mini-skirt during her demonstration. This could be disturbing to some old veterans of the bench but the mini-skirt probably was just a part of Judge Cannon's demonstration. Some women have to be shown how to attract a male attacker before getting a chance to fight him off."

HOW TRUE —Charles Spurgeon once observed: "It is not how much we have, but how much we enjoy that makes happiness."

Are You Superstitious?

Most people are superstitious in some form of another but a majority of them won't admit it.

For example, some people won't start a new job, or a trip on Friday because it is bad luck. Others won't walk under a ladder, while still others will back up and drive an extra five miles, if necessary, to avoid driving along a street where a black cat has crossed in front of them.

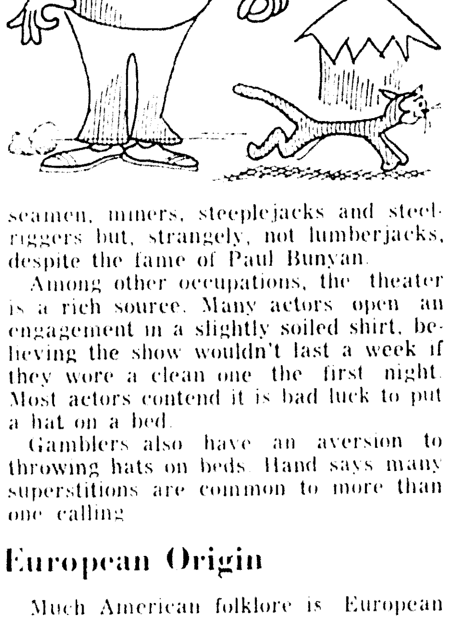
Another folklore or superstition is that if a prize fighter just entering the ring greets a friend, he will lose the match.

A Dictionary

Some of these titillating tidbits of superstitions are among hundreds of thousands gathered over a 20-year period by Professor Wayland H. Hands of the University of California at Los Angeles. The professor "who isn't superstitious—well, not much anyway," is preparing an American of beliefs and superstitions.

Such sayings circulate everywhere, among the literate and the illiterate.

Superstitions are strongest, Hand says, among those in hazardous occupations:



I'M NOT SAILING TODAY!

Among other occupations, the theater is a rich source. Many actors open an engagement in a slightly soiled shirt, believing the show wouldn't last a week if they wore a clean one the first night. Most actors contend it is bad luck to put a hat on a bed.

Gamblers also have an aversion to throwing hats on beds. Hand says many superstitions are common to more than one calling.

European Origin

Much American folklore is European in origin. Most beliefs and superstitions originating in the United States come from the South and New England. The general movement is from east to west. As in Europe and elsewhere, it changes as it moves.

The taboo against whistling, for example is said to go back to an incident at the time a gypsy tinker was forging nails for Christ's cross. Women whistled indifferently while the tinkers worked.

Whistling, in fact, is involved in many pieces of folklore. Hand thinks it probably implies whistling up the devil. Sailors and miners are among those who fear whistling the most, he says. Many newspapermen, even, maintain that whistling in the city room is bad luck.

At avalanche time in the Alps whistling is forbidden in some places because residents fear the vibrations will dislodge the snow.

The study of popular beliefs, Hand says, has opened a rich resource to the psychologist and other behavioral scientists. Additionally, medical doctors and pharmacologists have explored folklore in developing drugs—such as quinine—for modern day use.

Man's Mind

"A succession of psychologists from Wundt and Freud to the late Carl Gustav Jung have found folklore most useful, revealing as it does whole areas of man's mind that are not otherwise verbalized," said Hand.

Hand's project is "A Dictionary of American Popular Beliefs and Superstitions," believed to be the first nationwide collection of such material. His two decades of effort has produced some 400,000 entries, and he says completion is still five to seven years in the future.

The founder of UCLA's Center for the Study of Comparative Folklore and Mythology is a tidy white-haired man of 59 with a highly trained talent for tracing folk beliefs.

In addition to nearly a half million entries, Hand expects another 20,000 to 300,000 items from collaborators in the United States and Canada in the coming years.

Proper Setting

His dictionary's purpose will be to arrange this material in its proper setting and "to attempt to throw light on America's cultural history."

"If it is worth-while to travel to the ends of the earth to study the mental and spiritual life of primitive man, it would seem equally worth while to study the mental quirks and aberrations from which civilized man has never been able fully to rid himself," he said.

An examination of folksayings shows that most of them do not include any concrete reason for doing, or not doing, the things they recommend.

To this implied question, "Why?" Hand replies that persons who believe in folklore and superstition, in a sense believe in certain magical principles.

"When a man thinks he can get rid of warts by tying a string to a frog, he is believing that personal contact is the reason," he said. "In other words, he is practicing a form of contagious magic."

Hand himself is a student rather than a believer of folklore, but he tells a story about the time he took part of his valuable collection from the center to his home, which was far more vulnerable to fire.

Then he recalled reading that the presence of a calico cat reduces fire hazards. The Hand family pet is a calico cat.

With a grin, the doctor conceded that his cat did provide "a modicum of comfort."

A Newspaper

What's a newspaper?

Monica Potts, a student reporter, asked herself that question and gave her answer in the Southwest High School newspaper "Pioneer," at St. Louis.

A newspaper, began Miss Potts, "is a huge mass of closely-printed words produced on cheap paper."

But, she added, "this huge, heavy bulk of paper, the most ignored and most noticed item in today's world, is the greatest single happening in the history of free men."

"A newspaper is the voice of sorrow, war and death," wrote Miss Potts. "It is also the voice of liberty, integrity, democracy and life. More people are affected directly by its news than by any other source in existence."

She said newspapers "form the main network of communications over the earth."

"Because of their influence, people are comforted and given hope," she said. "Here in one little newspaper is the reflection of all the peoples ... their thoughts, opinions and actions.

"The printed word lives on forever, because it is imprinted, not just on paper, but on human lives."

Concluded Miss Potts:

The World's Week In Focus

Top Events Involve Dodd, Riots, Rulings

By OLAND SILK

ACTION of the Supreme Court, President Johnson, United States Senate, United Nations, and the White Hats of Tampa made big news last week.

Johnson's appointment of Thurgood Marshall to the high court, the first Negro so honored, had to be a major White House event, even though it stirred little excitement. The Senate Judiciary Committee will consider his nomination soon.

At the present time, Marshall is Solicitor-General, No. 3 man in the Justice Department. Before taking that post in 1965, he served as a circuit court judge in New York. Prior to that, he was for 23 years chief legal officer of the NAACP. It was his argument that prevailed in the 1954 desegregation decision, one of over 50 appearances before the Supreme Court. He lost only eight cases.

Marshall, 58, was named to succeed Justice Tom Clark who resigned because his son, Ramsey Clark, earlier this year was named Attorney General. The elder Clark wished to avoid a possible conflict of interest.

The Marshall appointment is Johnson's second to the nation's highest tribunal. Abe Fortas, a long - time crony and brilliant lawyer, was the first.

There was immediate speculation that Marshall's nomination might further liberalize the court. Others saw the beginning of a new political tradition. For many years the court has included one Roman Catholic and one Jew among its nine members. Marshall could become the first occupant of the "Negro seat", however informal the recognition might be. Still yet to be named is a woman justice. Wags in Washington said that due to Johnson's penchant for "firsts", had there not been a qualified Negro available, he would have pulled a woman jurist out of his Texas hat.

Decisions, Decisions

THE DARINGLY liberal — or disgustingly liberal, whichever you prefer — Warren Court closed shop until October after handing down a spate of decisions that literally provided something for everybody. Mainly, the decisions were libertarian as expected, but there was at least one surprise: it upheld contempt convictions of Rev. Martin Luther King and seven other civil rights leaders who defied a Birmingham city ordinance and court injunction by holding marches in 1963.

THE COURT handed down two libel decisions, one upholding the Associated Press against General Edwin Walker, and former Georgia Coach Wallace Butts against the Saturday Evening Post.

In the Walker case, the court broadened press defenses against libel harassment. It threw out a $500,00 judgement won by the former major general in a Texas Court. Walker claimed that the Associated Press maligned him in its reports of the Ole Miss-James Meredith confrontation in which he participated.

The AP reporter at the scene said that Walker "assumed command" of the crowd resisting the admission of Meredith to the university, and "led a charge of students against federal marshals." The mashals were on campus to see that an order by the U. S. Circuit Court in New Orleans that Meredith be admitted was carried out.

The unanimous decision held that AP had used reasonable care in its reports and showed neither malice nor incompetence. Under the doctrine laid down by the court in 1964, a public official must prove actual malice or knowing, reckless disregard for the truth before he can recover damages. The 1967 court stretched the "public official" doctrine to include "public figures" who participate in newsworthy public events.

"To me," Warren wrote for the majority, "differentiation between "public figures" and "public officials" and adoption of separate standards of proof for each has no basis in law, logic, or First Amendment policy."

THE decision — and the vote — was quite different in the Post-Butts case. Splitting 5-4, the court upheld the $460,000 judgment won by Coach Butts on the ground that:

"The evidence is ample to support a finding of highly unreasonable conduct constituting an extreme departure from the standards of investigation and reporting ordinarily adhered to by responsible publishers."

IN SHORT, the Post was slipshod and malicious in its expose article charging that Butts outlined Georgia's plays to Paul "Bear" Bryant, Alabama football coach, eight days before the 1962 Georgia-Alabama game. Alabama won the game, 35-0.

In other court decisions: — A New York law that permitted electronic "bugging" and a Virginia ban on racially mixed marriages were swept off the books. Outgoing Justice Clark gave the 5-4 decision on the former, declaring that the law was without adequate judicial supervision or protective procedures even though New York police just get a judge's permission for electronic surveillance. Dissenting Justice Byron White said Clark's opinion was "not in tune with facts of the real world," and a need for modern tools to combat crime. The decision affects eavesdropping laws in five other states.

The ban on laws prohibiting marriages between Negroes and whites, while stemming from a couple's suit in Virginia, will affect similar laws in 15 other states, including Louisiana.

— A criminal suspect must have the assistance of a lawyer if he is placed in a lineup for pretrial identification. The ruling was not retroactive, so persons whose convictions are final cannot invoke the decision on their behalf even though they were put through the now declared unconstitutional procedure. The vote was 6-3.

— Sixth Amendment rights were made obligatory on the states. In the 8-1 decision, it was held that states may not arbitrarily deny an accused the right to put witnesses on the stand to aid in his defense.

Crime In The Streets

A STATISTIC from the FBI and race riots in several cities shocked the nation.

J. Edgar Hoover reported that serious crime in the United States jumped 20 per cent in the first three months of the year, the biggest surge in the last nine years.

SENATOR TOM Dodd, left, looks somewhat tired here as he and Senator Russell Long, self - appointed defender of the Connecticut Democrat, pause during the censure debate. Dodd is on the carpet for diverting campaign funds to private use. A final vote was delayed until next week.

NO geographic region could point its finger at any other — the upsurge was distributed evenly among all sections, large and small cities, surburban and rural areas. Robbery was up 32 per cent, murder, 23 per cent, forcible rape, 8 per cent, aggravated assault, 15 per cent.

Hoover pleaded for better law enforcement machinery and fuller support of government and citizens alike.

The statistics will doubtless be posted in police departments across the nation. For many policemen, it may take a few days to get around to reading them, so busy are they battling rioters.

Trouble erupted in Tampa, Florida, Cincinnati and Dayton, Ohio, and Prattville, Alabama. In some cases, the carnage was unbelievable, the violence second only to the Watts rebellion.

ONLY brief resumes are possible:

Riots broke out in Tampa last Sunday, triggered by the fatal shooting of a 19-year-old Negro by a white policeman. (The officer was later exonerated in a justifiable homicide decision). Negroes beat and robbed whites. One white couple unwittingly drove into the troubled area and were set upon "like vultures." They were kicked and beaten, the woman stripped of her clothing before being released. Rampaging Negroes burned and looted Tampa's sprawling slums, battling with more than 1,000 heavily armed police and National Guardsmen. A whole block of white owned stores were razed.

Republican Governor Claude Kirk was hard-pressed to find a solution. Fortunately, one was found Wednesday when white-helmeted Negro peace troops — most of them teen-agers — patroling in threes, restored calm. The National Guard and Tampa police were held in check. The White Hats were given 30 minutes to get results.

"Cool it. We don't need any more trouble," they shouted as they walked unarmed into the streets.

THE CROWDS cooled it as regular shifts were set up to keep the situation under control. Many of the White Hats were numbered among the agitators Monday and Tuesday. But by Wednesday, they were on the side of law and order. The county Sheriff, Malcom Beard, had nothing but praise for them. They will be honored in a special ceremony arranged by Gov. Kirk.

Racial Disorder

Cincinnati went through four straight nights of racial disorders. A hefty National Guard force, armed with machine guns, rifles and bayonets, accompanied police on patrol in the predominately Negro areas. The situation was worsened by the appearance of H. Rap Brown, chairman of SNCC, who issued a "declaration of war" on the ghetto section. He also demanded that Negroes jailed in connection with the rioting — over 300 — be freed.

ARSONISTS burned five buildings in Dayton Friday. Firemen and police battled the roving bomb tossers, mostly young Negroes. The National Guard was not called out to assist.

In Prattville, Alabama, police and Negroes shot it out and 11 persons were arrested, including Stokely Carmichael, ex-chairman of SNCC. Carmichael and Rap Brown kept things boiling with inflammatory statements and "black power" threats.

Aside from "long, hot summer" indoctrination, the main problem in the big cities was joblessness among the ghetto youth. Idle most of the day and night, they provide agitators with a highly malleable, potentially murderous product to manipulate.

THE SENATE was embroiled all week long with debate on whether or not Senator Tom Dodd, Connecticut Democrat, should be censured for double billing on seven travel jaunts and diverting $116,000 of testimonal dinner funds to his personal use.

The double billing charge, by Friday, appeared to be on its way out. Separate votes may be taken on it and the pseudo - thievery count.

Dodd defended himself before the full Senate, challenging his old friend, Senator John Stennis, chairman of the Ethics Committee which investigated Dodd's activities. Stennis insisted Dodd had brought dishonor to the body, called the most exclusive club in the world.

IN AN impassioned appeal, Dodd asked his fellow senators to stand up if he had ever lied, cheated or broken his word to them. No one moved. He asked God to strike him down if he were not telling the truth about his financial dealings. Nothing happened.

The grey - haired lawmaker's chief points were 1) that he had made 80 trips, of which only seven were in dispute. His double billing on those were due to carelessness on his part and the poor bookkeeping of his former aide, Michael O'Hare. 2) that the testimonal funds — over $400,000 — were meant as gifts to be used as he saw fit.

Stennis accused Dodd of collecting money "under all the banners and trappings of campaign contributions" and then spending it indiscriminately for his own purposes. Such use of testimonial funds was "wrong on its face", he declared, and therefore tended to bring dishonor upon the Senate itself.

It was noted that $9,000 was used to improve Dodd's Connecticut home. His son was given $4,500 out of campaign funds. Country Club dues, race track limousine service, and household expenses were included in the list of suspect outlays.

PARTICULARLY damaging to Dodd's case was a "Dear Lyndon" letter in which he thanked the President for helping him raise campaign funds at a testimonial affair. Both Johnson and Vice President Humphrey made speeches at Dodd dinners; they have said that they thought they were helping to defray campaign expenses.

The 60-year old Dodd was defended by self-appointed counsel, Senator Russell Long, son of the Kingfish, who lately appears to copying his dad's tactics. He roamed the aisles for six hours, shaking his fist, telling stories, making repetitious and often irrelevant statements. Dodd did not seem too happy about it all, but Long pressed on.

HE SUGGESTED that the double billing — that is, billing the Senate and private groups for air fare — best be forgotten. On the diversion of funds charge, Long claimed that Dodd had paid more of his personal funds for political purposes than vice versa. Besides, no one ever bothers to inquire about where testimonial funds go.

By RICHARD TYLER
World Staff Writer

Northeast Louisiana shared a question with the world last week: Where do we go from here? Neither had any quick answers.

Israel, a fighting little nation with a lot of what America used to have more of, had set the world, accustomed to endless negotiation, on its ear with a quick victory over Nasser. It was a defeat, meanwhile, that of the Fifth District sales tax, that had area leaders reviewing prospects.

The proposed one-cent levy, designed chiefly to raise school, parish and municipal pay, stumped the experts in losing district-wide in a light turnout by nearly 7,000 votes. Almost half that number were lost in Ouachita Parish, where but six of 50 precincts went for the tax. Favorable majorities were won only in five of 14 parishes.

The week's post-mortems of the June 10 vote produced no pubblic speculation on reasons for the loss, so erratic was the pattern. Here, parishes due to receive more in proceeds than they would pay voted "No." There, parishes due to receive less voted "Yes."

NEEDS REMAIN

What was most obvious from subsequent developments was the fact that the needs the tax was intended to answer remained unanswered. Moreover, they can't continue to be. "Something has to be done," said Bobby Wilson of West Monroe, a teacher leader in the tax's support. "It can only get worse," said Henry Taliaferro of Jonesville, head of the sales tax district, recalling passage the week before of a levy to boost teacher pay in Caddo Parish. "West Monroe must have a source of additional revenue," said Mayor Bert Hatten, underscoring the word "must."

The election represented the first test of a district-wide sales tax at the polls. Quickly, talk began of a second attempt with the same measure. Several changes also were reported under discussion. A parish tax was reported as a possibility. But the situation remained fluid as the week closed, except in Monroe where Mayor W. L. Howard moved swiftly to meet the city's "most critical" requirements.

With general pay raises to all employees no longer an immediate prospect, Howard gathered department heads, still working within the confines of last year's budget, and told them further cuts will be needed. Expenses, he said, are being trimmed to the "bare bone" in order to set the base pay of police and firemen permanently at $400 per month and to hire 25 new police officers.

With a police force already 14 men understrength, due largely, he said, to insufficient pay, Howard listed an 85 to 90 man department the absolute minimum to be flexible in possible emergencies. Approximately $250,000 would be needed to achieve the cited pay and employment level and, the mayor was emphatic, "something will have to give." Several somethings probably.

An indication of the thinking being marshalled to meet the problem came Friday with disclosure of the possibility of creating a new supervisory position. The reins from all public works projects would come directly into this office, with its holder reporting in a straight line to the city's elected officials. Howard felt such an arrangement, through fuller and broader usage of available personnel and equipment, might save from $40,000 to $50,000 a year.

Other avenues also apparently were and are being explored to meet the need in consultation with all departments, as well as with the city Utilities Commission.

SIMPLE SUMMATION

Readers who will repeat slowly to themselves the two words "Civic Center" will have simply summed up a great deal of what Monroe was talking about last week. That $5.5-million facility, headed by its introverted director William B. Lillyman (Bill thrives on such descriptions), walked through the lines of at least four stories — one of which detailed a third delay in completion.

The City Council, meeting Tuesday, granted contractor Jesse F. Heard and Sons a new extension of 46 days, pushing completion of the three buildings back to Aug. 1. In announcing the arrangement to delay full occupancy from June 16, officials guaranteed no corresponding delay in the center's planned Labor Day weekend dedication and opening.

Characterized essentially as the lesser of two evils, the agreement permits city takeover and commencement of equipping of each building as its is completed. The conference hall, in fact, was occupied Thursday by the center's permanent staff, moving from temporary offices at City Hall.

The city's choice apparently boiled down to assessing a $200 per day penalty on the contractor until Aug. 1, in which case none of the buildings could be occupied until all were done, or forfeiting the penalty and making do with residence one building at a time. The first alternative, the mayor said, in all probability would have forced postponement of the center's opening and cost more in unfulfillable contracts with various shows, not to mention stacked up seat and equipment, than the penalty would produce.

At the same meeting, the Civic Center's premiere season got a boost with announcement of a three-show Broadway series coming to Monroe, underwritten by local businessman James A. Noe. Coming on Oct. 25-26, Dec. 7-8 and Feb. 2-3 are the road versions of, in order, "The Impossible Years," "Holly, Dolly" and "The Roar of the Greasepaint, the Smell of the Crowd." Season tickets go on sale July 1.

A further special announcement of the week set July 2 as the date for dedication of the center's $100,000 Symphonic Color-Fall fountain display, which has undergone construction and testing for the past five weeks. The word from the Tuesday meeting listed the date as June 30, but later notice of a conflict with the Miss Louisiana Pageant, running June 28-July 1, led to a new debut for the fountain. Besides various pressure combinations which shoot jets of water to numerous heights in as many directions, the fountain features the play of multi-colored lights. Music from nearby stereo tapes sets the mood.

Spokesmen quoted the highway department, meantime, in assurances that Phase I of Monroe's $3-million north-south expressway, running in front of the fountain, will be in shape for dedicatory uses when the time comes.

WORK CONTINUING

The work of official bodies, like the aphorism says about that of women, is never done. This seemed true again last week, with action in the schools, in West Monroe and on the Ouachita Parish Police Jury. In some cases, there was work to be undone.

The Monroe School Board made news when it joined with four parish systems in appealing, through the state attorney general and to the U.S. Supreme Court, a recent circuit decision requiring compliance with so-called "guidelines" on school desegregation. Eight points of law are called into question in connection with the mandated mixing of faculties and student bodies, and the responsibility of boards in achieving an acceptable mix. Monroe as joined by the parish systems of Bossier, Jackson, Claiborne and Caddo, with their questions perhaps given keener relevancy by a statement during the week from U.S. Health, Education, Welfare Secretary John Gardner. He saw no likelihood, he said, of the guidelines being used against de facto segregation in the North. Failure to comply in the South could mean loss of federal assistance.

No one appeared to know last week how much bi-racialism is expected in the schools or how or whether boards could reach such a level if students should fail to do it through freedom-of-choice school selection.

In a separate story, Ouachita Supt. Milton C. Hall said 66 Negro students have requested attendance in the fall at previously all-white schools. Monroe Supt. Van D. Odom released no figure immediately, since some 19 per cent of his system's choice forms, mailed to parents, have not been returned.

The Monroe board had other news, however, as member Billy Hargiss confirmed that, by next Tuesday, he will have mailed his resignation to Gov. John McKeithen. Hargiss will go to a position in advertising in Dumas, Ark. With three local men reported strongly interested in the seat, an amendment passed last November ironically specifies that the governor shall appoint a replacement from a three-member list of nominees compiled by remaining board members.

The agency undoing part of its work — specifically, participation in the form it has taken so far in reactivation of the Ouachita River Port Commission — was the Ouachita Police Jury. President T. W. Humphries was directed to appoint a citizens committee to study approaches to reactivation when farm leader John Filhoil cited new legislation obviously changing the procedure involved. Foremost, however, probably is the point that parish credit would be required to back revenue bonds the commission might issue, rather than the state's doing so. The jury earlier had joined Monroe and West Monroe in sending the names of commission nominees to Gov. John McKeithen for his selection of seven. New law, it was believed, places the selections entirely in local hands.

West Monroe last week was involved with the river on another level — as one of only two towns in Louisiana dumping sewage into it. The mayor and aldermen, however, took one of their periodic steps toward altering the situation, making a decision in favor of an oxidation pond as the eventual substitute for the river. A mechanical - type sewage disposal plant had been under consideration along with the pond, now believed cheaper and more practical. The city's engineering consultants were directed to go ahead with detailed planning, while that part of construction costs Uncle Sam would not bear is sought. A bond issue is coming and the officials plan an early meeting with a citizens committee for review of sewage disposal, as well as other equally critical needs.

AREA DEATHS

Accidental death came to the Twin City area with seemingly greater frequency last week, leaving in its wake the special tragedy to two children's drowning and an auto crash which killed young Northeast State College student. Little Leander Moore Brown, 2½, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edmund G. Brown, drowned in the family swimming pool at 320 Lakeside Dr., Monroe, while, also Wednesday, Dena Katherine Carey, 22-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Carey, drowned in Bayou DeSiard after wandering away from her home. Victim of the crash, in Shreveport where he lived, was 19-year-old William C. Scurlock.

Other losses included John W. Taylor, 72, killed Tuesday morning when the tractor he was driving overturned on him near his Union Parish home. In El Dorado, Ark., Murle Escoubas, 82, owner of Escoubas Cleaners and Dryers, suffocated after fire broke out in the den of his home. A victim of drowning, near Vidalia, was 19-year-old Natchez, Miss., Negro Hebert Chatham.

Meanwhile, an apparent heart attack took the life of Caldwell Parish Police Jury President W. H. Lay, 66. Mr. Lay, a veteran of 19 years on the jury during two separate periods of service had been elected earlier this month to his third term as president.

Other items of interest in the busy week just passed were numerous. Among them: the Ouachita Parish Chapter of the American Red Cross celebrated its 50th anniversary with a banquet at the Bayou DeSiard Country Club, giving 50-year charter member pins to Mrs. Blanche Oliver and Mrs. James Wooten and a 50-year service pin to Mrs. Wilson Williams.

— Monroe Jaycees and Optimists staged the first annual Monroe Air Show at Selman Field before some 2,000 spectators and rated it later a "great success."

— A group of 35 Taylor University students passed through the area, overnighting in Monroe as they saw America the hard way, bicycling from San Diego, Calif., to Savannah, Ga. — a distance of 2,500 miles.

— Edward Barham, Morehouse Parish farmer and civic leader, announced his candidacy as a Republican for represensentative from Morehouse and Union Parishes.

Monroe's Lt. Cmdr. A. C. Stanley read closely the Middle East reports of Israel's apparently accidental attack on the U.S.S. Liberty. A naval reservist, he was aboard the research vessel in Norfolk, Va., during recent training and knew many of her officers and men.

On The Defense

The Nashville (Tenn.) Tennessean stuck out its neck—or at least an editorial writer did—the other day in commenting on the dispute in the Los Angeles municipal court building.

The unhappiness developed when Judge Noel Cannon, a pretty blonde woman judge angered the city's male judges by holding a press conference to show women how to fight off male attackers.

A majority of the 52 male judges signed a resolution censuring the woman judge for seeking "personal publicity." Judge Cannon had shown the women how they could fight off male attackers by using hatpins, guns that squirt fluids, and even a derringer.

Said the Tennessean:

"It seems the male judges may not be so much concerned over the "publicity" as they are over the fact that Judge Cannon wore a mini-skirt during her demonstration. This could be disturbing to some old veterans of the bench but the mini-skirt probably was just a part of Judge Cannon's demonstration. Some women have to be shown how to attract a male attacker before getting a chance to fight him off."

HOW TRUE —Charles Spurgeon once observed: "It is not how much we have, but how much we enjoy that makes happiness."

Are You Superstitious?

Most people are superstitious in some form of another but a majority of them won't admit it.

For example, some people won't start a new job, or a trip on Friday because it is bad luck. Others won't walk under a ladder, while still others will back up and drive an extra five miles, if necessary, to avoid driving along a street where a black cat has crossed in front of them.

Another folklore or superstition is that if a prize fighter just entering the ring greets a friend, he will lose the match.

A Dictionary

Some of these titillating tidbits of superstitions are among hundreds of thousands gathered over a 20-year period by Professor Wayland H. Hands of the University of California at Los Angeles. The professor "who isn't superstitious—well, not much anyway," is preparing an American of beliefs and superstitions.

Such sayings circulate everywhere, among the literate and the illiterate.

Superstitions are strongest, Hand says, among those in hazardous occupations:

I'M NOT SAILING TODAY!

Among other occupations, the theater is a rich source. Many actors open an engagement in a slightly soiled shirt, believing the show wouldn't last a week if they wore a clean one the first night. Most actors contend it is bad luck to put a hat on a bed.

Gamblers also have an aversion to throwing hats on beds. Hand says many superstitions are common to more than one calling.

European Origin

Much American folklore is European in origin. Most beliefs and superstitions originating in the United States come from the South and New England. The general movement is from east to west. As in Europe and elsewhere, it changes as it moves.

The taboo against whistling, for example is said to go back to an incident at the time a gypsy tinker was forging nails for Christ's cross. Women whistled indifferently while the tinkers worked.

Whistling, in fact, is involved in many pieces of folklore. Hand thinks it probably implies whistling up the devil. Sailors and miners are among those who fear whistling the most, he says. Many newspapermen, even, maintain that whistling in the city room is bad luck.

At avalanche time in the Alps whistling is forbidden in some places because residents fear the vibrations will dislodge the snow.

The study of popular beliefs, Hand says, has opened a rich resource to the psychologist and other behavioral scientists. Additionally, medical doctors and pharmacologists have explored folklore in developing drugs—such as quinine-for modern day use.

Man's Mind

"A succession of psychologists from Wundt and Freud to the late Carl Gustav Jung have found folklore most useful, revealing as it does whole areas of man's mind that are not otherwise verbalized," said Hand.

Hand's project is "A Dictionary of American Popular Beliefs and Superstitions," believed to be the first nationwide collection of such material. His two decades of effort has produced some 400,000 entries, and he says completion is still five to seven years in the future.

The founder of UCLA's Center for the Study of Comparative Folklore and Mythology is a tidy white-haired man of 59 with a highly trained talent for tracing folk beliefs.

In addition to nearly a half million entries, Hand expects another 20,000 to 300,000 items from collaborators in the United States and Canada in the coming years.

Proper Setting

His dictionary's purpose will be to arrange this material in its proper setting and "to attempt to throw light on America's cultural history."

"If it is worth-while to travel to the ends of the earth to study the mental and spiritual life of primitive man, it would seem equally worth - while to study the mental quirks and aberrations from which civilized man has never been able fully to rid himself," he said.

An examination of folksayings shows that most of them do not include any concrete reason for doing, or not doing, the things they recommend.

To this implied question, "Why?" Hand replies that persons who believe in folklore and superstition, in a sense believe in certain magical principles.

"When a man thinks he can get rid of warts by tying a string to a frog, he is believing that personal contact is the reason," he said. "In other words, he is practicing a form of contagious magic."

Hand himself is a student rather than a believer of folklore, but he tells a story about the time he took part of his valuable collection from the center to his home, which was far more vulnerable to fire.

Then he recalled reading that the presence of a calico cat reduces fire hazards. The Hand family pet is a calico cat.

With a grin, the doctor conceded that his cat did provide "a modicum of comfort."

A Newspaper

What's a newspaper?

Monica Potts, a student reporter, asked herself that question and gave her answer in the Southwest High School newspaper "Pioneer," at St. Louis.

But, she added, "this huge, heavy bulk of paper, the most ignored and most noticed item in today's world, is the greatest single happening in the history of free men."

"A newspaper is the voice of sorrow, war and death," wrote Miss Potts. "It is also the voice of liberty, integrity, democracy and life. More people are affected directly by its news than by any other source in existence."

She said newspapers "form the main network of communications over the earth."

"Because of their influence, people are comforted and given hope," she said. "Here in one little newspaper is the reflection of all the peoples . . . their thoughts, opinions and actions.

"The printed word lives on forever, because it is imprinted, not just on paper, but on human lives."

Concluded Miss Potts:

The World's Week In Focus

Top Events Involve Dodd, Riots, Rulings

By OLAND SILK

ACTION of the Supreme Court, President Johnson, United States Senate, United Nations, and the White Hats of Tampa made big news last week.

Johnson's appointment of Thurgood Marshall to the high court, the first Negro so honored, had to be a major White House event, even though it stirred little excitement. The Senate Judiciary Committee will consider his nomination soon.

At the present time, Marshall is Solicitor-General, No. 3 man in the Justice Department. Before taking that post in 1965, he served as a circuit court judge in New York. Prior to that, he was for 23 years chief legal officer of the NAACP. It was his argument that prevailed in the 1954 desegregation decision, one of over 50 appearances before the Supreme Court. He lost only eight cases.

Marshall, 58, was named to succeed Justice Tom Clark who resigned because his son, Ramsey Clark, earlier this year was named Attorney General. The elder Clark wished to avoid a possible conflict of interest.

The Marshall appointment is Johnson's second to the nation's highest tribunal. Abe Fortas, a long - time crony and brilliant lawyer, was the first.

There was immediate speculation that Marshall's nomination might further liberalize the court. Others saw the beginning of a new political tradition. For many years the court has included one Roman Catholic and one Jew among its nine members. Marshall could become the first occupant of the "Negro seat", however informal the recognition might be. Still yet to be named is a woman justice. Wags in Washington said that due to Johnson's penchant for "firsts", had there not been a qualified Negro available, he would have pulled a woman jurist out of his Texas hat.

Decisions, Decisions

THE DARINGLY liberal — or disgustingly liberal, whichever you prefer — Warren Court closed shop until October after handing down a spate of decisions that literally provided something for everybody. Mainly, the decisions were libertarian as expected, but there was at least one surprise: it upheld contempt convictions of Rev. Martin Luther King and seven other civil rights leaders who defied a Birmingham city ordinance and court injunction by holding marches in 1963.

THE COURT handed down two libel decisions, one upholding the Associated Press against General Edwin Walker, and former Georgia Coach Wallace Butts against the Saturday Evening Post.

In the Walker case, the court broadened press defenses against libel harassment. It threw out a $500,00 judgement won by the former major general in a Texas Court. Walker claimed that the Associated Press maligned him in its reports of the Ole Miss-James Meredith confrontation in which he participated.

The AP reporter at the scene said that Walker "assumed command" of the crowd resisting the admission of Meredith to the university, and "led a charge of students against federal marshals." The mashals were on campus to see that an order by the U. S. Circuit Court in New Orleans that Meredith be admitted was carried out.

The unanimous decision held that AP had used reasonable care in its reports and showed neither malice nor incompetence. Under the doctrine laid down by the court in 1964, a public official must prove actual malice or knowing, reckless disregard for the truth before he can recover damages. The 1967 court stretched the "public official" doctrine to include "public figures" who participate in newsworthy public events.

"To me," Warren wrote for the majority, "differentiation between "public figures" and "public officials" and adoption of separate standards of proof for each has no basis in law, logic, or First Amendment policy."

THE decision — and the vote — was quite different in the Post-Butts case. Splitting 5-4, the court upheld the $460,000 judgment won by Coach Butts on the ground that:

"The evidence is ample to support a finding of highly unreasonable conduct constituting an extreme departure from the standards of investigation and reporting ordinarily adhered to by responsible publishers."

IN SHORT, the Post was slipshod and malicious in its expose article charging that Butts outlined Georgia's plays to Paul "Bear" Bryant, Alabama football coach, eight days before the 1962 Georgia-Alabama game. Alabama won the game, 35-0.

In other court decisions: — A New York law that permitted electronic "bugging" and a Virginia ban on racially mixed marriages were swept off the books. Outgoing Justice Clark gave the 5-4 decision on the former, declaring that the law was without adequate judicial supervision or protective procedures even though New York police just get a judge's permission for electronic surveillance. Dissenting Justice Byron White said Clark's opinion was "not in tune with facts of the real world," and a need for modern tools to combat crime. The decision affects eavesdropping laws in five other states.

The ban on laws prohibiting marriages between Negroes and whites, while stemming from a couple's suit in Virginia, will affect similar laws in 15 other states, including Louisiana.

— A criminal suspect must have the assistance of a lawyer if he is placed in a lineup for pretrial identification. The ruling was not retroactive, so persons whose convictions are final cannot invoke the decision on their behalf even though they were put through the now declared unconstitutional procedure. The vote was 6-3.

— Sixth Amendment rights were made obligatory on the states. In the 8-1 decision, it was held that states may not arbitrarily deny an accused the right to put witnesses on the stand to aid in his defense.

Crime In The Streets

A STATISTIC from the FBI and race riots in several cities shocked the nation.

J. Edgar Hoover reported that serious crime in the United States jumped 20 per cent in the first three months of the year, the biggest surge in the last nine years.

SENATOR TOM Dodd, left, looks somewhat tired here as he and Senator Russell Long, self - appointed defender of the Connecticut Democrat, pause during the censure debate. Dodd is on the carpet for diverting campaign funds to private use. A final vote was delayed until next week.

NO geographic region could point its finger at any other — the upsurge was distributed evenly among all sections, large and small cities, surburban and rural areas. Robbery was up 32 per cent, murder, 23 per cent, forcible rape, 8 per cent, aggravated assault, 15 per cent.

Hoover pleaded for better law enforcement machinery and fuller support of government and citizens alike.

The statistics will doubtless be posted in police departments across the nation. For many policemen, it may take a few days to get around to reading them, so busy are they battling rioters.

Trouble erupted in Tampa, Florida, Cincinnati and Dayton, Ohio, and Prattville, Alabama. In some cases, the carnage was unbelievable, the violence second only to the Watts rebellion.

ONLY brief resumes are possible:

Riots broke out in Tampa last Sunday, triggered by the fatal shooting of a 19-year-old Negro by a white policeman. (The officer was later exonerated in a justifiable homicide decision). Negroes beat and robbed whites. One white couple unwittingly drove into the troubled area and were set upon "like vultures." They were kicked and beaten, the woman stripped of her clothing before being released. Rampaging Negroes burned and looted Tampa's sprawling slums, battling with more than 1,000 heavily armed police and National Guardsmen. A whole block of white owned stores were razed.

Republican Governor Claude Kirk was hard-pressed to find a solution. Fortunately, one was found Wednesday when white-helmeted Negro peace troops — most of them teen-agers — patroling in threes, restored calm. The National Guard and Tampa police were held in check. The White Hats were given 30 minutes to get results.

"Cool it. We don't need any more trouble," they shouted as they walked unarmed into the streets.

THE CROWDS cooled it as regular shifts were set up to keep the situation under control. Many of the White Hats were numbered among the agitators Monday and Tuesday. But by Wednesday, they were on the side of law and order. The county Sheriff, Malcom Beard, had nothing but praise for them. They will be honored in a special ceremony arranged by Gov. Kirk.

Racial Disorder

Cincinnati went through four straight nights of racial disorders. A hefty National Guard force, armed with machine guns, rifles and bayonets, accompanied police on patrol in the predominately Negro areas. The situation was worsened by the appearance of H. Rap Brown, chairman of SNCC, who issued a "declaration of war" on the ghetto section. He also demanded that Negroes jailed in connection with the rioting — over 300 — be freed.

ARSONISTS burned five buildings in Dayton Friday. Firemen and police battled the roving bomb tossers, mostly young Negroes. The National Guard was not called out to assist.

In Prattville, Alabama, police and Negroes shot it out and 11 persons were arrested, including Stokely Carmichael, ex-chairman of SNCC. Carmichael and Rap Brown kept things boiling with inflammatory statements and "black power" threats.

Aside from "long, hot summer" indoctrination, the main problem in the big cities was joblessness among the ghetto youth. Idle most of the day and night, they provide agitators with a highly malleable, potentially murderous product to manipulate.

THE SENATE was embroiled all week long with debate on whether or not Senator Tom Dodd, Connecticut Democrat, should be censured for double billing on seven travel jaunts and diverting $116,000 of testimonal dinner funds to his personal use.

The double billing charge, by Friday, appeared to be on its way out. Separate votes may be taken on it and the pseudo - thievery count.

Dodd defended himself before the full Senate, challenging his old friend, Senator John Stennis, chairman of the Ethics Committee which investigated Dodd's activities. Stennis insisted Dodd had brought dishonor to the body, called the most exclusive club in the world.

IN AN impassioned appeal, Dodd asked his fellow senators to stand up if he had ever lied, cheated or broken his word to them. No one moved. He asked God to strike him down if he were not telling the truth about his financial dealings. Nothing happened.

The grey - haired lawmaker's chief points were 1) that he had made 80 trips, of which only seven were in dispute. His double billing on those were due to carelessness on his part and the poor bookkeeping of his former aide, Michael O'Hare. 2) that the testimonal funds — over $400,000 — were meant as gifts to be used as he saw fit.

Stennis accused Dodd of collecting money "under all the banners and trappings of campaign contributions" and then spending it indiscriminately for his own purposes. Such use of testimonial funds was "wrong on its face", he declared, and therefore tended to bring dishonor upon the Senate itself.

It was noted that $9,000 was used to improve Dodd's Connecticut home. His son was given $4,500 out of campaign funds. Country Club dues, race track limousine service, and household expenses were included in the list of suspect outlays.

PARTICULARLY damaging to Dodd's case was a "Dear Lyndon" letter in which he thanked the President for helping him raise campaign funds at a testimonial affair. Both Johnson and Vice President Humphrey made speeches at Dodd dinners; they have said that they thought they were helping to defray campaign expenses.

The 60-year old Dodd was defended by self-appointed counsel, Senator Russell Long, son of the Kingfish, who lately appears to copying his dad's tactics. He roamed the aisles for six hours, shaking his fist, telling stories, making repetitious and often irrelevant statements. Dodd did not seem too happy about it all, but Long pressed on.

HE SUGGESTED that the double billing — that is, billing the Senate and private groups for air fare — best be forgotten. On the diversion of funds charge, Long claimed that Dodd had paid more of his personal funds for political purposes than vice versa. Besides, no one ever bothers to inquire about where testimonial funds go.

By RICHARD TYLER
World Staff Writer

Northeast Louisiana shared a question with the world last week: Where do we go from here? Neither had any quick answers.

Israel, a fighting little nation with a lot of what America used to have more of, had set the world, accustomed to endless negotiation, on its ear with a quick victory over Nasser. It was a defeat, meanwhile, that of the Fifth District sales tax, that had area leaders reviewing prospects.

The proposed one-cent levy, designed chiefly to raise school, parish and municipal pay, stumped the experts in losing district-wide in a light turnout by nearly 7,000 votes. Almost half that number were lost in Ouachita Parish, where but six of 50 precincts went for the tax. Favorable majorities were won only in five of 14 parishes.

The week's post-mortems of the June 10 vote produced no pubblic speculation on reasons for the loss, so erratic was the pattern. Here, parishes due to receive more in proceeds than they would pay voted "No." There, parishes due to receive less voted "Yes."

NEEDS REMAIN

What was most obvious from subsequent developments was the fact that the needs the tax was intended to answer remained unanswered. Moreover, they can't continue to be. "Something has to be done," said Bobby Wilson of West Monroe, a teacher leader in the tax's support. "It can only get worse," said Henry Taliaferro of Jonesville, head of the sales tax district, recalling passage the week before of a levy to boost teacher pay in Caddo Parish. "West Monroe must have a source of additional revenue," said Mayor Bert Hatten, underscoring the word "must."

The election represented the first test of a district-wide sales tax at the polls. Quickly, talk began of a second attempt with the same measure. Several changes also were reported under discussion. A parish tax was reported as a possibility. But the situation remained fluid as the week closed, except in Monroe where Mayor W. L. Howard moved swiftly to meet the city's "most critical" requirements.

With general pay raises to all employees no longer an immediate prospect, Howard gathered department heads, still working within the confines of last year's budget, and told them further cuts will be needed. Expenses, he said, are being trimmed to the "bare bone" in order to set the base pay of police and firemen permanently at $400 per month and to hire 25 new police officers.

With a police force already 14 men understrength, due largely, he said, to insufficient pay, Howard listed an 85 to 90 man department the absolute minimum to be flexible in possible emergencies. Approximately $250,000 would be needed to achieve the cited pay and employment level and, the mayor was emphatic, "something will have to give." Several somethings probably.

An indication of the thinking being marshalled to meet the problem came Friday with disclosure of the possibility of creating a new supervisory position. The reins from all public works projects would come directly into this office, with its holder reporting in a straight line to the city's elected officials. Howard felt such an arrangement, through fuller and broader usage of available personnel and equipment, might save from $40,000 to $50,000 a year.

Other avenues also apparently were and are being explored to meet the need in consultation with all departments, as well as with the city Utilities Commission.

SIMPLE SUMMATION

Readers who will repeat slowly to themselves the two words "Civic Center" will have simply summed up a great deal of what Monroe was talking about last week. That $5.5-million facility, headed by its introverted director William B. Lillyman (Bill thrives on such descriptions), walked through the lines of at least four stories — one of which detailed a third delay in completion.

The City Council, meeting Tuesday, granted contractor Jesse F. Heard and Sons a new extension of 46 days, pushing completion of the three buildings back to Aug. 1. In announcing the arrangement to delay full occupancy from June 16, officials guaranteed no corresponding delay in the center's planned Labor Day weekend dedication and opening.

Characterized essentially as the lesser of two evils, the agreement permits city takeover and commencement of equipping of each building as its is completed. The conference hall, in fact, was occupied Thursday by the center's permanent staff, moving from temporary offices at City Hall.

The city's choice apparently boiled down to assessing a $200 per day penalty on the contractor until Aug. 1, in which case none of the buildings could be occupied until all were done, or forfeiting the penalty and making do with residence one building at a time. The first alternative, the mayor said, in all probability would have forced postponement of the center's opening and cost more in unfulfillable contracts with various shows, not to mention stacked up seats and equipment, than the penalty would produce.

At the same meeting, the Civic Center's premiere season got a boost with announcement of a three-show Broadway series coming to Monroe, underwritten by local businessman James A. Noe. Coming on Oct. 25-26, Dec. 7-8 and Feb. 2-3 are the road versions of, in order, "The Impossible Years," "Holly, Dolly," and "The Roar of the Greasepaint, the Smell of the Crowd." Season tickets go on sale July 1.

A further special announcement of the week set July 2 as the date for dedication of the center's $100,000 Symphonic Color-Fall fountain display, which has undergone construction and testing for the past five weeks. The word from the Tuesday meeting listed the date as June 30, but later notice of a conflict with the Miss Louisiana Pageant, running June 28-July 1, led to a new debut for the fountain. Besides various pressure combinations which shoot jets of water to numerous heights in as many directions, the fountain features the play of multi-colored lights. Music from nearby stereo tapes sets the mood.

Spokesmen quoted the highway department, meantime, in assurances that Phase I of Monroe's $3-million north-south expressway, running in front of the fountain, will be in shape for dedicatory uses when the time comes.

WORK CONTINUING

The work of official bodies, like the aphorism says about that of women, is never done. This seemed true again last week, with action in the schools, in West Monroe and on the Ouachita Parish Police Jury. In some cases, there was work to be undone.

The Monroe School Board made news when it joined with four parish systems in appealing, through the state attorney general and to the U.S. Supreme Court, a recent circuit decision requiring compliance with so-called "guidelines" on school desegregation. Eight points of law are called into question in connection with the mandated mixing of faculties and student bodies, and the responsibility of boards in achieving an acceptable mix. Monroe as joined by the parish systems of Bossier, Jackson, Claiborne and Caddo, with their questions perhaps given keener relevancy by a statement during the week from U.S. Health, Education, Welfare Secretary John Gardner. He saw no likelihood, he said, of the guidelines being used against de facto segregation in the North. Failure to comply in the South could mean loss of federal assistance.

No one appeared to know last week how much bi-racialism is expected in the schools or how or whether boards could reach such a level if students should fail to do it through freedom-of-choice school selection.

In a separate story, Ouachita Supt. Milton C. Hall said 66 Negro students have requested attendance in the fall at previously all-white schools. Monroe Supt. Van D Odom released no figure immediately, since some 19 per cent of his system's choice forms, mailed to parents, have not been returned.

The Monroe board had other news, however, as member Billy Hargiss confirmed that, by next Tuesday, he will have mailed his resignation to Gov. John McKeithen. Hargiss will go to a position in advertising in Dumas, Ark. With three local men reported strongly interested in the seat, an amendment passed last November ironically specifies that the governor shall appoint a replacement from a three-member list of nominees compiled by remaining board members.

The agency undoing part of its work — specifically, participation in the form it has taken so far in reactivation of the Ouachita River Port Commission — was the Ouachita Police Jury. President T. W. Humphries was directed to appoint a citizens committee to study approaches to reactivation when farm leader John Filhoil cited new legislation obviously changing the procedure involved. Foremost, however, probably is the point that parish credit would be required to back revenue bonds the commission might issue, rather than the state's doing so. The jury earlier had joined Monroe and West Monroe in sending the names of commission nominees to Gov. John McKeithen for his selection of seven. New law, it was believed, places the selections entirely in local hands.

West Monroe last week was involved with the river on another level — as one of only two towns in Louisiana dumping sewage into it. The mayor and aldermen, however, took one of their periodic steps toward altering the situation, making a decision in favor of an oxidation pond as the eventual substitute for the river. A mechanical - type sewage disposal plant had been under consideration along with the pond, now believed cheaper and more practical. The city's engineering consultants were directed to go ahead with detailed planning, while that part of construction costs Uncle Sam would not bear is sought. A bond issue is coming and the officials plan an early meeting with a citizens committee for review of sewage disposal, as well as other equally critical needs.

AREA DEATHS

Accidental death came to the Twin City area with seemingly greater frequency last week, leaving in its wake the special tragedy to two children's drowning and an auto crash which killed young Northeast State College student. Little Leander Moore Brown, 2½, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edmund G. Brown, drowned in the family swimming pool at 320 Lakeside Dr., Monroe, while, also Wednesday, Dena Katherine Carey, 22-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Carey, drowned in Bayou DeSiard after wandering away from her home. Victim of the crash, in Shreveport where he lived, was 19-year-old William C. Scurlock.

Other losses included John W. Taylor, 72, killed Tuesday morning when the tractor he was driving overturned on him near his Union Parish home. In El Dorado, Ark., Murle Escoubas, 82, owner of Escoubas Cleaners and Dryers, suffocated after fire broke out in the den of his home. A victim of drowning, near Vidalia, was 19-year-old Natchez, Miss., Negro Hebert Chatham.

Meanwhile, an apparent heart attack took the life of Caldwell Parish Police Jury President W. H. Lay, 66. Mr. Lay, a veteran of 19 years on the jury during two separate periods of service, had been elected earlier this month to his third term as president.

Other items of interest in the busy week just passed were numerous. Among them: the Ouachita Parish Chapter of the American Red Cross celebrated its 50th anniversary with a banquet at the Bayou DeSiard Country Club, giving 50-year charter member pins to Mrs. Blanche Oliver and Mrs. James Wooten and a 50-year service pin to Mrs. Wilson Williams.

— Monroe Jaycees and Optimists staged the first annual Monroe Air Show at Selman Field before some 2,000 spectators and rated it later a "great success."

— A group of 35 Taylor University students passed through the area, overnighting in Monroe as they saw America the hard way, bicycling from San Diego, Calif., to Savannah, Ga. — a distance of 2,500 miles.

— Edward Barham, Morehouse Parish farmer and civic leader, announced his candidacy as a Republican for representative from Morehouse and Union Parishes.

— Monroe's Lt. Cmdr. A. C. Stanley read closely the Middle East reports of Israel's apparently accidental attack on the U.S.S. Liberty. A naval reservist, he was aboard the research vessel in Norfolk, Va., during recent training and knew many of her officers and men.

Lingering Shadow - Warren Report Dispute Unsettled

Single Bullet, The Singular Theory On JFK Shooting

It was from these elements that the Warren Commission constructed what has become known as the "single bullet theory."

And it is these elements which critics of the Warren report use to topple the theory and discredit the report.

The theory was reached after the commission staff was confronted with two pieces of conflicting evidence:

—That the first wound suffered by President Kennedy and Texas Gov. John B. Connally evidently occurred within a span of 1.6 seconds; 2—that the murder weapon could not be fired faster than once every 2.3 seconds.

The Answer

What was the answer?

The commission decided that one bullet went through Kennedy's neck, traveled four feet forward and struck Connally, inflicting wounds of his chest, wrist and thigh. A second bullet struck Kennedy at the back of his head and killed him. A third bullet missed.

Any argument that Lee Harvey Oswald was the lone assassin or he wasn't stems from this theory.

The theory is central to these commission conclusions:

1—That all the shots fired at the President and governor were fired from Oswald's sniper's perch on the sixth floor of the Texas School Book Depository, overlooking Dealey Plaza in Dallas—and from no other place.

2—That all the shots were fired from a 6.5mm Mannlicher-Carcano rifle, owned by Oswald, and found on the sixth floor after the assassination—and no other weapon in the world.

3—That all the shots were fired by Lee Harvey Oswald—and no other person.

In arriving at the single bullet theory, the commission itself laid the groundwork for its possible challenge by saying in the report:

"Although it is not necessary to any essential findings of the commission to determine just which shot hit Gov. Connally, there is very persuasive evidence from the experts to indicate that the same bullet which pierced the President's throat also caused Gov. Connally's wounds."

But if that didn't happen, the theory teeters—and so does the case against Oswald as the lone assassin.

The critics have assaulted the theory. But not with new evidence. They have used conjecture instead of fact. And when they dig into the report for evidence, they do not describe all that is on the shovel.

For example:

Mark Lane contends the "alleged" assassin rifle—the Mannlicher-Carcano — was planted. His evidence: the depository rifle was first described in press reports as a "Mauser." Lane also relies heavily on an affidavit by Constable Seymour Weitzman as describing the weapon as "a 7.65 Mauser bolt action." Lane emphasizes that Weitzman was a rifle expert. What is the fact? Weitzman testified he never handled the weapon and has since said that the word "Mauser" describes the bolt action. The Italian Mannlicher-Carcano, as mentioned, was manufactured with the patented German Mauser bolt action, and the Italians rechambered it for 6.5mm ammunition.

Epstein claims the autopsy report on Kennedy is suspect. His evidence: a dot on an autopsy sketch indicates a bullet entry below Kennedy's shoulder, which means the bullet couldn't have emerged to hit Connally. What is the fact? The dot is off the mark. But the descriptive detail with it locates the neck wound precisely. So does the testimony of the pathologists as well as the autopsy report itself.

Weisberg claims the film taken by a spectator, Abraham Zapruder, shows Kennedy was wounded much earlier than the commission says, and this means there had to be another gunman in another firing position. His evidence is obtained by pruning Zapruder's testimony. Just how and to what effect will be discussed further.

The Attacks

The impact of their attacks has had telling effect, but the most jarring challenge to the single bullet theory came from one of the victims, Gov. Connally.

"I am convinced beyond any doubt that I was not struck by the first bullet," says the governor. He recites his recollection of the sequence in which he heard a shot and then felt himself shot—and since a bullet travels faster than sound how could he have heard the same shot that hit him?

But the commission found it could not be so certain. There was other evidence which indicated the governor could be in error about his reconstruction. The governor was clear about being hit in the chest. But he did not know until the next day that a bullet had gone through his wrist and hit his thigh. He thought there were 10 to 12 seconds between the first and last shots. But analysis of the Zahpruder film indicated that there were 5.6 seconds during which one shot wounded Kennedy and another killed him.

There also was uncertainty due to the testimony of Connally and his wife Nellie. The governor testified that Kennedy was hit and had his hands at his throat. And then, he said, he was hit by a second shot. His wife agrees.

"I immediately, when I was hit, I said, 'Oh, no, no, no.' And then I said, 'My God, they are going to kill us all,'" Connally testified.

But Mrs. Connally testified:

"As the first shot was hit, and I turned to look at the same time, I recall John saying, 'Oh, no, no, no.' Then there was a second shot, and it hit John, and as he recoiled to the right, just crumpled like a wounded animal to the right, he said, 'My God, they are going to kill us all.'"

If the governor is correct that he said "Oh, no, no, no" as soon as he was hit, and if Mrs. Connally is correct that he said this before she heard a second shot, then the commission's assumption stands on reasonable ground.

Viewing Frames

Had there not been the Zapruder film, it is possible that investigators might have reached a simple equation three wounds—three bullets.

Three used shells near the sixth-floor window of the depository fortified the conclusion there were three shots. And of the 205 persons who gave statements regarding the number of shots, 119 said they heard three, seven heard two or more and 39 heard "some." Eleven said they heard four and a handful said there were even more.

In analyzing the Zapruder film, the commission found that at the most there was a 1.6 second time span during which Kennedy and the governor were first wounded.

This was determined by measuring the operating speed of the camera. Zapruder's exposed 18.3 frames per second. Other evidence—the shells and rifle in the depository, the rifle seen protruding through the window, the nature of wounds, and so on—established that the sixth floor of the depository was one fixed point. The almost foot-by-foot movements of the presidential limousine—as demonstrated by the Zapruder movie and other photographs—provided other fixed points.

But the Zapruder film had one drawback: the progress of the limousine was obscured for approximately seven-tenths of a second by a road sign. So there is no pictorial evidence in the film showing exactly when Kennedy was first hit. The fatal shot is clearly seen later in the film.

Investigators positioning themselves in the sniper's window perch could determine when Kennedy or governor were probably in position to be targets. Since the foliage of an oak tree blocked the line of fire until the limousine had gone past the depository on its way to Stemmons Freeway, it was determined that the president could not have been struck at the base of the neck until Frame 210 of the Zapruder film. At this point, the limousine was behind the road sign, traveling at a rate of 11.2 miles an hour.

Weisberg says the computations are meaningless. He says there is evidence the president was hit earlier. He cites Zapruder's testimony in Vol VII,Page 571. Zapruder was being questioned by Liebeler and was describing details regarding different frames. In reference to the movement of the limousine, Zapruder says "It reached about—I imagine it was around here—I heard the first shot and I saw the President lean over and grab himself."

"Lawyers know very well that such words as 'here' in testimony relating to a location reflect nothing on the printed page. When they want the testimony clear, they ask the witness to identify the spot meant by 'here.' Zapruder was not asked to explain where 'here' was," Weisberg says. And then he says:

Key Meaning

"But the startling meaning of Zapruder's testimony is this: He saw the first shot hit the president! He described the president's reaction to it. Had the president been obscured by the sign, Zapruder could have seen none of this. Therefore, the president was hit prior to Frame 210, prior to Frame 205, the last one that shows the top of his head. . . ."

Turn to page 574 of the same volume and there is Zapruder being specific. He is shown Frame 225, which is the first one in which the president can be seen as the limousine emerges from behind the sign. The president appears to have his hands moving toward his throat, and Zapruder, looking at this frame, says:

"Yes; it looks like he was hit —it seems—there—somewhere behind the sign. You see, he is still sitting upright."

Edward Jay Epstein tends to confuse the commission's interpretation of the Zapruder film by saying that because foliage of an oak tree blocked the view". . .the commission concluded that the earliest point the president could have been first hit was film Frame 207." No. If that happened, the president would have had a head wound then. Since his neck was blocked from a line of fire until Frame 210.

The commission did say that 207 was the FIRST point at which Connally could have been hit, consistent with his wounds.

But when then was the governor hit? On the basis of computations and the visible movements of the governor, it was determined that at the very latest, he could not have been hit after Frame 240. That would mean that if the president was hit at Frame 210 and the governor at Frame 240, it would have occurred within a span of 1.6 seconds.

This time element is important to the commission—and the critics.

A Good Shooter

Firing tests of the Mannlicher-Carcano showed that three master riflemen couldn't fire it and work the bolt and get off another round in less than 2.3 seconds.

If the time span between the Kennedy and Connally wounds is reduced too radically, the critics' argument might falter because the shorter time would support the plausibility of one bullet hitting both men. But the critics tend to support Connally's contention that he most likely was hit during Frames 231 to 234.

Arlen Specter, now district attorney of Philadelphia, was the commission counsel generally described as chief architect of the single bullet theory. He and Wesley Liebeler both say that the Zapruder film shows that on Frame 230 the governor's right arm can be seen above the side of the car and that he was probably in his delayed reaction to his wounds at that point. On that premise, there was little more than a second between the time the president and governor were hit. It can be reduced further when it is considered that the president may not have been hit until just before Frame 225.

Some Agreement

There is agreement among critics and commission about one thing the Zapruder film does show: the shot that killed the president. The impact of this hit is clear in Frame 313. The running time from Frame 210 to Frame 313 is 5.6 seconds.

The agreement ends there. Because of the limited firing capacity of the Mannlicher-Carcano, the critics say (1) the president and governor could not have been hit within 1.6 seconds by two rounds fired from that rifle, and (2) three bullets could not have been fired within 5.6 seconds.

Epstein, examining the firing tests by three experts, says they used stationery targets and that the time was measured from the sound of the first report to the sound of the third report and thus had unlimited time to aim the first shot.

"This is a significant factor. For example, if it is assumed it took the assassin one second to react, aim and pull the trigger, then he had only 4.6 seconds (not 5.6 seconds) to fire," Epstein says.

Mark Lane makes the same contention and adds to it a detailed attack in which he says the tests themselves were invalid, the ammunition was unreliable, the weapon was of poor quality and Oswald was an inferior marksman.

Wesley Liebeler says that "if you assume Lane is right on all of this, what does it change? The fact is that that rifle was owned by Oswald, he was in the depository, the empty shells were fired by that weapon, the recovered bullet was fired by that weapon. The best evidence that the rifle was capable of delivering the shots and that Oswald was capable of hitting the president and governor is that it did and he did."

Specter challenges the time interpretations by the critics, saying:

"The would-be critics of the commission report all make the same mistake in interpreting the possibility of fitting three shots in a 5.6 seconds time-span because they count the first shot.

"When you fire three times, the first shot is not taken into account in the timing sequence. Look at it this way: aim is taken and there is the first shot. Then 2.3 seconds passes while the bolt action is worked and the next shot is fired. Then another 2.5 seconds for the third shot. The three shots can be fired within 4.6 seconds range of time."

Another Element

Lane, Epstein and Weisberg also introduce another element in challenging the capability of the Mannlicher-Carcano a fourth shot. Patently, the rifle as tested, could not have delivered four shots in 5.6 seconds. But where is their evidence? The commission considered such a possibility, but found no credible evidence for more than three shots.

It might seem that the commission would find added support in the firing demonstration by a British Royal Marines sergeant appearing on a BBC television show Jan. 30, 1967. Lane and Specter were there as participants in a debate about the controversy and saw the sergeant, using a Mannlicher-Carcano of the same vintage as Oswald's, aim at a target and get three rounds off in 2.6 seconds.

By that measure, it could have been possible that separate rounds could have hit the president and governor in close order. But if that happened, more riddles are posed: if one bullet alone went through the president's neck, how did it vanish without striking anyone else or anything else? If the governor was hit separately, what sort of wounds would he have suffered, and could they then

This was the bullet, in an almost undamaged condition, which was found in Parkland Memorial Hospital where both the president and governor were taken. The commission says it is the bullet which passed through the president's neck and struck the governor in the chest, wrist and thigh.

Mark Lane describes it in a chapter entitled "Magic Bullet." Epstein calls it "The Stretcher Bullet." "The so-called 'found' bullet." Weisberg says, ". . .could, for example, have been planted in the hospital."

Experts put the bullet under scientific tests which they said proved it was fired by the Mannlicher-Carcano rifle.

The 6.5mm copper-jacketed bullet weighed 158.6 grains. Its standard weight would be 160-161 grains. This would mean that Bullet 399 lost between 1.4 and 2.4 grains.

The Detail

Lane and Epstein each cite three particular witnesses for their conclusion that Bullet 399 lost too little weight to have caused the wounds received by Connally. One is Col. Pierre Finck, one of the autopsy surgeons, who ruled out the bullet "for the reason that there are too many fragments described in that (Connally's) wrist." Another is Cmdr. James J. Humes, the chief autopsy pathologist, who testified "this missile is basically intact; its jacket appears to me to be intact, and I do not understand how it could possibly have left fragments in either of these locations (wrist and thigh)." A third is Dr. Robert Shaw, who operated on the governor's chest, and who testified there were three grains left in the governor's wrist.

These conflicts were cleared up in other testimony, but the commission was remiss in not resolving the conflicts when they arose.

What was it?

Dr. Charles F. Gregory, who treated the governor's wrist wound, testified X-rays disclosed "three metallic flakes" there, and he added: "I would estimate that they would be weighed in micrograms, that it is something less than the weight of a postage stamp." Not three grains, as Dr. Shaw said.

Thigh Wound

Dr. George T. Shires, who treated the thigh wound, testified no bullet fragments were recovered from it but that a small one, discernible on X-ray, remained in the femur. He was asked its weight, and answered "maybe a tenth of a grain."

Critic Harold Weisberg says that "the report refers to no fragments elsewhere. Shires says there is still one in the chest." But examine Shires' testimony in Vol. VI, Page 111, and you discover that Shires had just said any knowledge he had about damage to the rib was "only hearsay from Dr. Shaw, that's all." Shires was next asked whether he knew whether there were any bullet fragments in the chest, and he replied: "No, again except from postoperative X-rays, there is a small fragment remaining, but the initial fragments I think Dr. Shaw saw before I arrived."

"We saw no evidence of any metallic material in the X-ray that we had of the chest, and we found none during the operation," Shaw said. He had also testified that an X - ray made seven days after the shooting disclosed nothing except evidence of healing.

Shaw was responsible for the statement there were three grains of metal in the wrist wound. But as he stated in his testimony, he did "not accurately examine" this wound. That was Gregory's job.

None of the critics mentions, incidentally, that the discovery of Bullet 399 was not entirely unanticipated. For it occurred to Gregory during the operation that such a search should be made. He says in his testimony:

There was "some speculation on our part, on my part, which was voiced to someone that some search ought to be made in the governor's clothing or perhaps in the auto or some place, wherever he may have been, for the missile which produced this much damage and was not resident in him."

Bullet 399 had already been found, unknown to Gregory, when he said this. It was discovered shortly after 1 p.m., when the president was pronounced dead, on a stretcher in the corridor near the ground floor emergency rooms.

At first, it was thought this bullet came from the president's stretcher. And that fit in with the speculation that a bullet had hit the president in the back and exited during external heart massage. But the autopsy was to show that this didn't happen.

The commission determined that the bullet came from Connally's stretcher.

Epstein here goes back to Col. Finck, saying his testimony "cannot be dismissed merely because it collided with the hypothesis that Bullet 399 was found on Connally's stretcher. Since Finck's categorical statement that this bullet could not have caused Connally's wrist wound was never challenged. disputed, or corrected, it can only be concluded from the evidence that Bullet 399 did not come from Connally's stretcher."

Epstein should turn to Vol. V, page 90, where he will find the testimony of Dr. Alfred G. Olivier, an expert on bullet wounds.

This exchange took place:

"Q: Do you have an opinion as to whether, in fact, Bullet 399 did cause the wound on the governor's wrist, assuming if you will that it was the missile found on the governor's stretcher at Parkland Hospital?

"Dr Olivier: I believe it was. That is my feeling."

There also was testimony from Drs. Shaw, Shires and Gregory that they thought one bullet caused all of Connally's wounds. Shires testified that Drs. Robert McClelland, Charles Baxter and Ralph Don Patman concurred.

The critics each say that because of the movement of the stretchers it could not be determined to a certainty that the bullet came from Connally's stretcher or didn't come from the president's stretcher. Darrell Tomlinson, the Parkland Hospital engineer who found the bullet, could not identify the stretcher positively. There were two stretchers in the corridor where the bullet was found.

Never Answered

Epstein says, "Since all stretchers were eventually returned to this area to be remade, the key question was: Was Kennedy's stretcher returned before or after the bullet was found? This question was never answered."

Not so.

Tomlinson had testified he had come to the elevator area at around 1 p.m. and found a stretcher which had some sheets on it. He pushed this stretcher from the elevator into the corridor. Then he took the elevator to the second floor, brought down a man who picked up two pints of blood, and returned with him to the second floor where Connally was in surgery. He then made several trips between the ground floor and second floor before discovering the bullet.

Nurse Diana Hamilton Bowron testified she was in Trauma Room 1 with the president until his body was taken off the stretcher and placed in a casket. The stretcher, she said, was stripped of its sheets and then wheeled into Trauma Room 2, which was empty.

Nurse Margaret M. Henchliffe gave similar testimony and was asked:

"Is it possible that the stretcher that Mr. Kennedy was on was rolled with the sheets on it down into the area near the elevator?"

"No sir."

"I am positive of that."

Nurse Doris Mae Nelson testified she was standing near the entrance to Trauma Room 2 when the president's stretcher, clear of sheets, was moved into it.

Exhibit 392, containing Parkland Hospital records, has a statement saying that the president was taken out of the hospital in a casket about 2 p.m. Testimony from the doctors and hospital personnel says the president remained on the stretcher until his body was placed in the casket. Wesley Liebeler, who has gone further into this question, says he has since determined from nurse Doris Nelson that the time was closer to 2:10 p.m. Either way, it would be long after the bullet had been discovered.

Was It Planted

Could it have been planted, as Weisberg suggests?

To buy that, it is necessary to conjure a being of superior intelligence, craftiness and prophesy who could have designed a bullet which would not be too heavy or light to conform to fragments found in the governor's wounds; that would have had the proper condition had it gone through the president's neck alone, and perhaps smashed into the limousine. And what if another bullet had also been found?

If there was one way to explode the single bullet theory, it remained in the results of the autopsy report, which will be examined in detail. If Lane, Epstein or Weisberg can demonstrate that this report is at fault and that the president never suffered a back-to-front neck wound, out goes the theory—and along with it the case against Oswald as the lone assassin.

So the autopsy doctors did their work. They examined. They drew diagrams. They photographed. They drew a dot. And now there are those that claim the dot and the photographs show the doctors didn't do their work at all. Or the commission didn't.

Warren Report Made Mistake

The Warren Commission did make a mistake. It had compassion.

There was some evidence which could have been made part of the record, but was not: X-rays and photographs taken at the autopsy of President John F. Kennedy.

Had these photographs been introduced as commission exhibits, the commission may have been bound to publish them—as it did with other nonsecret exhibits.

In the heartsick atmosphere after the assassination, there were those who felt this was unnecessary, that the evidence could be placed under lock and key for historians of the future and that the sworn testimony of autopsy surgeons would now be sufficient.

But who could have reckoned there would be the time of the critics? Who could have anticipated the commission findings would be painted with suspicion?

Other Acts

There were other acts and incidents which the critics could seize upon and emphasize and place out of focus. They did.

There was a pathologist who made an inexact dot on an autopsy sketch representing a bullet entry; there were two FBI agents who reported the speculative conversation of pathologists without knowing the whole story; there were the three pathologists who left a corroborating detail of evidence out of the autopsy report; there was a pathologist who burned a draft of the autopsy in his fireplace; there were harried reporters at a Parkland Memorial Hospital who failed to make clear that doctors were speculating in describing the president's throat wound as an entry wound.

The critics—most notably Mark Lane, Edward Jay Epstein and Harold Weisberg—drew their own meanings from these things to make the autopsy findings suspect or tarnished.

The autopsy report states conclusively that Kennedy was struck by two bullets. One went through his neck. It was a wound doctors say he would have survived. The second bullet struck his skull. It was fatal.

These findings are central to the single bullet theory. This theory is that a bullet went through the president's neck and went on to wound Gov. Connally. If not, the single bullet theory collapses. And so does the Warren report conclusion that Lee Harvey Oswald alone fired the bullets.

The critics have constructed their machine of destruction by selection of parts of testimony and parts of evidence from the Warren report. Some of it has been clever—and some absurd.

What could be more absurd than the way they see the holes in the president's suit jacket and shirt? Neither Lane, Epstein nor Weisberg challenges the Warren report evidence that there was a hole in the jacket "5 inches below the top of the collar and 1 inches to the right of the center back seam of the coat" and a hole in the shirt "5¾ inches below the top of the collar and 1⅛ inches to the right of the middle of the back of the shirt."

Weisberg lowers the hole a few inches by describing it in his book as "six inches down from the collar. Not in the neck." He drops the key words "top of."

Epstein, in his book, publishes photographs which show the garments on a hangar. The holes can be seen clearly. "These photographs. . .were omitted from the Warren report and the 26 volumes of supporting evidence," he says. He got them from the National Archives. But other pictures, not nearly as dramatic, are in the

CRITICS claim location of bullet hole is too far down in jacket to be consistent with a wound in the back which also exited from the wound in the front of the neck. Single Bullet, The Singular Theory On JFK Shooting

It was from these elements that the Warren Commission constructed what has become known as the "single bullet theory."

And it is these elements which critics of the Warren report use to topple the theory and discredit the report.

The theory was reached after the commission staff was confronted with two pieces of conflicting evidence:

—That the first wound suffered by President Kennedy and Texas Gov. John B. Connally evidently occurred within a span of 1.6 seconds; 2—that the murder weapon could not be fired faster than once every 2.3 seconds.

The Answer

What was the answer?

The commission decided that one bullet went through Kennedy's neck, traveled four feet forward and struck Connally, inflicting wounds of his chest, wrist and thigh. A second bullet struck Kennedy at the back of his head and killed him. A third bullet missed.

Any argument that Lee Harvey Oswald was the lone assassin or he wasn't stems from this theory.

The theory is central to these commission conclusions:

1—That all the shots fired at the President and governor were fired from Oswald's sniper's perch on the sixth floor of the Texas School Book Depository, overlooking Dealey Plaza in Dallas—and from no other place.

2—That all the shots were fired from a 6.5mm Mannlicher-Carcano rifle, owned by Oswald, and found on the sixth floor after the assassination—and no other weapon in the world.

3—That all the shots were fired by Lee Harvey Oswald—and no other person.

In arriving at the single bullet theory, the commission itself laid the groundwork for its possible challenge by saying in the report:

"Although it is not necessary to any essential findings of the commission to determine just which shot hit Gov. Connally, there is very persuasive evidence from the experts to indicate that the same bullet which pierced the President's throat also caused Gov. Connally's wounds."

But if that didn't happen, the theory teeters—and so does the case against Oswald as the lone assassin.

The critics have assaulted the theory. But not with new evidence. They have used conjecture instead of fact. And when they dig into the report for evidence, they do not describe all that is on the shovel.

For example:

Mark Lane contends the "alleged" assassin rifle—the Mannlicher-Carcano — was planted. His evidence: the depository rifle was first described in press reports as a "Mauser." Lane also relies heavily on an affidavit by Constable Seymour Weitzman as describing the weapon as "a 7.65 Mauser bolt action." Lane emphasizes that Weitzman was a rifle expert. What is the fact? Weitzman testified he never handled the weapon and has since said that the word "Mauser" describes the bolt action. The Italian Mannlicher-Carcano, as mentioned, was manufactured with the patented German Mauser bolt action, and the Italians rechambered it for 6.5mm ammunition.

Epstein claims the autopsy report on Kennedy is suspect. His evidence: a dot on an autopsy sketch indicates a bullet entry below Kennedy's shoulder, which means the bullet couldn't have emerged to hit Connally. What is the fact? The dot is off the mark. But the descriptive detail with it locates the neck wound precisely. So does the testimony of the pathologists as well as the autopsy report itself.

Weisberg claims the film taken by a spectator, Abraham Zapruder, shows Kennedy was wounded much earlier than the commission says, and this means there had to be another gunman in another firing position. His evidence is obtained by pruning Zapruder's testimony. Just how and to what effect will be discussed further.

The Attacks

The impact of their attacks has had telling effect, but the most jarring challenge to the single bullet theory came from one of the victims, Gov. Connally.

"I am convinced beyond any doubt that I was not struck by the first bullet," says the governor. He recites his recollection of the sequence in which he heard a shot and then felt himself shot—and since a bullet travels faster than sound how could he have heard the same shot that hit him?

But the commission found it could not be so certain. There was other evidence which indicated the governor could be in error about his reconstruction. The governor was clear about being hit in the chest. But he did not know until the next day that a bullet had gone through his wrist and hit his thigh. He thought there were 10 to 12 seconds between the first and last shots. But analysis of the Zapruder film indicated that there were 5.6 seconds during which one shot wounded Kennedy and another killed him.

There also was uncertainty due to the testimony of Connally and his wife Nellie. The governor testified that Kennedy was hit and had his hands at his throat. And then, he said, he was hit by a second shot. His wife agrees.

"I immediately, when I was hit, I said, 'Oh, no, no, no.' And then I said, 'My God, they are going to kill us all,' " Connally testified.

But Mrs. Connally testified:

"As the first shot was hit, and I turned to look at the same time, I recall John saying, 'Oh, no, no, no.' Then there was a second shot, and it hit John, and as he recoiled to the right, just crumpled like a wounded animal to the right, he said, 'My God, they are going to kill us all.' "

If the governor is correct that he said "Oh, no, no, no" as soon as he was hit, and if Mrs. Connally is correct that he said this before she heard a second shot, then the commission's assumption stands on reasonable ground.

Viewing Frames

Had there not been the Zapruder film, it is possible that investigators might have reached a simple equation three wounds—three bullets.

Three used shells near the sixth-floor window of the depository fortified the conclusion there were three shots. And of the 205 persons who gave statements regarding the number of shots, 119 said they heard three, seven heard two or more and 39 heard "some." Eleven said they heard four and a handful said there were even more.

In analyzing the Zapruder film, the commission found that at the most there was a 1.6 second time span during which Kennedy and the governor were first wounded.

This was determined by measuring the operating speed of the camera. Zapruder's exposed 18.3 frames per second. Other evidence—the shells and rifle in the depository, the rifle seen protruding through the window, the nature of wounds, and so on—established that the sixth floor of the depository was one fixed point. The almost foot-by-foot movements of the presidential limousine—as demonstrated by the Zapruder movie and other photographs—provided other fixed points.

But the Zapruder film had one drawback: the progress of the limousine was obscured for approximately seven-tenths of a second by a road sign. So there is no pictorial evidence in the film showing exactly when Kennedy was first hit. The fatal shot is clearly seen later in the film.

Investigators positioning themselves in the sniper's window perch could determine when Kennedy or governor were probably in position to be targets. Since the foliage of an oak tree blocked the line of fire until the limousine had gone past the depository on its way to Stemmons Freeway, it was determined that the president could not have been struck at the base of the neck until Frame 210 of the Zapruder film. At this point, the limousine was behind the road sign, traveling at a rate of 11.2 miles an hour.

Weisberg says the computations are meaningless. He says there is evidence the president was hit earlier. He cites Zapruder's testimony in Vol. VII,Page 571. Zapruder was being questioned by Liebeler and was describing details regarding different frames. In reference to the movement of the limousine, Zapruder says "It reached about—I imagine it was around here—I heard the first shot and I saw the President lean over and grab himself."

"Lawyers know very well that such words as 'here' in testimony relating to a location reflect nothing on the printed page. When they want the testimony clear, they ask the witness to identify the spot meant by 'here.' Zapruder was not asked to explain where 'here' was," Weisberg says. And then he says:

Key Meaning

"But the startling meaning of Zapruder's testimony is this: He saw the first shot hit the president! He described the president's reaction to it. Had the president been obscured by the sign, Zapruder could have seen none of this. Therefore, the president was hit prior to Frame 210, prior to Frame 205, the last one that shows the top of his head. . . ."

Turn to page 574 of the same volume and there is Zapruder being specific. He is shown Frame 225, which is the first one in which the president can be seen as the limousine emerges from behind the sign. The president appears to have his hands moving toward his throat, and Zapruder, looking at this frame, says:

"Yes; it looks like he was hit —it seems—there—somewhere behind the sign. You see, he is still sitting upright."

Edward Jay Epstein tends to confuse the commission's interpretation of the Zapruder film by saying that because foliage of an oak tree blocked the view". . .the commission concluded that the earliest point the president could have been first hit was film Frame 207." No. If that happened, the president would have had a head wound then. Since his neck was blocked from a line of fire until Frame 210.

The commission did say that 207 was the FIRST point at which Connally could have been hit, consistent with his wounds.

But when then was the governor hit? On the basis of computations and the visible movements of the governor, it was determined that at the very latest, he could not have been hit after Frame 240. That would mean that if the president was hit at Frame 210 and the governor at Frame 240, it would have occurred within a span of 1.6 seconds.

This time element is important to the commission—and the critics.

A Good Shooter

Firing tests of the Mannlicher-Carcano showed that three master riflemen couldn't fire it and work the bolt and get off another round in less than 2.3 seconds.

If the time span between the Kennedy and Connally wounds, is reduced too radically, the critics argument might falter because the shorter time would support the plausibility of one bullet hitting both men. But the critics tend to support Connally's contention that he most likely was hit during Frames 231 to 234.

Arlen Specter, now district attorney of Philadelphia, was the commission counsel generally described as chief architect of the single bullet theory. He and Wesley Liebeler both say that the Zapruder film shows that on Frame 230 the governor's right arm can be seen above the side of the car and that he was probably in his delayed reaction to his wounds at that point. On that premise, there was little more than a second between the time the president and governor were hit. It can be reduced further when it is considered that the president may not have been hit until just before Frame 225.

Some Agreement

There is agreement among critics and commission about one thing the Zapruder film does show: the shot that killed the president. The impact of this hit is clear in Frame 313. The running time from Frame 210 to Frame 313 is 5.6 seconds.

The agreement ends there. Because of the limited firing capacity of the Mannlicher-Carcano, the critics say (1) the president and governor could not have been hit within 1.6 seconds by two rounds fired from that rifle, and (2) three bullets could not have been fired within 5.6 seconds.

Epstein, examining the firing tests by three experts, says they used stationery targets and that the time was measured from the sound of the first report to the sound of the third report and thus had unlimited time to aim the first shot.

"This is a significant factor. For example, if it is assumed it took the assassin one second to react, aim and pull the trigger, then he had only 4.6 seconds (not 5.6 seconds) to fire," Epstein says.

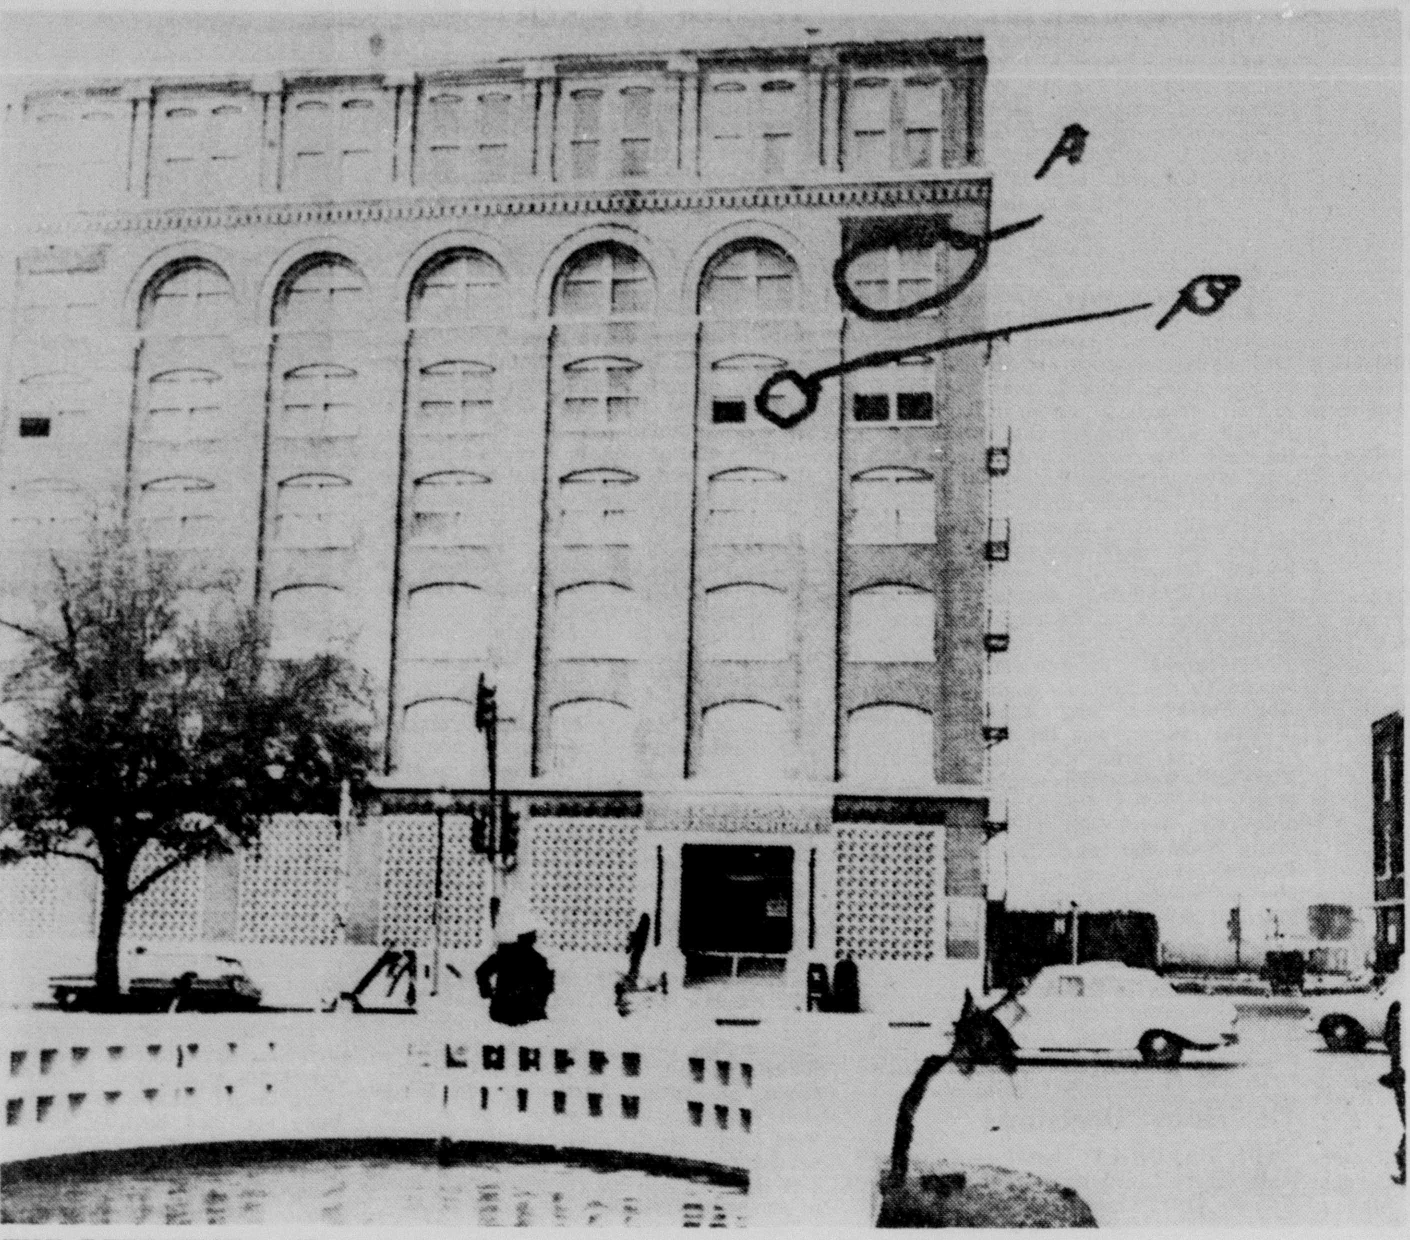
Mark Lane makes the same contention and adds to it a detailed attack in which he says the tests themselves were invalid, the ammunition was unreliable, the weapon was of poor quality and Oswald was an inferior marksman.

Wesley Liebeler says that "if you assume Lane is right on all of this, what does it change? The fact is that that rifle was owned by Oswald, he was in the depository, the empty shells were fired by that weapon, the recovered bullet was fired by that weapon. The best evidence that the rifle was capable of delivering the shots and that Oswald was capable of hitting the president and governor is that it did and he did."

Specter challenges the time interpretations by the critics, saying:

"The would-be critics of the commission report all make the same mistake in interpreting the possibility of fitting three shots in a 5.6 seconds time-span because they count the first shot.

"When you fire three times, the first shot is not taken into account in the timing sequence. Look at it this way: aim is taken and there is the first shot. Then 2.3 seconds passes while the bolt action is worked and the next shot is fired. Then another 2.3 seconds for the third shot. The three shots can be fired within 4.6 seconds range of time."



THE DEPOSITORY—Howard Brennan is photographed where he stood when he said he saw a gunman firing from the sixth floor of the Texas School Book Depository (A). Window marked B is where he saw one of several Negroes who were watching the motorcade. One of them testified he heard shells hitting the floor over his head. Brennan's testimony is a key factor in the critics' books as he saw more of Oswald's actions than any other witness. This photograph was an exhibit in the Warren Commission Report. (AP Wirephoto)

Another Element

Lane, Epstein and Weisberg also introduce another element in challenging the capability of the Mannlicher-Carcano: a fourth shot. Patently, the rifle as tested, could not have delivered four shots in 5.6 seconds. But where is their evidence? The commission considered such a possibility, but found no credible evidence for more than three shots.

It might seem that the commission would find added support in the firing demonstration by a British Royal Marines sergeant appearing on a BBC television show Jan. 30, 1967. Lane and Specter were there as participants in a debate about the controversy and saw the sergeant, using a Mannlicher-Carcano of the same vintage as Oswald's, aim at a target and get three rounds off in 2.6 seconds.

By that measure, it could have been possible that separate rounds could have hit the president and governor in close order. But if that happened, more riddles are posed: if one bullet alone went through the president's neck, how did it vanish without striking anyone else or anything else? If the governor was hit separately, what sort of wounds would he have suffered, and could they then

This was the bullet, in an almost undamaged condition, which was found in Parkland Memorial Hospital, where both the president and governor were taken. The commission says it is the bullet which passed through the president's neck and struck the governor in the chest, wrist and thigh.

Mark Lane describes it in a chapter entitled "Magic Bullet." Epstein calls it "The Stretcher Bullet." "The so-called 'found' bullet," Weisberg says, ". . .could, for example, have been planted in the hospital."

Experts put the bullet under scientific tests which they said proved it was fired by the Mannlicher-Carcano rifle.

The 6.5mm copper-jacketed bullet weighed 158.6 grains. Its standard weight would be 160-161 grains. This would mean that Bullet 399 lost between 1.4 and 2.4 grains.

The Detail

Lane and Epstein each cite three particular witnesses for their conclusion that Bullet 399 lost too little weight to have caused the wounds received by Connally. One is Col. Pierre Finck, one of the autopsy surgeons, who ruled out the bullet "for the reason that there are too many fragments described in that (Connally's) wrist." Another is Cmdr. James J. Humes, the chief autopsy pathologist, who testified "this missile is basically intact; its jacket appears to me to be intact, and I do not understand how it could possibly have left fragments in either of these locations (wrist and thigh)." A third is Dr. Robert Shaw, who operated on the governor's chest, and who testified there were three grains left in the governor's wrist.

These conflicts were cleared up in other testimony, but the commission was remiss in not resolving the conflicts when they arose.

What was it?

Dr. Charles F. Gregory, who treated the governor's wrist wound, testified X-rays disclosed "three metallic flakes" there, and he added: "I would estimate that they would be weighed in micrograms, that it is something less than the weight of a postage stamp." Not three grains, as Dr. Shaw said.

Thigh Wound

Dr. George T. Shires, who treated the thigh wound, testified no bullet fragments were recovered from it but that a small one, discernible on X-ray, remained in the femur. He was asked its weight, and answered "maybe a tenth of a grain."

Critic Harold Weisberg says that "the report refers to no fragments elsewhere. Shires says there is still one in the chest." But examine Shires' testimony in Vol. VI, Page 111, and you discover that Shires had just said any knowledge he had about damage to the rib was "only hearsay from Dr. Shaw, that's all." Shires was next asked whether he knew whether there were any bullet fragments in the chest, and he replied: "No, again except from postoperative X-rays, there is a small fragment remaining, but the initial fragments I think Dr. Shaw saw before I arrived."

"We saw no evidence of any metallic material in the X-ray that we had of the chest, and we found none during the operation," Shaw said. He had also testified that an X - ray made seven days after the shooting disclosed nothing except evidence of healing.

Shaw was responsible for the statement there were three grains of metal in the wrist wound. But as he stated in his testimony, he did "not accurately examine" this wound. That was Gregory's job.

None of the critics mentions, incidentally, that the discovery of Bullet 399 was not entirely unanticipated. For it occurred to Gregory during the operation that such a search should be made. He says in his testimony:

There was "some speculation on our part, on my part, which was voiced to someone that some search ought to be made in the governor's clothing or perhaps in the auto or some place, wherever he may have been, for the missile which produced this much damage and was not resident in him."

Bullet 399 had already been found, unknown to Gregory, when he said this. It was discovered shortly after 1 p.m., when the president was pronounced dead, on a stretcher in the corridor near the ground floor emergency rooms.

At first, it was thought this bullet came from the president's stretcher. And that fit in with the speculation that a bullet had hit the president in the back and exited during external heart massage. But the autopsy was to show that this didn't happen.

The commission determined that the bullet came from Connally's stretcher.

Epstein here goes back to Col. Finck, saying his testimony "cannot be dismissed merely because it collided with the hypothesis that Bullet 399 was found on Connally's stretcher. Since Finck's categorical statement that this bullet could not have caused Connally's wrist wound was never challenged, disputed, or corrected, it can only be concluded from the evidence that Bullet 399 did not come from Connally's stretcher."

Epstein should turn to Vol. V, page 90, where he will find the testimony of Dr. Alfred G. Olivier, an expert on bullet wounds.

This exchange took place:

"Q: Do you have an opinion as to whether, in fact, Bullet 399 did cause the wound on the governor's wrist, assuming if you will that it was the missile found on the governor's stretcher at Parkland Hospital?

"Dr. Olivier: I believe it was. That is my feeling."

There also was testimony from Drs. Shaw, Shires and Gregory that they thought one bullet caused all of Connally's wounds. Shires testified that Drs. Robert McClelland, Charles Baxter and Ralph Don Patman concurred.

The critics each say that because of the movement of the stretchers it could not be determined to a certainty that the bullet came from Connally's stretcher or didn't come from the president's stretcher. Darrell Tomlinson, the Parkland Hospital engineer who found the bullet, could not identify the stretcher positively. There were two stretchers in the corridor where the bullet was found.

Never Answered

Epstein says, "Since all stretchers were eventually returned to this area to be remade, the key question was: Was Kennedy's stretcher returned before or after the bullet was found? This question was never answered."

Not so.

Tomlinson had testified he had come to the elevator area at around 1 p.m. and found a stretcher which had some sheets on it. He pushed this stretcher from the elevator into the corridor. Then he took the elevator to the second floor, brought down a man who picked up two pints of blood, and returned with him to the second floor where Connally was in surgery. He then made several trips between the ground floor and second floor before discovering the bullet.

Nurse Diana Hamilton Bowron testified she was in Trauma Room 1 with the president until his body was taken off the stretcher and placed in a casket. The stretcher, she said, was stripped of its sheets and then wheeled into Trauma Room 2, which was empty.

Nurse Margaret M. Henchliffe gave similar testimony and was asked:

"Is it possible that the stretcher that Mr. Kennedy was on was rolled with the sheets on it down into the area near the elevator?"

"No sir."

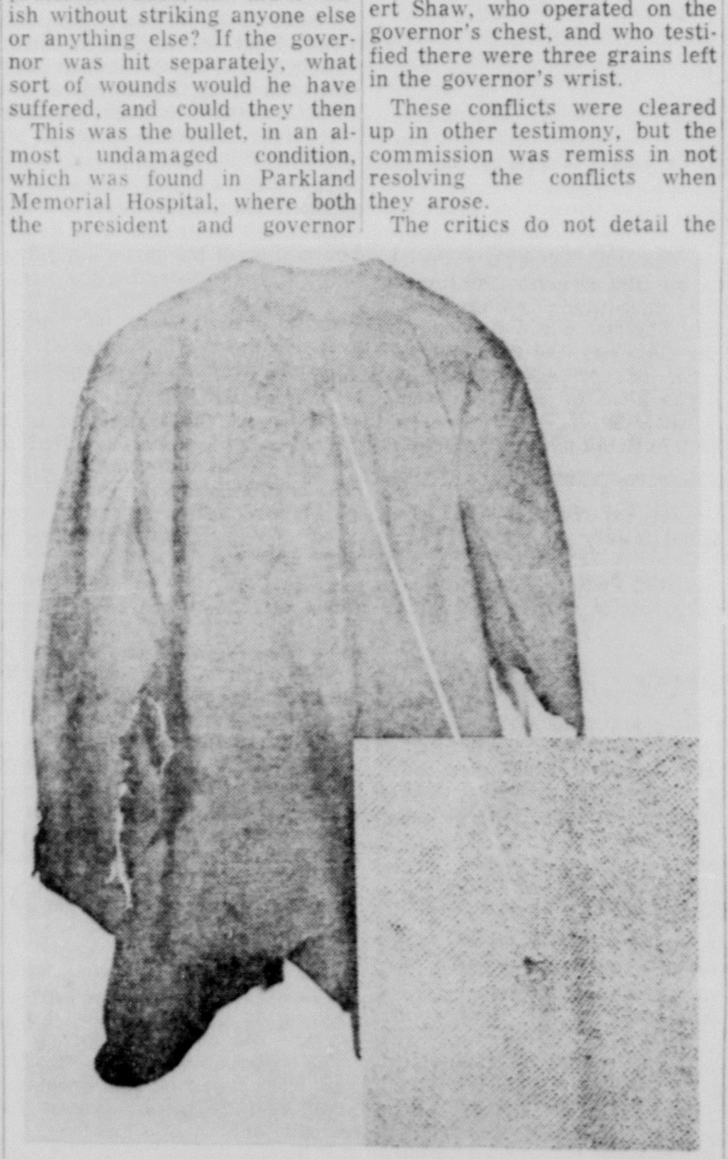
Nurse Doris Mae Nelson testified she was standing near the entrance to Trauma Room 2 when the president's stretcher, clear of sheets, was moved into it.

Exhibit 392, containing Parkland Hospital records, has a statement saying that the president was taken out of the hospital in a casket about 2 p.m. Testimony from the doctors and hospital personnel says the president remained on the stretcher until his body was placed in the casket. Wesley Liebeler, who has gone further into this question, says he has since determined from nurse Doris Nelson that the time was closer to 2:10 p.m. Either way, it would be long after the bullet had been discovered.



VIEW OF THE BACK OF PRESIDENT KENNEDY'S SUIT COAT SHOWING BULLET ENTRANCE HOLE.
EXHIBIT

CRITICS claim location of bullet hole is too far down in jacket to be consistent with a wound in the back which also exited from the wound in the front of the neck. Kennedy, however, had his arm upraised at the time he was shot. Some critics also said hole is measured from coat collar but do not mention measurement should be from the "top of" the collar. Some critics do not mention that the fabric of the hole was bent inwards. Also that the doctor's autopsy report failed to mention that fabric was found in Kennedy's backwound. (AP Wirephoto)

Was It Planted

Could it have been planted, as Weisberg suggests?

To buy that, it is necessary to conjure a being of superior intelligence, craftiness and prophesy who could have designed a bullet which would not be too heavy or light to conform to fragments found in the governor's wounds; that would have had the proper condition had it gone through the president's neck alone, and perhaps smashed into the limousine. And what if another bullet had also been found?

If there was one way to explode the single bullet theory, it remained in the results of the autopsy report, which will be examined in detail. If Lane, Epstein or Weisberg can demonstrate that this report is at fault and that the president never suffered a back-to-front neck wound, out goes the theory—and along with it the case against Oswald as the lone assassin.

So the autopsy doctors did their work. They examined. They drew diagrams. They photographed. They drew a dot. And now there are those that claim the dot and the photographs show the doctors didn't do their work at all. Or the commission didn't.

Warren Report Made Mistake

The Warren Commission did make a mistake. It had compassion.

There was some evidence which could have been made part of the record, but was not: X-rays and photographs taken at the autopsy of President John F. Kennedy.

Had these photographs been introduced as commission exhibits, the commission may have been bound to publish them—as it did with other nonsecret exhibits.

In the heartsick atmosphere after the assassination, there were those who felt this was unnecessary, that the evidence could be placed under lock and key for historians of the future and that the sworn testimony of autopsy surgeons would now be sufficient.

But who could have reckoned there would be the time of the critics? Who could have anticipated the commission findings would be painted with suspicion?

Other Acts

There were other acts and incidents which the critics could seize upon and emphasize and place out of focus. They did.

There was a pathologist who made an inexact dot on an autopsy sketch representing a bullet entry; there were two FBI agents who reported the speculative conversation of pathologists without knowing the whole story; there were the three pathologists who left a corroborating detail of evidence out of the autopsy report; there was a pathologist who burned a draft of the autopsy in his fireplace; there were harried reporters at a Parkland Memorial Hospital who failed to make clear that doctors were speculating in describing the president's throat wound as an entry wound.

The critics—most notably Mark Lane, Edward Jay Epstein and Harold Weisberg—drew their own meanings from these things to make the autopsy findings suspect or tarnished.

The autopsy report states conclusively that Kennedy was struck by two bullets. One went through his neck. It was a wound doctors say he would have survived. The second bullet struck his skull. It was fatal.

These findings are central to the single bullet theory. This theory is that a bullet went through the president's neck and went on to wound Gov. Connally. If not, the single bullet theory collapses. And so does the Warren report conclusion that Lee Harvey Oswald alone fired the bullets.

The critics have constructed their machine of destruction by selection of parts of testimony and parts of evidence from the Warren report. Some of it has been clever—and some absurd.

What could be more absurd than the way they see the holes in the president's suit jacket and shirt? Neither Lane, Epstein nor Weisberg challenges the Warren report evidence that there was a hole in the jacket "5 inches below the top of the collar and 1 inches to the right of the center back seam of the coat" and a hole in the shirt "5¾ inches below the top of the collar and 1⅛ inches to the right of the middle of the back of the shirt."

Weisberg lowers the hole a few inches by describing it in his book as "six inches down from the collar. Not in the neck." He drops the key words "top of."

Epstein, in his book, publishes photographs which show the garments on a hangar. The holes can be seen clearly. "These photographs. . .were omitted from the Warren report and the 26 volumes of supporting evidence," he says. He got them from the National Archives. But other pictures, not nearly as dramatic, are in the evidence, and the testimony is quite precise.

Seeing the holes through the eyes of Lane, Epstein and Weisberg, it might seem that the bullet which made them could not have hit the president in the base of the neck. But put a jacket and shirt on any grown man with reasonably well-developed shoulders, measure 5 inches below the top of the collar and a bit to the right of the seam, have him raise his right arm slightly (as the president's was) and mark the spot with a pencil point or chalk. Where does this touch the body? The base of the neck.

The precise location of the President's wounds is described in the autopsy report. But the decision not to introduce the autopsy X-rays and photographs — which would show those wounds—contributed to today's controversy. Who would have known three years ago that they would?

And who made the decision?

There are two major versions, both of which writers of this report have gleaned from members of the commission staff:

1—"The Chief Justice Earl Warren, who was chairman of the commission is a very humane and sensitive man. Out of deference to the Kennedy family, especially to Mrs. Kennedy, Caroline and John-John, he decided it would be awful if they were introduced as evidence and then published. He first determined informally that this evidence was not absolutely necessary because the autopsy pathologists could testify as to details," said one.

2—"There were members of the staff who out of trial experience felt that the X-rays and photos were vital documents in presenting evidence. There was a feeling that the chief recognized the value of this evidence but that the decision to keep them under seal came from Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, who was then the attorney general. It was Bobby's decision," said another.

No Comment

Neither the chief justice nor the senator will comment about this or any other aspect of the report. The only thing Sen. Kennedy has said publicly was a statement he made in Poland that he was satisfied that Oswald was the assassin.

While most staff members of the disbanded commission have refused to publicly answer the critics or defend the report, at least two—Joseph A. Ball of Long Beach, Calif., and Wesley J. Liebeler of Los Angeles—have said they felt from the beginning that the X-rays and photographs should have been introduced.

In interviews with 11 of the 15 counsel and four of the 10 staff members, the writers have learned that a majority now feel the secret label should be removed because of the doubt created by the critics. None thinks that the commission need be re-established. One suggestion was that some nongovernmental body, such as a group of university presidents or a law society, should select forensic pathologists to view and analyze the evidence.

Several agreed with the idea expressed by one former assistant counsel:

"I think they should be open to any qualified expert who wants to see them whether he is chosen by a college president or Mark Lane himself."

While the autopsy X-rays and photographs were not introduced formally, it does not mean that they were not seen—and that they did not show the wounds as described in the autopsy report. The critics make the point that the photographs were handed undeveloped to the Secret Service and that they were transmitted that way eventually to the care of Robert Kennedy.

Albert Jenner, an assistant counsel now in Chicago, says he saw some of the autopsy photographs. Arlen Specter, currently district attorney of Philadelphia, has stated having seen at least one purported color photograph.

Were Examined

They also were examined and authenticated last Nov. 1 by four men intimately connected with the autopsy.

Cmdr. James J. Humes, senior pathologist at Bethesda Naval Hospital; Cmdr. J. Thornton Boswell, chief pathologist at Bethesda; Capt. John Ebersole, the radiologist who took the X-rays, and John T. Stringer Jr., a medical photographer at the National Naval Medical Center, who took the photographs.

"We authenticated each item," says Boswell, who is now in private practice. "As Dr. Humes looked over my shoulder, I initialed each of the color and black and white photographs. Capt. Ebersole initialed each of the X-rays. There are various views of all the wounds, as we described them, and some of the photographs were taken so that the president's face is visible."

The National Archives says there are 26 color and 25 black and white photographs and 14 X-rays.

"The X-rays and photographs were taken from Dr. Humes and given to the Secret Service; indeed the photographs were seized before they were developed. Humes testified that not even he had seen the photographs ostensibly taken to assist him and the other doctors."

Then on Page 62, he refers to them again, saying ". . . federal police agents confiscated the crucial photographs and X-rays. . . ." Confiscated? Seized?

Humes testified they were "turned over" to the Secret Service, but nowhere does he say they were demanded or that he objected to releasing them.

Lane need not have been so evasive or uncertain as to why the photographs were made—"ostensibly to assist him (Dr. Humes) and the other doctors", as he puts it. By his construction, it would seem the photos were taken to help the doctors that night of the autopsy.

"The X-rays were developed in our X-ray department on the spot that evening, because we had to see those right then as part of our examination, but the photographs were made for the record and for other purposes."

Lane, Epstein and Weisberg see something highly suspicious in the satement of Humes that there was an autopsy "draft I personally burned in the fireplace of my recreation room."

In two of three references to this, Lane drops the word "draft." On Page 66, it becomes "his admission that he destroyed original notes relating to the autopsy." On Page 385, Lane says: "Destroyed evidence included the original notes prepared and then burned by Commander Humes after the autopsy."

Autopsy Report

Epstein says Humes "destroyed by burning certain preliminary notes relating to" the autopsy. "Draft" was dropped.

Epstein then later raises a question about the original autopsy report.

Weisberg writes: "If the commission had any questions about the burning of any kind of historic papers, especially undescribed 'preliminary draft notes', the transcript does not reveal it."

No one seems to wonder why Humes need have told anyone about it since he did it while he was alone in the privacy of his home. If he wanted to conceal something, would he raise suspicion by certifying that he burned a preliminary draft he had written of the autopsy report?

The critics make this draft seem part of the autopsy notes themselves. Those notes are identified as part of commission's Exhibit 397. And if the commission wanted to hide any revisions in the autopsy report which it published, why then would it have published the autopsy report in Humes' handwriting which shows those revisions?

There apparently was one corroborating piece of evidence which was inexplicably left out of the autopsy report, the writers learned. That was the result of a microscopic examination of tissue removed from the rear neck wound.

"We conducted microscopic examination of tissue removed from the neck wound area and found foreign substances such as fiber particles," says Boswell.

This would further show that the bullet which made the holes in Kennedy's jacket and shirt carried some material with it into the neck.

Why wasn't this in the autopsy report?

"It was an unfortunate oversight. It was not intentional," Boswell says. "I would say that three years ago we didn't presume that it would have been necessary to substantiate our findings."

Boswell contributed to the controversy regarding just what the autopsy sketch shows because it was he who had placed a dot—indicating the entry of a bullet—in an inexact spot. It is below the shoulder and to the right of the spine.

The critics treat this sketch as a star exhibit. And it is on this dot they have stood pat.

They claim it as proof that there was a shallow back wound, and not a neck wound. And that would mean that the throat wound was an entrance wound. And THAT would mean another firing position and another assassin.

The sketch which Lane, Epstein and Weisberg refer to is the "Autopsy Descriptive Sheet," which is part of Commission Exhibit 397, the written draft of the autopsy report. This sheet is a standard form—NMS PATH 8 (1-63)—and has the outlined anatomical form of the male body in front and rear views. It was one of the working papers during the autopsy.

Lane, Epstein and Weisberg each are in error in saying that the marking on the outlines were made by Humes. On what is this based? Humes did not testify he made the marks. In fact, he testified, regarding this sketch and another hand-drawn sketch: "I notice now that the handwriting in some instances is not my own, and it is either that of Cmdr. Boswell or Col. Finck."

Boswell has since cleared up this question. He made the marks. He admits the dot is not precise.

"The dot was just meant to imply where the point of entry was," he explains. "The notes describing the point of entry are near this mark and give precise measurements giving the exact location of the wound."

It is a hallmark of the critic's general scholarship that in zeroing in on this sketch none of them points out that although the dot is wrong, the description is clear: 14 centimeters down from the right mastoid process, which is the bony point behind the right ear, and 14 centimeters in from the right acromium, which is the tip of the shoulder joint. That point, on a man of Kennedy's size, is at the base of the neck.

THESE ARE THREE of the critics of the Warren Report. Leo Sauvage, Mark Lane and Edward Epstein. (AP Wirephoto)

And so the critics plunge ahead constructing their case against the Warren report.

Here's Epstein, handling the descriptive sheets:

"The face sheet shows front and back diagrams of the president's body." (Wrong. They are outlines of a human male and not specifically the president).

Weisberg refers to this same material as "suppressed." He points out that the sheets were not published in the Warren report, which was a summation of evidence. But they are in Vol. XVII, Page 45 of the supporting volumes. Suppressed?

To Mark Lane that errant dot is proof of a below the shoulder back wound. He constructs a conclusion that the commission recognized this but had to evade it because it would upset the lone assassin conclusion.

Back Entrance

"A back entrance wound was therefore inconvenient, and, though evidently corroborated beyond doubt by the Humes autopsy diagram and corroborated by the holes in the jacket and shirt, it disappeared," Lane contends. But as the report says, it was never there—except to such scrutinizers as Lane.

Weisberg goes further. Insisting that the error admitted by Boswell is no error at all, he says:

"Unless the commission is prepared to prove that this original working paper of the autopsy is wrong—not just a little wrong but grossly and inexcusably wrong—wrong in a manner that can never be expected from such eminent experts in both pathology and forensic medicine, its entire report is a monstrous fake!"

By the same logic, showing the errors and wrongs of "Whitewash"—as the writers are doing here—would amount to proving Weisberg is right in his charges.

Lane also saw something else in the autopsy diagrams. There is an arrow on the back of the head, which is very plain. Lane sees it this way:

"The diagrams . . show that Humes apparently believed a bullet to have exited at the left side of the president's skull, for he placed an arrow pointing to the left upon a mark evidently signifying a bullet entry wound."

How could he know what Humes "apparently believed"? No such stated belief is to be found in Humes' testimony. And Lane has admitted in a published interview that he wrote Humes but received no reply.

What does it signify?

"The arrow is meant to imply that this wound of entry went from external to internal in an upward and inward slanting direction," says Boswell.

The Bullet

Epstein says there is other evidence that a bullet never went through the president's neck from back to front. For this conclusion, he turns to the autopsy itself.

"The fact that the autopsy surgeons were not able to find a path for the bullet is further evidence that the bullet did not pass completely through the president's body," Epstein says.

One of the things on which he bases this is Humes' testimony that pathologists were unable "to take probes and have them satisfactorily fall through any path at this point." But Epstein leaves out Humes' statement that "attempts to probe in the vicinity of this wound were unsuccessful without fear of making a false passage."

The path was determined during the autopsy through recognized pathological procedure in which it was discovered there was bruising of the apex, or tip of the lung, bruising of the parietal pleura, or membrane lining the lung cage, and bleeding near the strap muscles between which the bullet passed. The hole at the back of the neck was characteristic of an entry wound. The hole at the throat did not then have the characteristics of an exit wound because it had been used in Parkland Hospital for a tracheotomy when doctors were trying to give the mortally wounded president an air passage.

But Lane, Weisberg and Epstein won't buy that, not when they have the FBI summary report of Dec. 9, 1963, to play with.

Two FBI agents, James W. Sibert and Francis X. O'Neill, were in the autopsy room. So were some Secret Service agents.

The FBI summary report, which was not published in the Warren report or its supporting volumes—thereby providing other fodder for the critics—said, in part:

"Medical examination of the president's body revealed that one of the bullets had entered just below his shoulder to the right of the spinal column at an angle of 45-60 degrees downward, that there was no point of exit, and that the bullet was not in the body."

Lane says this report had to be the correct version of the autopsy finding.

"Clearly Hoover (FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover) would not presume to summarize the 'medical examination of the president's body'—the autopsy report—in so vital a document unless the autopsy report had been studied carefully. The undated autopsy report prepared by the military physicians and published by the commission, however, does not permit the conclusions offered by the FBI. Indeed it flatly contradicts them."

Was the report updated?

In a certificate dated Nov. 24, 1963, which is part of Commission Exhibit 397, containing the written autopsy report, Humes certifies that "all working papers associated with Naval Medical School Autopsy Report A63-272 have remained in my personal custody at all times. Autopsy notes and the holograph draft of the final report were handed to commanding officer, U.S. Naval Medical School, at 1700, 24 November, 1963."

Also, the FBI did not receive the autopsy report until Dec. 23, 1963. So the FBI couldn't have given it careful study, as Lane says.

And when the FBI did see it and turned out a supplemental report, Jan. 13, 1964, no change was made because of the FBI practice and tradition of reporting what its agents say.

This Jan. 13 report said, "Medical examination of the president's body revealed that the bullet which entered his back had penetrated to a distance of less than a finger length."

As J. Edgar Hoover was to explain later:

FBI Reports

"The FBI reports record oral statements made by autopsy physicians while the examination was being conducted and before all the facts were known. They reported that Dr. James J. Humes, chief autopsy surgeon, located what appeared to be a bullet hole in the back below the shoulder and probed it to the end of the opening with a finger. The examining physicians were eventually were able to trace the path of the bullet through the body."

One technique which the critics use to discredit the autopsy report is what might be called reverse English.

In a usual medical situation, if a person died during an operation, say for removal of a wart on his finger, the cause of death would be determined by an autopsy. If the autopsy attributed death to heart failure, critics such as Lane, Weisberg and Epstein—if they are judged by their performance—would say ignore the autopsy, look at the wart.

This is what they've done on focusing on what happened when the president was taken to Parkland Memorial Hospital. Again, they show how they pick and chose to get what they did—an entrance wound at the throat.

Lane needs this to support his argument that there was a shot (or shots) fired from the grassy knoll—the greensward parallel to the presidential motorcade—rather than solely from Oswald's perch on the sixth floor of the Texas School Book Depository.

"Although every doctor who had seen the throat wound prior to the tracheotomy and expressed a contemporaneous opinion had said that it was a wound of entrance." Lane says on Page 53 of his book, the commission chose to dismiss these as erroneous conclusions stemming from a doctor's observations to the press.

Let's see.

Dr. Charles J. Carrico. Lane doesn't name him as one of the doctors saying there was an entrance wound at the throat. But Carrico was the first doctor to see he president. In a written report dated at 4:20 p.m. on the day of the assassination, Carrico described the wound as a "small penetrating wound of the neck in the lower 1-3." "Penetrating" in medical terminology can mean either entrance or exit. In his testimony, Carrico further said that "not having completely evaluated all the wounds, traced out the course of the bullets, this wound would have been compatible with either entrance or exit wounds depending upon the size, the velocity, the tissue structure and so forth."

Dr. Malcolm Perry. He performed the tracheotomy, so he saw the wound before it had been touched. In a press conference in which he had the burden of trying to answer most of the questions ("It was bedlam," he later testified) he was quoted as saying the throat wound was an entry wound.

Asked about what questions he was asked and what replies he made, Perry testified:

"Well, there were numerous questions asked, all the questions I cannot remember of course. Specifically, the thing that seemed to be of most interest at that point was actually trying to get me to speculate as to the direction of the bullets, the number of bullets, and the exact cause of death.

"The first two questions I could not answer, and my reply to them was that I did not know, if there were one or two bullets, and I could not categorically state about the nature of the neck wound, whether it was an entrance or an exit wound, not having examined the president further—I could not comment on other injuries."

The Wound

Dr. Ronald C. Jones. His report described the wound as an entrance wound. He testified as to his reasons for this belief and Lane quotes his testimony from Page 55, Vol VI—up to a point, an important point. In Lane's book, Jones says in part:

"You'd expect more of an explosive type of exit wound, with more tissue destruction than this appeared to have' " Three words were then dropped after "have." They were ". . on superficial examination."

Lane doesn't mention that none of the doctors knew there was a wound at the back of the neck.

Lane and Weisberg also emphasize that the little entrance hole on the back of the president's skull was not seen by the doctors. Lane's treatment of this deserves a close look.

"These eight physicians examined the right occipital-parietal area; each testified that he did not see a bullet hole which the commission said was there," Lane writes. Then he gives this version of the questioning of Dr. William Kemp Clark, director of neurological surgery at Parkland Memorial Hospital:

"Q. Now you described the massive wound at the top of the President's head, with the brain protruding; did you observe any other hole or wound on the president's head?"

"Dr. Clark: No, sir; I did not."

And that is where Lane stops. But not Clark. His answer was:

"No, sir; I did not. This could have easily been hidden in the blood and hair."

None of the seven other doctors saw such a hole. But none said there was no such hole. And there is good reason—a reason the critics elect to ignore:

The president remained on his back, with great care taken not to move his head, all the time he was at the hospital.

Why wasn't the president turned over at Parkland?

Carrico testified:

"This man was in obvious extreme distress and any more thorough inspection would have involved several minutes—well, several—considerable time which at this juncture was not available. A thorough inspection would have involved washing and cleansing the back, and this is not practical in treating an acutely injured patient. You have to determine which things, which are immediately life threatening and cope with them, before attempting to evaluate the full extent of the injuries.

"Q. Did you ever have occasion to look at the president's back?

"Dr. Carrico. No sir. Before—well, in trying to treat an acutely injured patient, you have to establish an airway, adequate ventilation and you have to establish adequate circulation. Before this was accomplished the president's cardiac activity had ceased and closed cardiac massage was instituted, which made it impossible to inspect his back."

Was this done after the president died? No. Not one doctor ever said this was done. Why not, Carrico was asked.

"I suppose nobody really had the heart to do it."

The Book Depository And The Long 'Grassy Knoll'

It happened in a small park called Dealey Plaza, named in honor of a famous Dallas publisher. Its central landmark used to be a bronze statue of that citizen, George B. Dealey. Now there are others: the yellow brick mass of the Texas School Book Depository and, close by, an embankment now called "the grassy knoll"

The Warren Commission decided it was from there the assassin fired.

Critics have decided it was from there an assassin fired.

The grassy knoll is a slope of greensward running southwesterly away from the Texas School Book Depository. There is an arcade on its ridge, then a picket fence, shoulder high. The knoll runs along the north side of Elm Street on which Kennedy was slain. It ends at a railroad overpass which Elm Street goes beneath.

Several Saw

Several men on the overpass saw smoke near the fence as the president fell. If the smoke came from the assassin's rifle, Kennedy could not have been shot in the back, as the autopsy doctors decided. It is as simple as that: he was facing obliquely toward the knoll.

If he was shot from the knoll, the throat wound must be one of entry, not exit even though doctors said it was of exit. The fabric of the hole in the back of his jacket could not have been bent inwards, even though it was. Gov. Connally could not have been shot in the back by the same bullet, even though doctors said he was. Lee Harvey Oswald would not have been a lone assassin.

The commission gave less attention to the knoll than it did the overpass. It ruled out the overpass in favor of the depository as the assassin's lair for many reasons, one being that no one on the overpass saw a rifle being fired from there. No one saw a rifle fired from the knoll, either.

Yet the knoll abides. It does so because critics stress what people saw and heard there. They have not, however, stressed everything that people heard or saw there. Or did not hear or see.

Consider S. M. Holland.

Holland was standing on an overpass above Elm Street as the motorcade approached. The grassy knoll was slightly to his left in the foreground. The Texas School Book Depository, from which the commission says the shots were fired, was also slightly to his left but behind the presidential limousine.

Holland heard a noise like a firecracker. "I looked toward the arcade and trees and saw a puff of smoke come from the trees." That is what Holland told sheriff's deputies right after the assassination, and that is how Mark Lane quotes him in "Rush to Judgment."

Puff Of Smoke

But there is more to the sentence, although Lane does not include it. It reads: ". . . And I heard three more shots after the first shot, but that was the only puff of smoke I saw."

If one puff of smoke suggests someone shot a gun from the knoll, what does the absence of three subsequent puffs suggest? The jury, the reading public, was not asked to decide. Mark Lane did it for them. He decided not to raise the question.

Epstein wrote ". . .Six out of seven of these witnesses (on the overpass) who gave an opinion as to the source of the shots indicated that the shots had come from a 'grassy knoll'." They did?

This is what they say in the report volumes.

Simmons (paraphrased by the FBI): "(He) advised that it was his opinion that the shots came from the direction of the Texas School Book Depository."

Miller: "It sounded like it came from the, I would say from right there in the car. Would be to my left, the way I was looking at him, over toward that incline (the knoll)."

Reilly: "(The shots came from that) park where all the shrubs is up there, to the north of Elm Street, up the slope."

Foster: "It (the sound) came from back in the corner of Elm and Houston streets." (The depository is at the corner of Elm and Houston.)

Holland, who also picked the knoll, testified he immediately ran to that area. He saw no one suspicious.

Those are the six who "indicated the shots came from a 'grassy knoll'." Two, actually, picked the depository area. One who indicated the knoll also thought the shots sounded like they came from Kennedy's car.

Besides Holland, Lane says six others on the overpass saw smoke. Austin Miller is one. In an affidavit Nov. 22, 1963, he said he saw "smoke or steam" coming from the knoll area. When Miller was later questioned by commission counsel, Lane writes, Miller was "dismissed before he could mention the crucial observation contained in his affidavit."

Actually, at the end of his interrogation, during which he indeed did not mention any smoke, Miller was asked if he could add anything "that might be of any help to the commission as to the investigation of the assassination."

Maybe he forgot the smoke, maybe not. But it is hardly accurate to convey the impression that the commission had turned Miller off before he could give testimony against the depository theory by "dismissing" him.

White Smoke

Lane goes on. "Clemon Johnson told FBI agents that he had observed 'white smoke'." That is ALL he says about Clemon Johnson. But Johnson's full statement as paraphrased by the FBI was: "Johnson stated that white smoke was observed near the pavilion (arcade) but he felt this smoke came from a motorcycle abandoned near the spot by Dallas policemen." Who, does it seem, is dismissing what?

The other four who Lane says saw smoke—Richard Dodd, Walter Windborn, Simmons and Murphy—were interviewed by him in 1966. Whatever they told Lane then, only one—Simmons—mentioned smoke to the FBI when questioned during the assassination investigation.

Simmons said he thought he saw "exhaust fumes" of smoke near the embankment in front of the Texas School Book Depository. He ran toward that building with a policeman, first looking over the knoll fence. Two years later the "exhaust fumes" by the depository have become "a puff of smoke" near the fence. Lane saves the reader the trouble of having to decide which recollection is accurate. The first, given to the FBI, is not included in his book.

Whether they saw smoke or not, it apparently did not aid Dodd or Windborn in placing the source of the shots. They told the FBI they couldn't tell where they came from.

There are three other aspects of smoke, not dwelled upon by Lane or Epstein in connection with the knoll.

1—There was a steam pipe in the area.

3—NONE of the approximately 200 assassination witnesses questioned other than the four on the overpass mentions seeing ANY smoke, anywhere. (Lane says only those on the overpass could see smoke from the knoll because of its elevation and the bushes around it. But those persons on the south side of Elm Street should have seen it, if there was any. They, not those on the overpass, were in a direct line of fire. None of them mentioned smoke.)

Campbell was standing in front of the depository, as Lane mentions. He does NOT mention that at his elbow stood Mrs. Robert Reid, a fellow employe. Lane does NOT mention that Mrs. Reid testified:

"I turned to Mr. Campbell and I said, 'Oh, my goodness, I am afraid those (sounds) came from our building' because it sounded like they came just so directly over my head."

Two witnesses. Two versions. Both appear in the Warren report. Only one does in "Rush to Judgment".

"Many other persons scattered throughout Dealey Plaza (through which Elm Street runs and the knoll and depository overlook) placed the origin of the shots (on the knoll)," Lane observes. And so they did. Jean Hill did. Billie Joe Lovelady did. William Newman did. John and Faye Chism did. Roy Truly did.

At least 34 people did, although it is difficult to pinpoint from some of their statements. It is also not always easy to pinpoint the more than 60 witnesses who thought the shots came from the depository.

Such as:

Charles Hester—"It appeared to be a building on the corner of Elm and Houston streets."

T. E. Moore—"From a high area."

Allan Sweatt—"Vicinity of Elm and Houston."

Or the 15 people of the motorcade itself who thought the shots came from the "right rear."

Since almost none of such witnesses is mentioned in Lane's book, perhaps that is why he felt no need to mention such others whose testimony is helpful in locating the source of the shots.

Such as Mrs. Earle Cabell, the Dallas mayor's wife, who looked towards the depository at the sound of shots and "saw a projection" in an upper window. Or Bob Jackson, a press photographer, who also looked up at the depository and told colleagues in a motorcade press car "there is the gun!" Or James Crawford who looked up at the sound of the third shot and "saw a movement" in the southeast window of the sixth floor of the depository and told a friend "if those were shots, they came from that window" and then advised police to search around some boxes he saw in the window. Police did. They found three rifle shells that were fired by a rifle also found on that floor—by that rifle and no other. Bullet fragments found in Kennedy's car also came from that rifle and no other.

Some Evidence

Maybe Lane had the Mrs. Cabells and Bob Jacksons in mind when he said there is "some evidence" shots came from the depository. There is "some evidence. No one saw a puff smoke there. Only a rifleman.

Epstein thinks there is "compelling" evidence shots were fired from the depository. But he faults the commission for not looking more thoroughly into the possibility of the knoll. He asks why the commission tried not call the 10 witnesses who stood between the knoll and the president's car because nine of come from the knoll directly behind them."

If the commission did not call them, it did have their statements.

This is what they said:

A. J. Millican: He said he heard three shots from the depository area, two from the arcade and three more from the arcade but further away.

Charles Hester: He said "the shots sounded like they (y) definitely came from in or around the (depository) building."

Abraham Zapruder: "I thought it (the shots) came from in back of me. Of course you can't tell when something is in line—it could be from anywhere.

"Q: Did you form any opinion about the direction from which the shots came by the sound . . ?"

"A: No, there was too much reverberation. There was an echo which gave me sound all over."

Mary Elizabeth Woodward: She told the FBI the shots came "from possibly behind her" or from the overpass. "However,

POLICE BRANDISH RIFLE shortly after it was found near sniper's perch in book depository. Critics suggest the gun was a plant because police first said it was a Mauser and later said it was an Italian Mannlicher-Carcano, which, in fact, has a Mauser type action. Officer holding gun is J. C. Day, Dallas fingerprint expert. A palmprint of Oswald was later found on the barrel.

Seeing the holes through the eyes of Lane, Epstein and Weisberg, it might seem that the bullet which made them could not have hit the president in the base of the neck. But put a jacket and shirt on any grown man with reasonably well-developed shoulders, measure 5 inches below the top of the collar and a bit to the right of the seam, have him raise his right arm slightly (as the president's was) and mark the spot with a pencil point or chalk. Where does this touch the body? The base of the neck.

The precise location of the President's wounds is described in the autopsy report. But the decision not to introduce the autopsy X-rays and photographs — which would show those wounds—contributed to today's controversy. Who would have known three years ago that they would?

And who made the decision?

There are two major versions, both of which writers of this report have gleaned from members of the commission staff:

1—"The Chief Justice Earl Warren, who was chairman of the commission is a very humane and sensitive man. Out of deference to the Kennedy family, especially to Mrs. Kennedy, Caroline and John-John, he decided it would be awful if they were introduced as evidence and then published. He first determined informally that this evidence was not absolutely necessary because the autopsy pathologists could testify as to details," said one.

2—"There were members of the staff who out of trial experience felt that the X-rays and photos were vital documents in presenting evidence. There was a feeling that the chief recognized the value of this evidence but that the decision to keep them under seal came from Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, who was then the attorney general. It was Bobby's decision," said another.

No Comment

Neither the chief justice nor the senator will comment about this or any other aspect of the report. The only thing Sen. Kennedy has said publicly was a statement he made in Poland that he was satisfied that Oswald was the assassin.

While most staff members of the disbanded commission have refused to publicly answer the critics or defend the report, at least two—Joseph A. Ball of Long Beach, Calif., and Wesley J. Liebeler of Los Angeles—have said they felt from the beginning that the X-rays and photographs should have been introduced.

In interviews with 11 of the 15 counsel and four of the 10 staff members, the writers have learned that a majority now feel the secret label should be removed because of the doubt created by the critics. None thinks that the commission need be re-established. One suggestion was that some nongovernmental body, such as a group of university presidents or a law society, should select forensic pathologists to view and analyze the evidence.

Several agreed with the idea expressed by one former assistant counsel:

"I think they should be open to any qualified expert who wants to see them whether he is chosen by a college president or Mark Lane himself."

While the autopsy X-rays and photographs were not introduced formally, it does not mean that they were not seen—and that they did not show the wounds as described in the autopsy report. The critics make the point that the photographs were handed undeveloped to the Secret Service and that they were transmitted that way eventually to the care of Robert Kennedy.

Albert Jenner, an assistant counsel now in Chicago, says he saw some of the autopsy photographs. Arlen Specter, currently district attorney of Philadelphia, has stated having seen at least one purported color photograph.

Were Examined

They also were examined and authenticated last Nov. 1 by four men intimately connected with the autopsy:

Cmdr. James J. Humes, senior pathologist at Bethesda Naval Hospital; Cmdr. J. Thornton Boswell, chief pathologist at Bethesda; Capt. John Ebersole, the radiologist who took the X-rays, and John T. Stringer Jr., a medical photographer at the National Naval Medical Center, who took the photographs.

"We authenticated each item," says Boswell, who is now in private practice. "As Dr. Humes looked over my shoulder, I initialed each of the color and black and white photographs. Capt. Ebersole initialed each of the X-rays. There are various views of all the wounds, as we described them, and some of the photographs were taken so that the president's face is visible."

The National Archives says there are 26 color and 25 black and white photographs and 14 X-rays.

Mark Lane surrounds the episode regarding the X-rays and photographs with language unsupported by testimony. He says, on Page 60 of the hardcover edition of his book:

"The X-rays and photographs were taken from Dr. Humes and given to the Secret Service; indeed the photographs were seized before they were developed. Humes testified that not even he had seen the photographs ostensibly taken to assist him and the other doctors."

Then on Page 62, he refers to them again, saying ". . .federal police agents confiscated the crucial photographs and X-rays. . . ." Confiscated? Seized?

Humes testified they were "turned over" to the Secret Service, but nowhere does he say they were demanded or that he objected to releasing them.

Lane need not have been so evasive or uncertain as to why the photographs were made—"ostensibly to assist him (Dr. Humes) and the other doctors", as he puts it. By his construction, it would seem the photos were taken to help the doctors that night of the autopsy.

"The X-rays were developed in our X-ray department on the spot that evening, because we had to see those right then as part of our examination, but the photographs were made for the record and for other purposes."

Lane, Epstein and Weisberg see something highly suspicious in the satement of Humes that there was an autopsy "draft I personally burned in the fireplace of my recreation room."

In two of three references to this, Lane drops the word "draft." On Page 66, it becomes "his admission that he destroyed original notes relating to the autopsy." On Page 385, Lane says: "Destroyed evidence included the original notes prepared and then burned by Commander Humes after the autopsy."

Autopsy Report

Epstein says Humes "destroyed by burning certain preliminary notes relating to" the autopsy. "Draft" was dropped.

Epstein then later raises a question about the original autopsy report.

Weisberg writes: "If the commission had any questions about the burning of any kind of historic papers, especially undescribed 'preliminary draft notes', the transcript does not reveal it."

No one seems to wonder why Humes need have told anyone about it since he did it while he was alone in the privacy of his home. If he wanted to conceal something, would he raise suspicion by certifying that he burned a preliminary draft he had written of the autopsy report?

The critics make this draft seem part of the autopsy notes themselves. Those notes are identified as part of commission's Exhibit 397. And if the commission wanted to hide any revisions in the autopsy report which it published, why then would it have published the autopsy report in Humes' handwriting which shows those revisions?

There apparently was one corroborating piece of evidence which was inexplicably left out of the autopsy report, the writers learned. That was the result of a microscopic examination of tissue removed from the rear neck wound.

"We conducted microscopic examination of tissue removed from the neck wound area and found foreign substances such as fiber particles," says Boswell.

This would further show that the bullet which made the holes in Kennedy's jacket and shirt carried some material with it into the neck.

Why wasn't this in the autopsy report?

"It was an unfortunate oversight. It was not intentional," Boswell says. "I would say that three years ago we didn't presume that it would have been necessary to substantiate our findings."

Boswell contributed to the controversy regarding just what the autopsy sketch shows because it was he who had placed a dot— indicating the entry of a bullet—in an inexact spot. It is below the shoulder and to the right of the spine.

The critics treat this sketch as a star exhibit. And it is on this dot they have stood pat.

They claim it as proof that there was a shallow back wound, and not a neck wound. And that would mean that the throat wound was an entrance wound. And THAT would mean another firing position and another assassin.

The sketch which Lane, Epstein and Weisberg refer to is the "Autopsy Descriptive Sheet," which is part of Commission Exhibit 397, the written draft of the autopsy report. This sheet is a standard form—NMS PATH 8 (1-63)—and has the outlined anatomical form of the male body in front and rear views. It was one of the working papers during the autopsy.

Lane, Epstein and Weisberg each are in error in saying that the marking on the outlines were made by Humes. On what is this based? Humes did not testify he made the marks. In fact, he testified, regarding this sketch and another hand-drawn sketch: "I notice now that the handwriting in some instances is not my own, and it is either that of Cmdr. Boswell or Col. Finck."

Boswell has since cleared up this question. He made the marks. He admits the dot is not precise.

"The dot was just meant to imply where the point of entry was," he explains. "The notes describing the point of entry are near this mark and give precise measurements giving the exact location of the wound."

It is a hallmark of the critic's general scholarship that in zeroing in on this sketch none of them points out that although the dot is wrong, the description is clear: 14 centimeters down from the right mastoid process, which is the bony point behind the right ear, and 14 centimeters in from the right acromium, which is the tip of the shoulder joint. That point, on a man of Kennedy's size, is at the base of the neck.

THESE ARE THREE of the critics of the Warren Report. Leo Sauvage, Mark Lane and Edward Epstein. (AP Wirephoto)

And so the critics plunge ahead constructing their case against the Warren report.

Here's Epstein, handling the descriptive sheets:

"The face sheet shows front and back diagrams of the president's body." (Wrong. They are outlines of a human male and not specifically the president).

Weisberg refers to this same material as "suppressed." He points out that the sheets were not published in the Warren report, which was a summation of evidence. But they are in Vol. XVII, Page 45 of the supporting volumes. Suppressed?

To Mark Lane that errant dot is proof of a below the shoulder back wound. He constructs a conclusion that the commission recognized this but had to evade it because it would upset the lone assassin conclusion.

Back Entrance

"A back entrance wound was therefore inconvenient, and, though evidently corroborated beyond doubt by the Humes autopsy diagram and corroborated by the holes in the jacket and shirt, it disappeared," Lane contends. But as the report says, it was never there—except to such scrutinizers as Lane.

Weisberg goes further. Insisting that the error admitted by Boswell is no error at all, he says:

"Unless the commission is prepared to prove that this original working paper of the autopsy is wrong—not just a little wrong but grossly and inexcusably wrong—wrong in a manner that can never be expected from such eminent experts in both pathology and forensic medicine, its entire report is a monstrous fake!"

By the same logic, showing the errors and wrongs of "Whitewash"—as the writers are doing here—would amount to proving Weisberg is right in his charges.

Lane also saw something else in the autopsy diagrams. There is an arrow on the back of the head, which is very plain. Lane sees it this way:

"The diagrams. . .show that Humes apparently believed a bullet to have exited at the left side of the president's skull, for he placed an arrow pointing to the left upon a mark evidently signifying a bullet entry wound."

How could he know what Humes "apparently believed"? No such stated belief is to be found in Humes' testimony. And Lane has admitted in a published interview that he wrote Humes but received no reply.

What does it signify?

"The arrow is meant to imply that this wound of entry went from external to internal in an upward and inward slanting direction," says Boswell.

The Bullet

Epstein says there is other evidence that a bullet never went through the president's neck from back to front. For this conclusion, he turns to the autopsy itself.

"The fact that the autopsy surgeons were not able to find a path for the bullet is further evidence that the bullet did not pass completely through the president's body," Epstein says.

One of the things on which he bases this is Humes' testimony that pathologists were unable "to take probes and have them satisfactorily fall through any path at this point." But Epstein leaves out Humes' statement that "attempts to probe in the vicinity of this wound were unsuccessful without fear of making a false passage."

The path was determined during the autopsy through recognized pathological procedure in which it was discovered there was bruising of the apex, or tip of the lung, bruising of the parietal pleura, or membrane lining the lung cage, and bleeding near the strap muscles between which the bullet passed. The hole at the back of the neck was characteristic of an entry wound. The hole at the throat did not then have the characteristics of an exit wound because it had been used in Parkland Hospital for a tracheotomy when doctors were trying to give the mortally wounded president an air passage.

But Lane, Weisberg and Epstein won't buy that, not when they have the FBI summary report of Dec. 9, 1963, to play with.

Two FBI agents, James W. Sibert and Francis X. O'Neill, were in the autopsy room. So were some Secret Service agents.

The FBI summary report, which was not published in the Warren report or its supporting volumes—thereby providing other fodder for the critics—said, in part:

"Medical examination of the president's body revealed that one of the bullets had entered just below his shoulder to the right of the spinal column at an angle of 45-60 degrees downward, that there was no point of exit, and that the bullet was not in the body."

Lane says this report had to be the correct version of the autopsy finding.

"Clearly Hoover (FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover) would not presume to summarize the 'medical examination of the president's body'—the autopsy report—in so vital a document unless the autopsy report had been studied carefully. The undated autopsy report prepared by the military physicians and published by the commission, however, does not permit the conclusions offered by the FBI. Indeed it flatly contradicts them."

Was the report updated?

In a certificate dated Nov. 24, 1963, which is part of Commission Exhibit 397, containing the written autopsy report, Humes certifies that "all working papers associated with Naval Medical School Autopsy Report A63-272 have remained in my personal custody at all times. Autopsy notes and the holograph draft of the final report were handed to commanding officer, U.S. Naval Medical School, at 1700, 24 November, 1963."

Also, the FBI did not receive the autopsy report until Dec. 23, 1963. So the FBI couldn't have given it careful study, as Lane says.

And when the FBI did see it and turned out a supplemental report, Jan. 13, 1964, no change was made because of the FBI practice and tradition of reporting what its agents say.

This Jan. 13 report said, "Medical examination of the president's body revealed that the bullet which entered his back had penetrated to a distance of less than a finger length."

As J. Edgar Hoover was to explain later:

FBI Reports

"The FBI reports record oral statements made by autopsy physicians while the examination was being conducted and before all the facts were known. They reported that Dr. James J. Humes, chief autopsy surgeon, located what appeared to be a bullet hole in the back below the shoulder and probed it to the end of the opening with a finger. The examining physicians were eventually were able to trace the path of the bullet through the body."

One technique which the critics use to discredit the autopsy report is what might be called reverse English.

In a usual medical situation, if a person died during an operation, say for removal of a wart on his finger, the cause of death would be determined by an autopsy. If the autopsy attributed death to heart failure, critics such as Lane, Weisberg and Epstein—if they are judged by their performance—would say ignore the autopsy, look at the wart.

This is what they've done on focusing on what happened when the president was taken to Parkland Memorial Hospital. Again, they show how they pick and chose to get what they did—an entrance wound at the throat.

Lane needs this to support his argument that there was a shot (or shots) fired from the grassy knoll—the greensward parallel to the presidential motorcade—rather than solely from Oswald's perch on the sixth floor of the Texas School Book Depository.

"Although every doctor who had seen the throat wound prior to the tracheotomy and expressed a contemporaneous opinion had said that it was a wound of entrance," Lane says on Page 53 of his book, the commission chose to dismiss these as erroneous conclusions stemming from a doctor's observations to the press.

Let's see.

Dr. Charles J. Carrico. Lane doesn't name him as one of the doctors saying there was an entrance wound at the throat. But Carrico was the first doctor to see he president. In a written report dated at 4:20 p.m. on the day of the assassination, Carrico described the wound as a "small penetrating wound of the neck in the lower 1-3." "Penetrating" in medical terminology can mean either entrance or exit. In his testimony, Carrico further said that "not having completely evaluated all the wounds, traced out the course of the bullets, this wound would have been compatible with either entrance or exit wounds depending upon the size, the velocity, the tissue structure and so forth."

Dr. Malcolm Perry. He performed the tracheotomy, so he saw the wound before it had been touched. In a press conference in which he had the burden of trying to answer most of the questions ("It was bedlam," he later testified) he was quoted as saying the throat wound was an entry wound.

Asked about what questions he was asked and what replies he made, Perry testified:

"Well, there were numerous questions asked, all the questions I cannot remember of course. Specifically, the thing that seemed to be of most interest at that point was actually trying to get me to speculate as to the direction of the bullets, the number of bullets, and the exact cause of death.

"The first two questions I could not answer, and my reply to them was that I did not know, if there were one or two bullets, and I could not categorically state about the nature of the neck wound, whether it was an entrance or an exit wound, not having examined the president further—I could not comment on other injuries."

The Wound

Dr. Ronald C. Jones. His report described the wound as an entrance wound. He testified as to his reasons for this belief and Lane quotes his testimony from Page 55, Vol VI—up to a point, an important point. In Lane's book, Jones says in part

"You'd expect more of an explosive type of exit wound, with more tissue destruction than this appeared to have' " Three words were then dropped after "have." They were ". . .on superficial examination."

Lane doesn't mention that none of the doctors knew there was a wound at the back of the neck.

Lane and Weisberg also emphasize that the little entrance hole on the back of the president's skull was not seen by the doctors. Lane's treatment of this deserves a close look.

"These eight physicians examined the right occipital-parietal area; each testified that he did not see a bullet hole which the commission said was there," Lane writes. Then he gives this version of the questioning of Dr. William Kemp Clark, director of neurological surgery at Parkland Memorial Hospital:

"Q: Now you described the massive wound at the top of the President's head, with the brain protruding; did you observe any other hole or wound on the president's head?

"Dr. Clark: No, sir; I did not."

And that is where Lane stops. But not Clark. His answer was:

"No, sir; I did not. This could have easily been hidden in the blood and hair."

None of the seven other doctors saw such a hole. But none said there was no such hole. And there is good reason—a reason the critics elect to ignore:

The president remained on his back, with great care taken not to move his head, all the time he was at the hospital.

Why wasn't the president turned over at Parkland?

Carrico testified:

"This man was in obvious extreme distress and any more thorough inspection would have involved several minutes—well, several—considerable time which at this juncture was not available. A thorough inspection would have involved washing and cleansing the back, and this is not practical in treating an acutely injured patient. You have to determine which things, which are immediately life threatening and cope with them, before attempting to evaluate the full extent of the injuries.

"Q: Did you ever have occasion to look at the president's back?

"Dr. Carrico: No sir. Before—well, in trying to treat an acutely injured patient, you have to establish an airway, adequate ventilation and you have to establish adequate circulation. Before this was accomplished the president's cardiac activity had ceased and closed cardiac massage was instituted, which made it impossible to inspect his back."

Was this done after the president died? No. Not one doctor ever said this was done. Why not, Carrico was asked.

"I suppose nobody really had the heart to do it."

The Book Depository And The Long 'Grassy Knoll'

It happened in a small park called Dealey Plaza, named in honor of a famous Dallas publisher. Its central landmark used to be a bronze statue of that citizen, George B. Dealey. Now there are others: the yellow brick mass of the Texas School Book Depository and, close by, an embankment now called "the grassy knoll"

The Warren Commission decided it was from there the assassin fired.

Critics have decided it was from there an assassin fired.

The grassy knoll is a slope of greensward running southwesterly away from the Texas School Book Depository. There is an arcade on its ridge, then a picket fence, shoulder high. The knoll runs along the north side of Elm Street on which Kennedy was slain. It ends at a railroad overpass which Elm Street goes beneath.

Several Saw

Several men on the overpass saw smoke near the fence as the president fell. If the smoke came from the assassin's rifle, Kennedy could not have been shot in the back, as the autopsy doctors decided. It is as simple as that: he was facing obliquely toward the knoll.

If he was shot from the knoll, the throat wound must be one of entry, not exit even though doctors said it was of exit. The fabric of the hole in the back of his jacket could not have been bent inwards, even though it was. Gov. Connally could not have been shot in the back by the same bullet, even though doctors said he was. Lee Harvey Oswald would not have been a lone assassin.

The commission gave less attention to the knoll than it did the overpass. It ruled out the overpass in favor of the depository as the assassin's lair for many reasons, one being that no one on the overpass saw a rifle being fired from there. No one saw a rifle fired from the knoll, either.

Yet the knoll abides. It does so because critics stress what people saw and heard there. They have not, however, stressed everything that people heard or saw there. Or did not hear or see.

Consider S. M. Holland.

Holland was standing on an overpass above Elm Street as the motorcade approached. The grassy knoll was slightly to his left in the foreground. The Texas School Book Depository, from which the commission says the shots were fired, was also slightly to his left but behind the presidential limousine.

Holland heard a noise like a firecracker. "I looked toward the arcade and trees and saw a puff of smoke come from the trees." That is what Holland told sheriff's deputies right after the assassination, and that is how Mark Lane quotes him in "Rush to Judgment."

Puff Of Smoke

But there is more to the sentence, although Lane does not include it. It reads: . . . And I heard three more shots after the first shot, but that was the only puff of smoke I saw."

If one puff of smoke suggests someone shot a gun from the knoll, what does the absence of three subsequent puffs suggest? The jury, the reading public, was not asked to decide. Mark Lane did it for them. He decided not to raise the question.

Epstein wrote ". . .Six out of seven of these witnesses (on the overpass) who gave an opinion as to the source of the shots indicated that the shots had come from a 'grassy knoll'." They did?

This is what they say in the report volumes:

Simmons (paraphrased by the FBI): "(He) advised that it was his opinion that the shots came from the direction of the Texas School Book Depository."

Miller: "It sounded like it came from the, I would say from right there in the car. Would be to my left, the way I was looking at him, over toward that incline (the knoll)."

Reilly: "(The shots came from that) park where all the shrubs is up there, to the north of Elm Street, up the slope."

Foster: "It (the sound) came from back in the corner of Elm and Houston streets." (The depository is at the corner of Elm and Houston).

Holland, who also picked the knoll, testified he immediately ran to that area. He saw no one suspicious.

Those are the six who "indicated the shots came from a 'grassy knoll'. Two, actually, picked the depository area. One who indicated the knoll also thought the shots sounded like they came from Kennedy's car.

Besides Holland, Lane says six others on the overpass saw smoke. Austin Miller is one. In an affidavit Nov. 22, 1963, he said he saw "smoke or steam" coming from the knoll area. When Miller was later questioned by commission counsel, Lane writes, Miller was "dismissed before he could mention the crucial observation contained in his affidavit."

Actually, at the end of his interrogation, during which he indeed did not mention any smoke, Miller was asked if he could add anything "that might be of any help to the commission as to the investigation of the assassination."

Maybe he forgot the smoke, maybe not. But it is hardly accurate to convey the impression that the commission had turned Miller off before he could give testimony against the depository theory by "dismissing" him.

White Smoke

Lane goes on. "Clemon Johnson told FBI agents that he had observed 'white smoke'." That is ALL he says about Clemon Johnson. But Johnson's full statement as paraphrased by the FBI was: "Johnson stated that white smoke was observed near the pavilion (arcade) but he felt this smoke came from a motorcycle abandoned near the spot by Dallas policemen." Who, does it seem, is dismissing what?

The other four who Lane says saw smoke—Richard Dodd, Walter Windborn, Simmons and Murphy—were interviewed by him in 1966. Whatever they told Lane then, only one—Simmons—mentioned smoke to the FBI when questioned during the assassination investigation.

Simmons said he thought he saw "exhaust fumes" of smoke near the embankment in front of the Texas School Book Depository. He ran toward that building with a policeman, first looking over the knoll fence. Two years later the "exhaust fumes" by the depository have become "a puff of smoke" near the fence. Lane saves the reader the trouble of having to decide which recollection is accurate. The first, given to the FBI, is not included in his book.

Whether they saw smoke or not, it apparently did not aid Dodd or Windborn in placing the source of the shots. They told the FBI they couldn't tell where they came from.

There are three other aspects of smoke, not dwelled upon by Lane or Epstein in connection with the knoll.

1—There was a steam pipe in the area.

3—NONE of the approximately 200 assassination witnesses questioned other than the four on the overpass mentions seeing ANY smoke, anywhere. (Lane says only those on the overpass could see smoke from the knoll because of its elevation and the bushes around it. But those persons on the south side of Elm Street should have seen it, if there was any. They, not those on the overpass, were in a direct line of fire. None of them mentioned smoke).

Campbell was standing in front of the depository, as Lane mentions. He does NOT mention that at his elbow stood Mrs. Robert Reid, a fellow employe. Lane does NOT mention that Mrs. Reid testified:

"I turned to Mr. Campbell and I said, 'Oh, my goodness, I am afraid those (sounds) came from our building' because it sounded like they came just so directly over my head."

Two witnesses. Two versions. Both appear in the Warren report. Only one does in "Rush to Judgment".

"Many other persons scattered throughout Dealey Plaza (through which Elm Street runs and the knoll and depository overlook) placed the origin of the shots (on the knoll)," Lane observes. And so they did. Jean Hill did. Billie Joe Lovelady did. William Newman did. John and Faye Chism did. Roy Truly did.

At least 34 people did, although it is difficult to pinpoint from some of their statements. It is also not always easy to pinpoint the more than 60 witnesses who thought the shots came from the depository.

Such as:

Charles Hester—"It appeared to be a building on the corner of Elm and Houston streets."

T. E. Moore—"From a high area."

Allan Sweatt—"Vicinity of Elm and Houston."

Or the 15 people of the motorcade itself who thought the shots came from the "right rear."

Since almost none of such witnesses is mentioned in Lane's book, perhaps that is why he felt no need to mention such others whose testimony is helpful in locating the source of the shots.

Such as Mrs. Earle Cabell, the Dallas mayor's wife, who looked towards the depository at the sound of shots and "saw a projection" in an upper window. Or Bob Jackson, a press photographer, who also looked up at the depository and told colleagues in a motorcade press car "there is the gun!" Or James Crawford who looked up at the sound of the third shot and "saw a movement" in the southeast window of the sixth floor of the depository and told a friend "if those were shots, they came from that window" and then advised police to search around some boxes he saw in the window. Police did. They found three rifle shells that were fired by a rifle also found on that floor—by that rifle and no other. Bullet fragments found in Kennedy's car also came from that rifle and no other.

Some Evidence

Maybe Lane had the Mrs. Cabells and Bob Jacksons in mind when he said there is "some evidence" shots came from the depository. There is "some evidence. No one saw a puff smoke there. Only a rifleman.

Epstein thinks there is "compelling" evidence shots were fired from the depository. But he faults the commission for not looking more thoroughly into the possibility of the knoll. He asks why the commission tried not call the 10 witnesses who stood between the knoll and the president's car because nine of come from the knoll directly behind them."

If the commission did not call them, it did have their statements.

This is what they said:

A. J. Millican: He said he heard three shots from the depository area, two from the arcade and three more from the arcade but further away.

Charles Hester: He said "the shots sounded like they (y) definitely came from in or around the (depository) building."

Abraham Zapruder: "I thought it (the shots) came from in back of me. Of course you can't tell when something is in line—it could be from anywhere.

"Q: Did you form any opinion about the direction from which the shots came by the sound. . . ?"

"A: No, there was too much reverberation. There was an echo which gave me sound all over."

Mary Elizabeth Woodward: She told the FBI the shots came "from possibly behind her" or from the overpass. "However,

POLICE BRANDISH RIFLE shortly after it was found near sniper's perch in book depository. Critics suggest the gun was a plant because police first said it was a Mauser and later said it was an Italian Mannlicher-Carcano, which, in fact, has a Mauser type action. Officer holding gun is J. C. Day, Dallas fingerprint expert. A palmprint of Oswald was later found on the barrel.

Witnesses Not In Agreement On Location From Which The Shots Were Fired

because of the loud echo, she could not say where the shots had come from other than they had come from above her head.

Mrs. Hester: She was standing near the overpass approximately in line with Kennedy's car and the depository. She said she could give no position for the shots other than to tell the FBI she believed she and her husband were in the line of fire.

The other four of the nine Epstein said identified the knoll did, indeed, think the shots came from there.

Epstein continues: "Eight witnesses were standing across the street from the knoll: all eight said they thought the shots had come from the knoll."

Actually four of them did. One said she couldn't determine the source. Two thought the shots came possibly from the depository area. One said they came from one of two buildings at the corner of Elm and Houston. There are three buildings there, one the depository.

In the second chapter of his book, Lane writes: "Twenty-five witnesses are known to have given statements or affidavits on Nov. 22 and Nov. 23—the day of and the day after the assassination—about the origin of the shots. Twenty-two said they believed that the shots came from the knoll."

Should one check the commission volumes, he would find that, yes, 23 people did give statements to law officials on those two days. Nine cited the knoll. Twelve cited the depository. Two indicated it could have been either.

The Knoll

There is a witness mentioned in another context by Lane whose testimony has some relevance as to the conflicting opinions of where the shots came from. He is Lee E. Bowers. He was working in a signal tower in the railroad area behind the knoll. His testimony is in Volume VI.

Bowers: "The sounds came from either from up against the school book depository building or near the mouth of the triple underpass."

Q: "You were not able to tell which?"

Bowers: "No, I could not."

Q: "Well, now, had you had any experience before being in the tower as to sounds coming from these various places?"

Bowers: "Yes: I had worked this same tower for some 10 or 12 years, and was there during the time they were renovating the school depository building, and had noticed at that time the similarity of sounds occuring in either of those two locations."

Bowers' testimony doesn't rule out the knoll. It doesn't rule out the depository. It does help those investigators trying to explain why witnesses to the assassination gave conflicting opinions as to the sound of the shots. If Bowers was helpful in this regard to Lane or Epstein, they didn't mention it.

Apart from what witnesses heard or did not hear from the knoll, Lane attaches significance to what they DID there.

"Many officers said that as soon as the shots were fired, they ran directly to the knoll and behind the wooden fence and began to search the area, some passing the book depository on the way."

Why did people converge on the knoll?

The Hesters ran TOWARD it to seek shelter from the gunfire. Miss Patricia Ann Lawrence, who had been standing at Elm and Houston, ran "along with the crowd" to where the president's car had been when he was hit. So did Mrs. Charles Davis. "I just ran along with them," said Danny Arce.

Curtis Bishop, on the overpass, saw people "running in every direction." Geneva Hine, on the second floor of the depository, saw people running EAST on Elm, away from the knoll.

Ralph Walters, a deputy sheriff, ran toward the overpass where he had last seen the presidential limousine. "We couldn't get any information."

L. S. Smith, another deputy, ran toward the depository. A woman said the shots came from the knoll. So Smith ran there. John Wiseman, a deputy, ran to the knoll where he saw police having trouble with a motorcycle. Then a woman pointed to the depository. So he ran there. Deputy W. W. Mabra saw people running toward the overpass area "so I ran that way." Motorcycle patrolman Clyde Haygood drove toward the overpass area "because people were pointing. "Then a man mentioned the depository and at 12:34 p.m., four minutes after the assassination, he radioed the police dispatcher:

"I just talked to a guy up here who was standing close to it and the best he could tell it came from the Texas School Book Depository."

Deputy Allan Sweatt couldn't tell which way to run because one man told him the shots came from toward the knoll and another said the depository. A colleague with him stayed at the depository while he ran on toward the knoll. Deputies Jack Faulkner and A. D. McCurley ran toward the railroad yards behind the knoll because they saw other officers running there. Officer D. V. Harkness went to the railroad yards because he saw "everybody hitting the ground" there.

In other words, people were running in many directions for many reasons. Most of the sheriff's deputies had been in front of their office around the corner when the shots were fired and ran in the directions they did because of what bystanders told them, because they saw others running that way or because of where they thought the sounds came from.

"Everybody was just running around in circles," said Deputy Eddy Raymond Walthers.

Undeniably, the knoll area was widely searched by officers immediately after the shots. And what was found?

"There wasn't anything over there," said patrolman E. L. Smith.

"We didn't see anything there," said Deputy Luke Mooney who thought the shots came from the knoll.

John and Faye Chism, standing in front of the knoll, had looked around when they heard the shots. They saw no one.

Harold Elkins, another deputy, ran into Bowers in the railroad yard. Bowers said he had seen three out of state cars driving around the parking area behind the knoll just before the assassination. Two drove off before the shots. Lane mentions this. And the third? Lane leaves him near the knoll and leaves the reader to conjecture what the driver might or might not have done there.

"The last I saw of him he was pausing just about in—just above the assassination site." Lane has this quote of Bowers. He doesn't have this one: "He left this area just about 12:25 p.m." The assassination occurred at 12:30 p.m.

(Bowers also said he saw two men watching over the fence about the time of the shot which arouses Lane's suspicions. Not, however, to the extent of mentioning Bowers saw "at least" one of them still there as police began fanning out over the area.)

In any event, patrolman Charles Polk Player searched cars in the lot for two hours. He didn't report finding anything. Several hoboes found in freight cars were questioned. Seymour Weitzman found footprints "that didn't make sense because they were going different directions. "Holland saw muddy footprints on a car bumper. Had an assassin stood there?

No one had seen one. If he had, he had been able to gather up any shells from the ground in the brief time before police arrived because none was found. No rifle was found. Nothing . . . Nothing to add to what some people said they heard and saw around the knoll: some shots and a puff of smoke.

After searching the knoll area for a while, Weitzman went over to help at the depository. On the sixth floor, behind some boxes, the officer found a rifle with a telescopic sight. The gun had been purchased by some one named A. Hidell whose handwriting was identical with Lee Harvey Oswald's.

Two Saw

Two persons said they saw a rifle being fired from the sixth floor of the depository. One was Howard Brennan. To weaken the case for the depository, it is important for the critics to weaken Brennan's testimony. This they try to do.

Epstein says Joseph Ball, a commission lawyer who investigated the identity of the assassin, "had several reasons to doubt Brennan's testimony."

Epstein lists them: Brennan's "difficulty seeing a figure" in the depository window during a re-enactment of the assassination; Brennan's failure to identify Oswald on "prominent points" of his clothing; Brennan's "major error" in testifying the assassin was standing while firing and "the fact that Brennan had lied at the police lineup."

Epstein notes, correctly, that Brennan testified the assassin was standing in the window as he shot. He does not note that Brennan also thought that three onlookers a floor beneath the assassin were also standing. They weren't. They were kn ing. So must the assassin have been to fire through the window. A small point. A small rebuttal—too small, evidently, to include in "Inquest".

At a police lineup the day of the assassination, Brennan said he could not positively identify Oswald as the assassin. Four months later, he told the commission he could. He said he hadn't done so earlier because he feared Communist reprisal. Epstein uses this discrepancy to attack Brennan's credibility. He doesn't mention that the commission agrees with him.

Because Brennan declined to make positive identification of Oswald at the lineup, the commission said it "does not base its conclusion concerning the identity of the assassin on Brennan's subsequent certain identification."

The commission, however, does not question Brennan's credibility that he saw a man firing a rifle from a depository window because near that window were found not only a rifle but shells and fingerprints of Lee Harvey Oswald.

(It might also be noted, although Epstein does not, that while on Nov. 22 Brennan said he could not make positive identification, he did then say that man No. 2 in the lineup "most closely resembled" the man he saw in the window. Lee Harvey Oswald was man No. 2).

There is also more to Epstein's allegation that Ball was "extremely dubious" about Brennan's testimony.

"Epstein says that I told him when we constructed the episode that Brennan 'had difficulty seeing a figure in the window'. I never said that. In the first place, we didn't have Brennan at the reconstruction to see whether he could see. We had him there so that he could mark positions on a photo. He quotes me as being 'extremely dubious'. I never said that. It didn't happen."

So spoke Joseph Ball.

Finally, as would any good defense attorney, the critics question Brennan's ability to see anything.

"Perhaps poor eyesight accounted for Brennan's inability to identify the man at the window," says Lane. "Brennan admitted that his eyesight was 'not good' when he testified before the commission."

Brennan, indeed, so testified. He said this was so because his eyes had been accidentally sandblasted. That happened two months after the assassination.

In a footnote on Page 90 of the hardcover edition of "Rush to Judgment" Lane mentions the injury. Seemingly, there the matter would rest: that Brennan testified he was farsighted up until an injury two months after the assassination and that thereafter his eyesight was "not good".

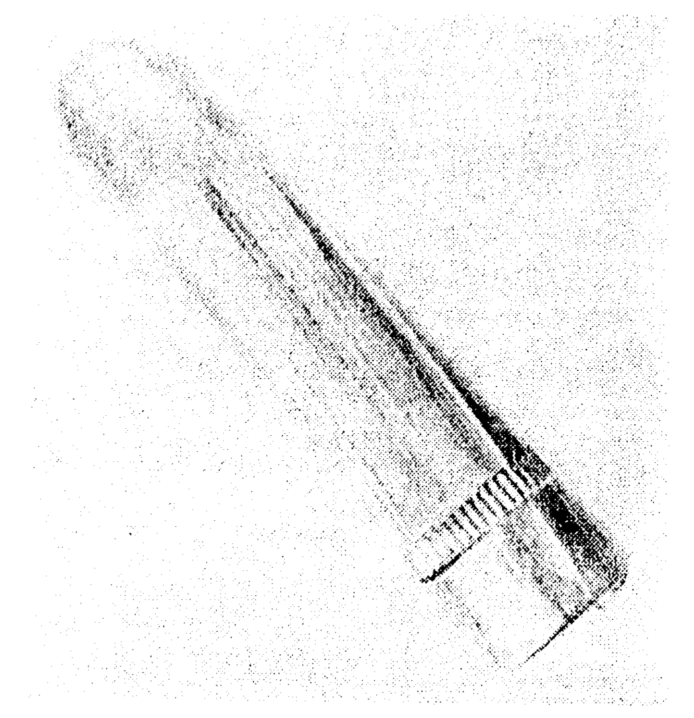
After 170 pages maybe the author had forgotten how—or when—Brennan became "weak-eyed". Or maybe the reader had.



THIS IS the bullet that was found at Parkland Hospital. Some critics said it came from Gov. Connally's stretcher. The commission says it came from Kennedy's stretcher. The bullet was almost undamaged. Tests showed it came from Oswald's rifle and no other. Parkland doctors have been quoted out of context by some critics to say the fragments in Connally are too big to have come from Bullet 399. (AP Wirephoto)

Report Does Not Fully Say Oswald Was The Only Killer

The Warren Commission never said: Lee Harvey Oswald, alone, murdered John F. Kennedy, period.

It actually said: "The commission has found no evidence that Oswald was involved with any person or group in a conspiracy. . .If there is any such evidence, it has been beyond the reach of all the investigative agencies and resources of the United States and has not come to the attention of the commission."

There the matter has not rested.

In New Orleans Dist. Atty. Jim Garrison has claimed to have found what the commission did not: conspiracy. On the bookshelves of the nation are volumes that claim the same: that Oswald was innocent, that he was a fall guy, that he was involved with Jack Ruby or Bernard Weissman or the FBI or Communists or Texas oil interests or racists.

A court of law will decide in New Orleans. But the other versions of conspiracy are not and quite possibly never will be before a judge and jury. But they are before the jury of public opinion. They will be for some time.

Did Not Answer

The Warren Commission, unfortunately, did not answer all the questions. Some, however, are probably unanswerable. But some are not questions at all. They are innuendoes—false scents that confuse the hunt for truth.

What other construction can one put, for instance, on Mark Lane's innuendo that there might have been a connection between Ruby and the right wing of Dallas?

The commission made an hour-by-hour probe of Ruby's actions from Nov. 21 to Nov. 24, 1963 to determine if he was involved in a plot.

"The commission found that Ruby's activities and associations were innocent," Lane writes in "Rush to Judgment". "An objective analysis of the record might yield a somewhat different evaluation of Ruby's conduct."

Lane mentions an instance on Nov. 21 when the commission had said Ruby "visited with a young lady who was job hunting in Dallas."

"Contrary to the commission's unassuming summation," says Lane, "Ruby did not merely visit with a young lady who divulges the fact that Ruby drove with her to the office of Lamar Hunt, the son of H. L. Hunt."

Lane drops the matter at that point. Ruby is left at the office of Lamar Hunt, whose Texas-rich father is a strong supporter of ultraright causes. The reader of "Rush to Judgment" is left to make what he may of this suggested link between Ruby and the Dallas right wing. For clarification, however, he might turn to a commission exhibit. Not 2270. Try 2291.

It also is a statement by Miss Trammel, now Mrs. Penny, to the FBI. In it she says she once had a long talk with Ruby when she and some classmates from the University of Texas visited his Dallas strip club. Ruby asked if she wanted to work for him. She didn't. But Ruby kept asking. The last time was Nov. 21, 1963.

During that phone conversation, Miss Trammel mentioned she was seeking a public relations job at a bowling alley she had read Lamar Hunt owned. She had an appointment to see him that very day. She said she didn't have a car. Ruby offered to drive her to the bank building where Hunt had his office, since he had business to transact at the bank.

"During the trip. . .to the bank, Ruby seemed impressed with the amount of money that Lamar Hunt had made," Miss Trammel told the FBI, "and had mentioned that he knew most of the prominent people in Dallas. . .but did not know Lamar Hunt."

Such handling of commission evidence by the critics happens too often to be mere oversight.

Consider the alleged meeting in Ruby's Carousel Club Nov. 14, 1963 between Ruby, J. D. Tippitt, the officer the commission said was shot by Oswald, and Bernard Weissman. Weissman was the young Easterner who had helped place an ad critical of Kennedy in the Dallas Morning News the day of the assassination.

No Permission

Weissman had arrived in Dallas Nov. 4 to try and set up a new conservative party by infiltrating right-wing groups, one of which he said never accomplished more than "running around burning baskets from Yugoslavia."

Lane, himself, had told the commission about the meeting. He declined to reveal his source for the story because the source had not given him permission to do so.

"But," he wrote in his book, "If the commission had wanted his name, it need only have asked one of its witnesses, Thayer Waldo, a reputable journalist. Counsel, however, did not ask Waldo about the meeting."

Not in so many words. For how was counsel to know what Thayer Waldo knew since Lane had refused to tell the commission, much less counsel, about Waldo or any other source?

But at the end of Waldo's interrogation, which covered other matters, counsel did ask if he could add any information about anything else. Waldo said no, he couldn't.

If not with Waldo, the commission did inquire into the Carousel meeting with other witnesses. One was Larry Crafard, a carnival worker hired by Ruby to do odd jobs around the club. The commission volumes have a statement by Crafard in which he told the FBI he recognized a picture of Weissman as a man he had seen at the club "on a number of occasions."

Lane has this quote. He does not mention that Crafard also told the FBI he had a "very vague recollection" of having heard Ruby mention the name Weissman, that he believed Weissman was a Dallas detective whose first name may have been Johnny and that he "could have my recollection of a Mr. Weissman mixed up with some one else."

Lane does not mention that Crafard thought Weissman was a "white male American" 38 to 43 years of age. Bernard Weissman was a white, male American who was 26 in 1963 and who, if he had been at the Carousel "a number of occasions", had nonetheless been in Dallas only 10 days.

Other Words

Lane reports that several witnesses said Ruby knew Tippitt. One that he cites was Dallas police Lt. George C. Arnett. What Arnett actually told the FBI was that he did not recall to what extent Ruby MAY have known police officer J. D. Tippitt but added that "he does not believe he was more friendly with Tippitt than the average officer."

Arnett, in other words, did not say positively whether Ruby did or did not know Tippitt.

Lane says Crafard and Andrew Armstrong, Ruby's bartender and handyman, both heard Ruby say he knew Tippitt when he learned the officer had been shot. Lane does not say that Armstrong also told the FBI: "From what I gather later on, Mrs. Grant (Ruby's sister) told me it was a different Tippitt that he knew. In other words, there was two officers that had the name of Tippitt.

Actually, there were three. And Ruby did know one of them. He said he knew a detective Gayle Tippitt who worked in special services. Lane's book has this. It mentions that Gayle Tippitt said his "contacts in recent years (with Ruby) have been infrequent."

That is taken from Committee Exhibit 1620 in which Gayle Tippitt also said that in the 1950s he "became very well acquainted with Jack Ruby." Lane does not quote that part of Exhibit 1620.

Lane writes that the commission might also have interrogated Harold Richard Williams. Williams told Lane he had seen Ruby and an officer he identified as J. D. Tippitt in a patrol car when he was arrested in November 1963. Lane warns his readers that Williams' testimony "should be assessed with a degree of caution" since he was not a witness and under oath. He might also havenotified his readers, but didn't, that Tippitt was stationed in the Oak Cliff section of Dallas all the way across town from where Williams said he was arrested.

Two witnesses said that on Nov. 14, the night of the meeting, Weissman was in their home trying to sell them carpeting until 9:30 or 10 p.m. Mrs. Tippitt said her husband was a homebody devoted to his family. Lane, nonetheless, says the commission should have asked her what Tippitt was doing the night of Nov. 14 and asked Weissman what he did after 10 p.m. that same evening.

Lane says the question to Weissman was "never even posed." It may not have been posed to his liking, but Weissman was asked by commission counsel: "Did you at any time while you were in Dallas ever have a meeting with or sit in the Carousel Club with officer Tippitt?"

"No," he answered. He said he had never been in Ruby's club and didn't know him.

Mrs. Tippitt was less exact. She said she had never heard her husband mention being in Ruby's club.

The point is not so much whether such a meeting could or not have taken place. The point here is that Lane, who presented the rumor to the commission, did not present all the evidence to his readers. For instance, neither Mrs. Tippitt's nor Weissman's denial and-or lack of knowledge of the meeting is presented in his book.

But what if, evidence to the contrary, such a meeting did take place? What was its purpose? Lane doesn't suggest one. Neither does any evidence in the Warren volumes.

No Evidence

Nor is there evidence in the volumes to indicate a conspiracy in New Orleans. The commission and the FBI investigated several of the people that have figured in Garrison's case. They found no conspiracy.

This is not to deny the possibility of one. It should be mentioned, however, that the indictment against Clay Shaw, a New Orleans businessman, says he conspired with Oswald to assassinate Kennedy. But it does NOT say the assassination was the one that took place Nov. 22, 1963 in Dallas. Nor does it say it wasn't. Garrison has said he doesn't want to get involved in "semantics" over wording.

It should be mentioned that the chief witness against Shaw so far is a man who first contacted Garrison two days AFTER the district attorney said the case was solved. The witness testified after being given "truth serum" and undergoing hypnosis.

It should be mentioned another witness reportedly said he was offered a bribe by the district attorney's office to give favorable testimony. The witness' lawyer said a lie detector test verified the brib eattempt.

Garrison has said he has evidence that Oswald was working for the Central Intelligence Agency. Others have said Oswald was working for the FBI after his return from the Soviet Union for a fee of $200 a month.

That rumor apparently came from a Houston reporter, Alonzo Hudkins. Hudkins has since told Charles Roberts of Newsweek that he believes J. Edgar Hoover's denials that Oswald was an FBI informant. But Epstein takes the commission to task for relying solely on the word of an agency investigating itself.

Why, he asks in "inquest", didn't the commission on its own interrogate Hudkins and his reported source for the story, Dallas Deputy Sheriff Allan Sweatt? It is a legitimate question.

But it is also legitimate to ask how Epstein can state "no efforts were made by the commission or its staff to investigate the rumor itself." That simply isn't true.

The commission, itself, DID investigate in some detail reports of money orders Oswald reportedly had received while in Dallas. (It turned out to be baseless). The commission, itself, DID inquire why FBI agent James Hosty's name was in Oswald's address book. (Oswald told his wife to take it down after Hosty had visited her at Ruth Paine's where she was living). The commission DID investigate through the Internal Revenue Service Oswald's finances after his return from the Soviet Union. (His known and assumed outgo remarkably approximated his income down to the cash balance he had when arrested).

The commission did NOT take at face value the denials of the FBI. And Epstein did NOT mention the foregoing in claiming the commission "relief entirely on the FBI to disprove the rumor" of Oswald's FBI connection.

Another conspiracy rumor: Ruby entered the Dallas police headquarters to shoot Oswald not by accident but by design. In accord with some superplot the assassin had to be assassinated. One incontestable fact of time however must be considered.

The exact time of Oswald's transfer depended on when police were done questioning him. At the time that was decided Ruby was driving downtown to send a money order to one of his strippers. The time he handed the money order across the Western Union counter was punched by a time clock: 11:17 a.m. Oswald was shot at 11:21 a.m. It takes several minutes to walk from Western Union to the police basement where Oswald was slain.

A commuter catching a train would scarcely cut his corners so finely. Would a man engaged in a superplot do so? Particularly if he knew in some unexplained way his only chance would come at 11:21?

The superplot elsewhere was running a very tight schedule. When Oswald dashed in and out of his rooming house a half-hour after the assassination Lane says a "rather mysterious" incident occurred. A Dallas police car stopped and honked twice and drove off said Earlene Roberts, the housekeeper.

Dallas police said there was no patrol car in the vicinity at the time. Lane says the 'investigation' consisted of nothing more than the statements of police regarding car and officer assignments. (One might ask who would know better than police the whereabouts of a police car).

Lane notes commission evidence that a patrolman had driven Car 207 to the depository "just after 12:45 p.m.", gave the keys to a sergeant and remained in the building several hours.

Police Car 207

A log of the travels of Car 207 should, however, have this information which the report provides—and Lane does not.

1—Police Car 170, driven by acquaintances of hers, often honked outside the house, Mrs. Roberts said. When she saw the car was 207, she told the FBI she went back to looking at television.

2—Patrolman Jimmy Valentine had Car 207 that afternoon. He had been at headquarters when he heard of the assassination at about 12:45 p.m. He drove to the depository all the way across town through heavy traffic. This would put him at the building close to the moments Oswald dashed into the rooming house several miles away. Valentine turned the keys over to a sergeant.

This does not mean, Lane argues, that the car itself couldn't have been driven by some other officers. (Mrs. Roberts saw two in the car). But the men would have had to get the keys from the sergeant (who said he didn't release them until 3:30 p.m.), drive through heavy traffic around the depository to the rooming house in suburban Oak Cliff, honk twice and drive away again.

And for what purpose? Lane doesn't suggest one.

Lane also notes testimony of Deputy Sheriff Roger D. Craig. He said that 15 minutes after the assassination he saw a young man he later identified as Oswald run from near the depository and get into a light colored Rambler station wagon driven by a Negro. Later that afternoon Craig said he recognized Oswald in the office of homicide Capt. Will Fritz.

Craig said Oswald stood up and said: "That station wagon belongs to Mrs. Paine, don't try to tie her into this. . .Everybody will know who I am now."

The commission, as Lane notes, decided it "could not accept important elements of Craig's testimony." Lane does not note the reasons why.

One is an affidavit from Fritz. He recalled a man telling a story similar to Craig's. This, however, occurred in his outer office. Oswald was in his inner office.

"Had I brought this man into my inner office I feel sure I would have remembered it," Fritz said. He didn't remember Oswald jumping up and saying what Craig said he said. Neither did any one else there.

Another conspiracy: Ruby was somehow involved in Castroite activity. At length Lane quotes the testimony of Nancy Perrin Rich. She said in 1962 she and her late husband had met several times in Dallas with others including an Army colonel whose name she did not recall and some one named Dave C.—"I think it was Cole, but I couldn't be sure."

Mrs. Rich's husband had asked $25,000 to shuttle a boat carrying guns into Cuba and refugees out. Negotiations stalled.

"A knock comes on the door and who walks in but my little friend, Jack Ruby," said Mrs. Rich who had been a bartender at the Carousel Club. "Ruby had a bulge in his pocket. He went into another room and returned minus the bulge," Mrs. Rich said. She assumed the bulge was payoff money, although she never saw nor heard that money had changed hands.

Negotiations improved. But Mrs. Rich finally "grabbed my old man and cleared out" when she later thought she recognized a new participant as Vito Genovese's son. She based this on his resemblance to a photograph she had seen of the Mafia chieftain.

Commission counsel Leon Hubert then asked Mrs. Rich if Dave C., who she said had been a bartender at the Dallas University Club, could be one Dave Cherry. "That's it," she replied.

Lane wonders why this potentially corroborating witness was not called to testify. "The FBI's summary of an interview with Cherry was in the commission's possession, but Cherry was not called as a witness."

Indeed, he was not. But the FBI "summary," which Lane does not quote, might explain why. In it Cherry denies knowing any colonel "who was supposed to have been running guns into Cuba." He did know Nancy Perrin Rich whom he said had been barred from the club and who he thought was "mentally deranged".

Also in the commission record is a statement by Dallas detective Paul Rayburn who knew Mrs. Rich and thought her "a psychopathic liar who got great delight out of telling wild tales."

And there is a report of an interview with attorney Cy Victorson who represented Mrs. Rich on a vagrancy charge. He said she told stories "so ridiculous that no one could possibly believe them."

Lane does not ask why Paul Rayburn or Cy Victorson were not called by the commission. He did not use their statements, either. After all, they did not discuss Ruby or gun-running. They only mentioned the one witness who said she saw it all happen.

Says Lane: "About so clandestine an operation as smuggling weapons to Cuba and evacuating exiles, however, one would expect to find corroboration only with the greatest difficulty, if at all." He indicates he found it in Robert McKeown. McKeown had been arrested in 1958 for conspiracy to smuggle guns to Cuban Prime Minister Fidel Castro.

McKeown told the FBI that in 1959 a man who identified himself as Rubenstein (Ruby's original name) had phoned him offering $15,000 to get Castro to release three of his prisoners. Three weeks later McKeown said a man asked him to write a letter of introduction to Castro because he had some Jeeps to sell Cuba. The deals never came to pass.

McKeown told the FBI he "feels strongly that this individual was in fact Jack Ruby. . ." Lane quotes this. He does not quote another part of the statement in which McKeown "remarked he is not certain that the above-described telephone caller from Dallas or the man who personally appeared. . .was identical with the Jack Ruby who killed Lee Harvey Oswald."

Lane takes a partial quote to show strong identification of Ruby by McKeown rather than a whole one which shows something less. He need not have. Ruby said he once was interested in a Jeep deal. He thought though, the intermediary's name was Davis. His sister Eva Grant told the FBI she believed her brother had an option on eight war surplus Jeeps some time around 1960.

This could be corroboration of McKeown. But is it of Nancy Rich? And if one interprets it as such where does it all tie Ruby into an assassination superplot? Do surplus Jeeps in 1959, an unverified meeting in 1962 add up to assassination in 1963?

Lane doesn't answer the question. He merely asks it.

Another conspiracy: Oswald, the admitted Marxist who wanted fair play for Cuba, was actually in the anti-Castro underground.

The source of this was Sylvia Odio, an anti-Castro Cuban. On Sept. 26 or 27, 1963 two Cubans or Mexicans called at her apartment in Dallas with a third person introduced as Leon Oswald, she said. The men told her they had recently come from New Orleans and were friends of her father, a prisoner of Castro.

The next day one of the men, who said his name was Leopoldo, phoned Mrs. Odio and said he wanted to introduce Oswald into the Cuban underground. Leopoldo said Oswald had been in the Marines, was an excellent shot and felt "the Cubans didn't have any guts. . .because President Kennedy should have been assassinated after the Bay of Pigs and some Cubans should have done that. . . ."

After the assassination a stunned Mrs. Odio recognized pictures of Lee Harvey Oswald as the man who came to her home. So did her sister.

The commission maintained that Oswald could not have been in Dallas Sept. 26 or 27. He was in Mexico.

". . .The issue was never resolved," wrote Epstein. That is debatable.

Mexican Travel

Records show that Oswald crossed into Nuevo Laredo, Mexico between 6 a.m. and 2 p.m. Sept. 26. Two passengers on a Houston-Laredo bus said they saw Oswald on board shortly after they awoke at 6 a.m., Sept. 26.

The commission said there was strong evidence that Oswald had left Houston on a bus for Laredo at 2:35 a.m. that morning. It noted a bus had left New Orleans, where Oswald had been living, at 12:30 p.m. Sept. 25 arriving at Houston at 10:50 p.m. that evening. Oswald made a phone call to a woman in Houston that same evening. It can't be determined whether the call was local or not.

Epstein says the visit to Mrs. Odio occurred "the day before he (Oswald) left on his trip to Mexico." This disregards Mrs. Odio's testimony. She said the visit occurred Sept. 26—when Oswald had already crossed the border—or the 27th—when he had reached Mexico City and registered at a hotel. Were some one's dates wrong? Epstein doesn't even mention there is a conflict between him and the testimony.

A Report

He does not mention a commission statement from E. P. Hammett, a Houston bus ticket agent. Hammett told the FBI that in late September a man "strongly resembling" a photograph of Oswald asked him about bus travel to Laredo and Mexico City. Epstein does NOT mention the man eventually bought a ticket to Laredo. Epstein does NOT mention that it was the only such ticket sold that night to Laredo or that it was the only one of its kind sold from Sept. 24 through Sept. 26.

If Oswald had been in Dallas on the 25th, he could have caught a bus from there to Alice, Tex., in time to be on the Houston-Laredo bus on which he was seen. But no tickets were sold by the bus line connecting Dallas and Alice for Laredo between Sept. 23 and 26.

He could, the commission concedes, possibly have driven New Orleans-Dallas-Alice route although the Warren report says it "would have been difficult." Tight scheduling again for the superplot.

Ultimately, the FBI located a Californian, Loran Eugene Hall, who said he had called on Mrs Odio in Dallas in September with two other men. The two denied it. Hall later altered his story.

In its report the commission stated that the FBI had not completed its investigation of Hall at the time the report went to press. Yet it concluded in the report that Oswald had not been at Mrs. Odio's that September.

"Is it too fastidious to insist that conclusions logically follow, not precede, an analysis of all evidence?" Lane asks. The point is well taken.

Vast Scope

Despite the vast scope of the Warren investigation, the Odio matter has given the critics ammunition to charge the commission with haste, with lack of thoroughness.

Haste? Quite possibly, although the commission denies it. But thoroughness? Who was thorough in detailing the Odio investigation? The commission? Or Epstein?

The Hall evidence neither proves nor disproves the commission conclusion about Mrs. Odio. Epstein says the matter was never resolved. But in effect, it was. As much as it ever can be. The commission was faced with a choice: the testimony of Mrs. Odio and her sister against the evidence they were mistaken. It chose the evidence.

Yet it was the commission that presented all the evidence pro and con about Mrs. Odio. The critics did not. It was the commission that presented all the evidence about Lamar Hunt and Ruby, about Nancy Perrin Rich, about Jeeps, about McKeown, about Oswald's finances. The critics did not.

One may interpret what the commission found, and the critics have, abundantly. But while, as of this date, there may be doubters, books and speculation, the critics have yet to produce that one essential of proof—evidence.

Witnesses Not In Agreement On Location From Which The Shots Were Fired

because of the loud echo, she could not say where the shots had come from other than they had come from above her head.

Mrs. Hester: She was standing near the overpass approximately in line with Kennedy's car and the depository. She said she could give no position for the shots other than to tell the FBI she believed she and her husband were in the line of fire.

The other four of the nine Epstein said identified the knoll did, indeed, think the shots came from there.

Epstein continues: "Eight witnesses were standing across the street from the knoll: all eight said they thought the shots had come from the knoll."

Actually four of them did. One said she couldn't determine the source. Two thought the shots came possibly from the depository area. One said they came from one of two buildings at the corner of Elm and Houston. There are three buildings there, one the depository.

In the second chapter of his book, Lane writes: "Twenty-five witnesses are known to have given statements or affidavits on Nov. 22 and Nov. 23—the day of and the day after the assassination—about the origin of the shots. Twenty-two said they believed that the shots came from the knoll."

Should one check the commission volumes, he would find that, yes, 23 people did give statements to law officials on those two days. Nine cited the knoll. Twelve cited the depository. Two indicated it could have been either.

The Knoll

There is a witness mentioned in another context by Lane whose testimony has some relevance as to the conflicting opinions of where the shots came from. He is Lee E. Bowers. He was working in a signal tower in the railroad area behind the knoll. His testimony is in Volume VI.

Bowers: "The sounds came from either from up against the school book depository building or near the mouth of the triple underpass."

Q: "You were not able to tell which?"

Bowers: "No, I could not."

Q: "Well, now, had you had any experience before being in the tower as to sounds coming from these various places?"

Bowers: "Yes: I had worked this same tower for some 10 or 12 years, and was there during the time they were renovating the school depository building, and had noticed at that time the similarity of sounds occuring in either of those two locations."

Bowers' testimony doesn't rule out the knoll. It doesn't rule out the depository. It does help those investigators trying to explain why witnesses to the assassination gave conflicting opinions as to the sound of the shots. If Bowers was helpful in this regard to Lane or Epstein, they didn't mention it.

Apart from what witnesses heard or did not hear from the knoll, Lane attaches significance to what they DID there.

"Many officers said that as soon as the shots were fired, they ran directly to the knoll and behind the wooden fence and began to search the area, some passing the book depository on the way."

Why did people converge on the knoll?

The Hesters ran TOWARD it to seek shelter from the gunfire. Miss Patricia Ann Lawrence, who had been standing at Elm and Houston, ran "along with the crowd" to where the president's car had been when he was hit. So did Mrs. Charles Davis. "I just ran along with them," said Danny Arce.

Curtis Bishop, on the overpass, saw people "running in every direction." Geneva Hine, on the second floor of the depository, saw people running EAST on Elm, away from the knoll.

Ralph Walters, a deputy sheriff, ran toward the overpass where he had last seen the presidential limousine. "We couldn't get any information."

L. S. Smith, another deputy, ran toward the depository. A woman said the shots came from the knoll. So Smith ran there. John Wiseman, a deputy, ran to the knoll where he saw police having trouble with a motorcycle. Then a woman pointed to the depository. So he ran there. Deputy W. W. Mabra saw people running toward the overpass area "so I ran that way." Motorcycle patrolman Clyde Haygood drove toward the overpass area "because people were pointing. "Then a man mentioned the depository and at 12:34 p.m., four minutes after the assassination, he radioed the police dispatcher:

"I just talked to a guy up here who was standing close to it and the best he could tell it came from the Texas School Book Depository."

Deputy Allan Sweatt couldn't tell which way to run because one man told him the shots came from toward the knoll and another said the depository. A colleague with him stayed at the depository while he ran on toward the knoll. Deputies Jack Faulkner and A. D. McCurley ran toward the railroad yards behind the knoll because they saw other officers running there. Officer D. V. Harkness went to the railroad yards because he saw "everybody hitting the ground" there.

In other words, people were running in many directions for many reasons. Most of the sheriff's deputies had been in front of their office around the corner when the shots were fired and ran in the directions they did because of what bystanders told them, because they saw others running that way or because of where they thought the sounds came from.

"Everybody was just running around in circles," said Deputy Eddy Raymond Walthers.

Undeniably, the knoll area was widely searched by officers immediately after the shots. And what was found?

"There wasn't anything over there," said patrolman E. L. Smith.

"We didn't see anything there," said Deputy Luke Mooney who thought the shots came from the knoll.

John and Faye Chism, standing in front of the knoll, had looked around when they heard the shots. They saw no one.

Harold Elkins, another deputy, ran into Bowers in the railroad yard. Bowers said he had seen three out of state cars driving around the parking area behind the knoll just before the assassination. Two drove off before the shots. Lane mentions this. And the third? Lane leaves him near the knoll and leaves the reader to conjecture what the driver might or might not have done there.

"The last I saw of him he was pausing just about in—just above the assassination site." Lane has this quote of Bowers. He doesn't have this one: "He left this area just about 12:25 p.m." The assassination occurred at 12:30 p.m.

(Bowers also said he saw two men watching over the fence about the time of the shot which arouses Lane's suspicions. Not, however, to the extent of mentioning Bowers saw "at least" one of them still there as police began fanning out over the area.)

In any event, patrolman Charles Polk Player searched cars in the lot for two hours. He didn't report finding anything. Several hoboes found in freight cars were questioned. Seymour Weitzman found footprints "that didn't make sense because they were going different directions. "Holland saw muddy footprints on a car bumper. Had an assassin stood there?

No one had seen one. If he had, he had been able to gather up any shells from the ground in the brief time before police arrived because none was found. No rifle was found. Nothing . . . Nothing to add to what some people said they heard and saw around the knoll: some shots and a puff of smoke.

After searching the knoll area for a while, Weitzman went over to help at the depository. On the sixth floor, behind some boxes, the officer found a rifle with a telescopic sight. The gun had been purchased by some one named A. Hidell whose handwriting was identical with Lee Harvey Oswald's.

Two Saw

Two persons said they saw a rifle being fired from the sixth floor of the depository. One was Howard Brennan. To weaken the case for the depository, it is important for the critics to weaken Brennan's testimony. This they try to do.

Epstein says Joseph Ball, a commission lawyer who investigated the identity of the assassin, "had several reasons to doubt Brennan's testimony."

Epstein lists them: Brennan's "difficulty seeing a figure" in the depository window during a re-enactment of the assassination; Brennan's failure to identify Oswald on "prominent points" of his clothing; Brennan's "major error" in testifying the assassin was standing while firing and "the fact that Brennan had lied at the police lineup."

Epstein notes, correctly, that Brennan testified the assassin was standing in the window as he shot. He does not note that Brennan also thought that three onlookers a floor beneath the assassin were also standing. They weren't. They were kn ing. So must the assassin have been to fire through the window. A small point. A small rebuttal —too small, evidently, to include in "Inquest".

At a police lineup the day of the assassination, Brennan said he could not positively identify Oswald as the assassin. Four months later, he told the commission he could. He said he hadn't done so earlier because he feared Communist reprisal. Epstein uses this discrepancy to attack Brennan's credibility. He doesn't mention that the commission agrees with him.

Because Brennan declined to make positive identification of Oswald at the lineup, the commission said it "does not base its conclusion concerning the identity of the assassin on Brennan's subsequent certain identification."

The commission, however, does not question Brennan's credibility that he saw a man firing a rifle from a depository window because near that window were found not only a rifle but shells and fingerprints of Lee Harvey Oswald.

(It might also be noted, although Epstein does not, that while on Nov. 22 Brennan said he could not make positive identification, he did then say that man No. 2 in the lineup "most closely resembled" the man he saw in the window. Lee Harvey Oswald was man No. 2).

There is also more to Epstein's allegation that Ball was "extremely dubious" about Brennan's testimony.

"Epstein says that I told him when we constructed the episode that Brennan 'had difficulty seeing a figure in the window'. I never said that. In the first place, we didn't have Brennan at the reconstruction to see whether he could see. We had him there so that he could mark positions on a photo. He quotes me as being 'extremely dubious'. I never said that. It didn't happen."

So spoke Joseph Ball.

Finally, as would any good defense attorney, the critics question Brennan's ability to see anything.

"Perhaps poor eyesight accounted for Brennan's inability to identify the man at the window," says Lane. "Brennan admitted that his eyesight was 'not good' when he testified before the commission."

Brennan, indeed, so testified. He said this was so because his eyes had been accidentally sandblasted. That happened two months after the assassination.

In a footnote on Page 90 of the hardcover edition of "Rush to Judgment" Lane mentions the injury. Seemingly, there the matter would rest: that Brennan testified he was farsighted up until an injury two months after the assassination and that thereafter his eyesight was "not good".

After 170 pages maybe the author had forgotten how—or when—Brennan became "weak-eyed". Or maybe the reader had.

THIS IS the bullet that was found at Parkland Hospital. Some critics said it came from Gov. Connally's stretcher. The commission says it came from Kennedy's stretcher. The bullet was almost undamaged. Tests showed it came from Oswald's rifle and no other. Parkland doctors have been quoted out of context by some critics to say the fragments in Connally are too big to have come from Bullet 399. (AP Wirephoto)

Report Does Not Fully Say Oswald Was The Only Killer

The Warren Commission never said: Lee Harvey Oswald, alone, murdered John F. Kennedy, period.

It actually said: "The commission has found no evidence that Oswald was involved with any person or group in a conspiracy. . .If there is any such evidence, it has been beyond the reach of all the investigative agencies and resources of the United States and has not come to the attention of the commission."

There the matter has not rested.

In New Orleans Dist. Atty. Jim Garrison has claimed to have found what the commission did not: conspiracy. On the bookshelves of the nation are volumes that claim the same: that Oswald was innocent, that he was a fall guy, that he was involved with Jack Ruby or Bernard Weissman or the FBI or Communists or Texas oil interests or racists.

A court of law will decide in New Orleans. But the other versions of conspiracy are not and quite possibly never will be before a judge and jury. But they are before the jury of public opinion. They will be for some time.

Did Not Answer

The Warren Commission, unfortunately, did not answer all the questions. Some, however, are probably unanswerable. But some are not questions at all. They are innuendoes—false scents that confuse the hunt for truth.

What other construction can one put, for instance, on Mark Lane's innuendo that there might have been a connection between Ruby and the right wing of Dallas?

The commission made an hour-by-hour probe of Ruby's actions from Nov. 21 to Nov. 24, 1963 to determine if he was involved in a plot.

"The commission found that Ruby's activities and associations were innocent," Lane writes in "Rush to Judgment". "An objective analysis of the record might yield a somewhat different evaluation of Ruby's conduct."

Lane mentions an instance on Nov. 21 when the commission had said Ruby "visited with a young lady who was job hunting in Dallas."

"Contrary to the commission's unassuming summation," says Lane, "Ruby did not merely visit with a young lady who divulges the fact that Ruby drove with her to the office of Lamar Hunt, the son of H. L. Hunt."

Lane drops the matter at that point. Ruby is left at the office of Lamar Hunt, whose Texas-rich father is a strong supporter of ultraright causes. The reader of "Rush to Judgment" is left to make what he may of this suggested link between Ruby and the Dallas right wing. For clarification, however, he might turn to a commission exhibit. Not 2270. Try 2291.

It also is a statement by Miss Trammel, now Mrs. Penny, to the FBI. In it she says she once had a long talk with Ruby when she and some classmates from the University of Texas visited his Dallas strip club. Ruby asked if she wanted to work for him. She didn't. But Ruby kept asking. The last time was Nov. 21, 1963.

During that phone conversation, Miss Trammel mentioned she was seeking a public relations job at a bowling alley she had read Lamar Hunt owned. She had an appointment to see him that very day. She said she didn't have a car. Ruby offered to drive her to the bank building where Hunt had his office, since he had business to transact at the bank.

"During the trip. . .to the bank, Ruby seemed impressed with the amount of money that Lamar Hunt had made," Miss Trammel told the FBI, "and had mentioned that he knew most of the prominent people in Dallas. . .but did not know Lamar Hunt."

Such handling of commission evidence by the critics happens too often to be mere oversight.

Consider the alleged meeting in Ruby's Carousel Club Nov. 14, 1963 between Ruby, J. D. Tippitt, the officer the commission said was shot by Oswald, and Bernard Weissman. Weissman was the young Easterner who had helped place an ad critical of Kennedy in the Dallas Morning News the day of the assassination.

No Permission

Weissman had arrived in Dallas Nov. 4 to try and set up a new conservative party by infiltrating right-wing groups, one of which he said never accomplished more than "running around burning baskets from Yugoslavia."

Lane, himself, had told the commission about the meeting. He declined to reveal his source for the story because the source had not given him permission to do so.

"But," he wrote in his book, "if the commission had wanted his name, it need only have asked one of its witnesses, Thayer Waldo, a reputable journalist. Counsel, however, did not ask Waldo about the meeting."

Not in so many words. For how was counsel to know what Thayer Waldo knew since Lane had refused to tell the commission, much less counsel, about Waldo or any other source?

But at the end of Waldo's interrogation, which covered other matters, counsel did ask if he could add any information about anything else. Waldo said no, he couldn't.

If not with Waldo, the commission did inquire into the Carousel meeting with other witnesses. One was Larry Crafard, a carnival worker hired by Ruby to do odd jobs around the club. The commission volumes have a statement by Crafard in which he told the FBI he recognized a picture of Weissman as a man he had seen at the club "on a number of occasions."

Lane has this quote. He does not mention that Crafard also told the FBI he had a "very vague recollection" of having heard Ruby mention the name Weissman, that he believed Weissman was a Dallas detective whose first name may have been Johnny and that he "could have my recollection of a Mr. Weissman mixed up with some one else."

Lane does not mention that Crafard thought Weissman was a "white male American" 38 to 43 years of age. Bernard Weissman was a white, male American who was 26 in 1963 and who, if he had been at the Carousel "a number of occasions", had nonetheless been in Dallas only 10 days.

Other Words

Lane reports that several witnesses said Ruby knew Tippitt. One that he cites was Dallas police Lt. George C. Arnett. What Arnett actually told the FBI was that he did not recall to what extent Ruby MAY have known police officer J. D. Tippitt but added that "he does not believe he was more friendly with Tippitt than the average officer."

Arnett, in other words, did not say positively whether Ruby did or did not know Tippitt.

Lane says Crafard and Andrew Armstrong, Ruby's bartender and handyman, both heard Ruby say he knew Tippitt when he learned the officer had been shot. Lane does not say that Armstrong also told the FBI: "From what I gather later on, Mrs. Grant (Ruby's sister) told me it was a different Tippitt that he knew. In other words, there was two officers that had the name of Tippitt.

Actually, there were three. And Ruby did know one of them. He said he knew a detective Gayle Tippitt who worked in special services. Lane's book has this. It mentions that Gayle Tippitt said his "contacts in recent years (with Ruby) have been infrequent."

That is taken from Committee Exhibit 1620 in which Gayle Tippitt also said that in the 1950s he "became very well acquainted with Jack Ruby." Lane does not quote that part of Exhibit 1620.

Lane writes that the commission might also have interrogated Harold Richard Williams. Williams told Lane he had seen Ruby and an officer he identified as J. D. Tippitt in a patrol car when he was arrested in November 1963. Lane warns his readers that Williams' testimony "should be assessed with a degree of caution" since he was not a witness and under oath. He might also havenotified his readers, but didn't, that Tippitt was stationed in the Oak Cliff section of Dallas all the way across town from where Williams said he was arrested.

Two witnesses said that on Nov. 14, the night of the meeting, Weissman was in their home trying to sell them carpeting until 9:30 or 10 p.m. Mrs. Tippitt said her husband was a homebody devoted to his family. Lane, nonetheless, says the commission should have asked her what Tippitt was doing the night of Nov. 14 and asked Weissman what he did after 10 p.m. that same evening.

Lane says the question to Weissman was "never even posed." It may not have been posed to his liking, but Weissman was asked by commission counsel: "Did you at any time while you were in Dallas ever have a meeting with or sit in the Carousel Club with officer Tippitt?"

"No," he answered. He said he had never been in Ruby's club and didn't know him.

Mrs. Tippitt was less exact. She said she had never heard her husband mention being in Ruby's club.

The point is not so much whether such a meeting could or not have taken place. The point here is that Lane, who presented the rumor to the commission, did not present all the evidence to his readers. For instance, neither Mrs. Tippitt's nor Weissman's denial and-or lack of knowledge of the meeting is presented in his book.

But what if, evidence to the contrary, such a meeting did take place? What was its purpose? Lane doesn't suggest one. Neither does any evidence in the Warren volumes.

No Evidence

Nor is there evidence in the volumes to indicate a conspiracy in New Orleans. The commission and the FBI investigated several of the people that have figured in Garrison's case. They found no conspiracy.

This is not to deny the possibility of one. It should be mentioned, however, that the indictment against Clay Shaw, a New Orleans businessman, says he conspired with Oswald to assassinate Kennedy. But it does NOT say the assassination was the one that took place Nov. 22, 1963 in Dallas. Nor does it say it wasn't. Garrison has said he doesn't want to get involved in "semantics" over wording.

It should be mentioned that the chief witness against Shaw so far is a man who first contacted Garrison two days AFTER the district attorney said the case was solved. The witness testified after being given "truth serum" and undergoing hypnosis.

It should be mentioned another witness reportedly said he was offered a bribe by the district attorney's office to give favorable testimony. The witness' lawyer said a lie detector test verified the brib eattempt.

Garrison has said he has evidence that Oswald was working for the Central Intelligence Agency. Others have said Oswald was working for the FBI after his return from the Soviet Union for a fee of $200 a month.

That rumor apparently came from a Houston reporter, Alonzo Hudkins. Hudkins has since told Charles Roberts of Newsweek that he believes J. Edgar Hoover's denials that Oswald was an FBI informant. But Epstein takes the commission to task for relying solely on the word of an agency investigating itself.

Why, he asks in "inquest", didn't the commission on its own interrogate Hudkins and his reported source for the story, Dallas Deputy Sheriff Allan Sweatt? It is a legitimate question.

But it is also legitimate to ask how Epstein can state "no efforts were made by the commission or its staff to investigate the rumor itself." That simply isn't true.

The commission, itself, DID investigate in some detail reports of money orders Oswald reportedly had received while in Dallas. (It turned out to be baseless). The commission, itself, DID inquire why FBI agent James Hosty's name was in Oswald's address book. (Oswald told his wife to take it down after Hosty had visited her at Ruth Paine's where she was living). The commission DID investigate through the Internal Revenue Service Oswald's finances after his return from the Soviet Union. (His known and assumed outgo remarkably approximated his income down to the cash balance he had when arrested).

The commission did NOT take at face value the denials of the FBI. And Epstein did NOT mention the foregoing in claiming the commission "relief entirely on the FBI to disprove the rumor" of Oswald's FBI connection.

Another conspiracy rumor: Ruby entered the Dallas police headquarters to shoot Oswald not by accident but by design. In accord with some superplot the assassin had to be assassinated. One incontestable fact of time however must be considered.

The exact time of Oswald's transfer depended on when police were done questioning him. At the time that was decided Ruby was driving downtown to send a money order to one of his strippers. The time he handed the money order across the Western Union counter was punched by a time clock: 11:17 a.m. Oswald was shot at 11:21 a.m. It takes several minutes to walk from Western Union to the police basement where Oswald was slain.

A commuter catching a train would scarcely cut his corners so finely. Would a man engaged in a superplot do so? Particularly if he knew in some unexplained way his only chance would come at 11:21?

The superplot elsewhere was running a very tight schedule. When Oswald dashed in and out of his rooming house a half-hour after the assassination Lane says a "rather mysterious" incident occurred. A Dallas police car stopped and honked twice and drove off said Earlene Roberts, the housekeeper.

Dallas police said there was no patrol car in the vicinity at the time. Lane says the 'investigation' consisted of nothing more than the statements of police regarding car and officer assignments. (One might ask who would know better than police the whereabouts of a police car).

Lane notes commission evidence that a patrolman had driven Car 207 to the depository "just after 12:45 p.m.", gave the keys to a sergeant and remained in the building several hours.

Police Car 207

A log of the travels of Car 207 should, however, have this information which the report provides—and Lane does not.

1—Police Car 170, driven by acquaintances of hers, often honked outside the house, Mrs. Roberts said. When she saw the car was 207, she told the FBI she went back to looking at television.

2—Patrolman Jimmy Valentine had Car 207 that afternoon. He had been at headquarters when he heard of the assassination at about 12:45 p.m. He drove to the depository all the way across town through heavy traffic. This would put him at the building close to the moments Oswald dashed into the rooming house several miles away. Valentine turned the keys over to a sergeant.

This does not mean, Lane argues, that the car itself couldn't have been driven by some other officers. (Mrs. Roberts saw two in the car). But the men would have had to get the keys from the sergeant (who said he didn't release them until 3:30 p.m.), drive through heavy traffic around the depository to the rooming house in suburban Oak Cliff, honk twice and drive away again.

And for what purpose? Lane doesn't suggest one.

Lane also notes testimony of Deputy Sheriff Roger D. Craig. He said that 15 minutes after the assassination he saw a young man he later identified as Oswald run from near the depository and get into a light colored Rambler station wagon driven by a Negro. Later that afternoon Craig said he recognized Oswald in the office of homicide Capt. Will Fritz.

Craig said Oswald stood up and said: "That station wagon belongs to Mrs. Paine, don't try to tie her into this. . .Everybody will know who I am now."

The commission, as Lane notes, decided it "could not accept important elements of Craig's testimony." Lane does not note the reasons why.

One is an affidavit from Fritz. He recalled a man telling a story similar to Craig's. This, however, occurred in his outer office. Oswald was in his inner office.

"Had I brought this man into my inner office I feel sure I would have remembered it," Fritz said. He didn't remember Oswald jumping up and saying what Craig said he said. Neither did any one else there.

Another conspiracy: Ruby was somehow involved in Castroite activity. At length Lane quotes the testimony of Nancy Perrin Rich. She said in 1962 she and her late husband had met several times in Dallas with others including an Army colonel whose name she did not recall and some one named Dave C.—"I think it was Cole, but I couldn't be sure."

Mrs. Rich's husband had asked $25,000 to shuttle a boat carrying guns into Cuba and refugees out. Negotiations stalled.

"A knock comes on the door and who walks in but my little friend, Jack Ruby," said Mrs. Rich who had been a bartender at the Carousel Club. "Ruby had a bulge in his pocket. He went into another room and returned minus the bulge," Mrs. Rich said. She assumed the bulge was payoff money, although she never saw nor heard that money had changed hands.

Negotiations improved. But Mrs. Rich finally "grabbed my old man and cleared out" when she later thought she recognized a new participant as Vito Genovese's son. She based this on his resemblance to a photograph she had seen of the Mafia chieftain.

Commission counsel Leon Hubert then asked Mrs. Rich if Dave C., who she said had been a bartender at the Dallas University Club, could be one Dave Cherry. "That's it," she replied.

Lane wonders why this potentially corroborating witness was not called to testify. "The FBI's summary of an interview with Cherry was in the commission's possession, but Cherry was not called as a witness."

Indeed, he was not. But the FBI "summary," which Lane does not quote, might explain why. In it Cherry denies knowing any colonel "who was supposed to have been running guns into Cuba." He did know Nancy Perrin Rich whom he said had been barred from the club and who he thought was "mentally deranged".

Also in the commission record is a statement by Dallas detective Paul Rayburn who knew Mrs. Rich and thought her "a psychopathic liar who got great delight out of telling wild tales."

And there is a report of an interview with attorney Cy Victorson who represented Mrs. Rich on a vagrancy charge. He said she told stories "so ridiculous that no one could possibly believe them."

Lane does not ask why Paul Rayburn or Cy Victorson were not called by the commission. He did not use their statements, either. After all, they did not discuss Ruby or gun-running. They only mentioned the one witness who said she saw it all happen.

Says Lane: "About so clandestine an operation as smuggling weapons to Cuba and evacuating exiles, however, one would expect to find corroboration only with the greatest difficulty, if at all." He indicates he found it in Robert McKeown. McKeown had been arrested in 1958 for conspiracy to smuggle guns to Cuban Prime Minister Fidel Castro.

McKeown told the FBI that in 1959 a man who identified himself as Rubenstein (Ruby's original name) had phoned him offering $15,000 to get Castro to release three of his prisoners. Three weeks later McKeown said a man asked him to write a letter of introduction to Castro because he had some Jeeps to sell Cuba. The deals never came to pass.

McKeown told the FBI he "feels strongly that this individual was in fact Jack Ruby. . ." Lane quotes this. He does not quote another part of the statement in which McKeown "remarked he is not certain that the above-described telephone caller from Dallas or the man who personally appeared. . .was identical with the Jack Ruby who killed Lee Harvey Oswald."

Lane takes a partial quote to show strong identification of Ruby by McKeown rather than a whole one which shows something less. He need not have. Ruby said he once was interested in a Jeep deal. He thought though, the intermediary's name was Davis. His sister Eva Grant told the FBI she believed her brother had an option on eight war surplus Jeeps some time around 1960.

This could be corroboration of McKeown. But is it of Nancy Rich? And if one interprets it as such where does it all tie Ruby into an assassination superplot? Do surplus Jeeps in 1959, an unverified meeting in 1962 add up to assassination in 1963?

Lane doesn't answer the question. He merely asks it.

Another conspiracy: Oswald, the admitted Marxist who wanted fair play for Cuba, was actually in the anti-Castro underground.

The source of this was Sylvia Odio, an anti-Castro Cuban. On Sept. 26 or 27, 1963 two Cubans or Mexicans called at her apartment in Dallas with a third person introduced as Leon Oswald, she said. The men told her they had recently come from New Orleans and were friends of her father, a prisoner of Castro.

The next day one of the men, who said his name was Leopoldo, phoned Mrs. Odio and said he wanted to introduce Oswald into the Cuban underground. Leopoldo said Oswald had been in the Marines, was an excellent shot and felt "the Cubans didn't have any guts. . .because President Kennedy should have been assassinated after the Bay of Pigs and some Cubans should have done that. . . ."

After the assassination a stunned Mrs. Odio recognized pictures of Lee Harvey Oswald as the man who came to her home. So did her sister.

The commission maintained that Oswald could not have been in Dallas Sept. 26 or 27. He was in Mexico.

". . .The issue was never resolved," wrote Epstein. That is debatable.

Mexican Travel

Records show that Oswald crossed into Nuevo Laredo, Mexico between 6 a.m. and 2 p.m. Sept. 26. Two passengers on a Houston-Laredo bus said they saw Oswald on board shortly after they awoke at 6 a.m., Sept. 26.

The commission said there was strong evidence that Oswald had left Houston on a bus for Laredo at 2:35 a.m. that morning. It noted a bus had left New Orleans, where Oswald had been living, at 12:30 p.m. Sept. 25 arriving at Houston at 10:50 p.m. that evening. Oswald made a phone call to a woman in Houston that same evening. It can't be determined whether the call was local or not.

Epstein says the visit to Mrs. Odio occurred "the day before he (Oswald) left on his trip to Mexico." This disregards Mrs. Odio's testimony. She said the visit occurred Sept. 26—when Oswald had already crossed the border—or the 27th—when he had reached Mexico City and registered at a hotel. Were some one's dates wrong? Epstein doesn't even mention there is a conflict between him and the testimony.

A Report

He does not mention a commission statement from E. P. Hammett, a Houston bus ticket agent. Hammett told the FBI that in late September a man "strongly resembling" a photograph of Oswald asked him about bus travel to Laredo and Mexico City. Epstein does NOT mention the man eventually bought a ticket to Laredo. Epstein does NOT mention that it was the only such ticket sold that night to Laredo or that it was the only one of its kind sold from Sept. 24 through Sept. 26.

If Oswald had been in Dallas on the 25th, he could have caught a bus from there to Alice, Tex., in time to be on the Houston-Laredo bus on which he was seen. But no tickets were sold by the bus line connecting Dallas and Alice for Laredo between Sept. 23 and 26.

He could, the commission concedes, possibly have driven New Orleans-Dallas-Alice route although the Warren report says it "would have been difficult." Tight scheduling again for the superplot.

Ultimately, the FBI located a Californian, Loran Eugene Hall, who said he had called on Mrs. Odio in Dallas in September with two other men. The two denied it. Hall later altered his story.

In its report the commission stated that the FBI had not completed its investigation of Hall at the time the report went to press. Yet it concluded in the report that Oswald had not been at Mrs. Odio's that September.

"Is it too fastidious to insist that conclusions logically follow, not precede, an analysis of all evidence?" Lane asks. The point is well taken.

Vast Scope

Despite the vast scope of the Warren investigation, the Odio matter has given the critics ammunition to charge the commission with haste, with lack of thoroughness.

Haste? Quite possibly, although the commission denies it. But thoroughness? Who was thorough in detailing the Odio investigation? The commission? Or Epstein?

The Hall evidence neither proves nor disproves the commission conclusion about Mrs. Odio. Epstein says the matter was never resolved. But in effect, it was. As much as it ever can be. The commission was faced with a choice: the testimony of Mrs. Odio and her sister against the evidence they were mistaken. It chose the evidence.

Yet it was the commission that presented all the evidence pro and con about Mrs. Odio. The critics did not. It was the commission that presented all the evidence about Lamar Hunt and Ruby, about Nancy Perrin Rich, about Jeeps, about McKeown, about Oswald's finances. The critics did not.

One may interpret what the commission found, and the critics have, abundantly. But while, as of this date, there may be doubters, books and speculation, the critics have yet to produce that one essential of proof—evidence.

Quota And Admissions Committee Play Vital Part In United Givers Fund

How can the contributor to the United Givers Fund of Ouachita Parish know where the need for his support and assistance is most deserving?

This is the problem that the United Givers Fund way has solved for the community.

The budgets for the 13 voluntary agencies serving Ouachita Parish in the field of health, welfare and recreation are being studied by 10 qualified, able and competent local citizens who make up the Quota and Admissions Committee of the UGF.

The 13 agencies that make up the United Givers Fund of Ouachita Parish follow a very comprehensive budgeting pattern.

For the last month agencies have been asked to describe their programs and financial needs for the coming calendar year. These programs are reviewed by the Quota and Admissions Committee. Realistic decisions are made on the practicability and necessity of the programs. Changes are negotiated and resolved with member agencies. The committee is thus assured that the programs are both needed and realistic.

THE CHAIRMAN

Harry Frazer Jr., committee chairman, said "The committee's assignment is to review the programs and finances of applying agencies in a partnership type approach. While recognizing the principals of autonomy of each agency in the administration of its program, the contributor must be assured that every dollar contributed to the United Givers Fund buys for the community the very best services possible."

This committee also screens all organizations that apply for membership in the United Givers Fund. The organization maintains an "open door policy" of admission for any agency which wants to apply for membership. The committee is charged with receiving these applications and investigating their qualifications based on certain standards.

To assure thrift is a complicated and unpopular job for the committee must look at the big picture — the whole pattern of community needs and services, and dollars available to pay the bills. And in most cases the bills stack higher than the dollars.

Quota and admissions committee members fight hard to equalize the scales while hardly anybody outside the United Givers Fund in-group cheers them on.

By contrast, thousands of other volunteers who help the UGF and its 13 member agencies get more recognition. The people who make headlines with disaster relief, with youth programs and with camp shows for servicemen are clearly Good Joes of the community. Nearly everybody appreciates them.

Perhaps they are the forgotten men when the cheers are passed out because they are not working directly with sick people or cute kids or lonely old folks, nor are they directly beating the drums for money.

Quota and Admissions committee members perspire over printed reports, cold columns of figures and the raw reality that "requests are increasing to beat the band while incoming funds are lagging."

JOB OF CAMPAIGN

So the job of this fall's fund campaign is to strike a more realistic balance between the money that the UGF agencies ask for and the amount likely to be raised in Ouachita Parish.

These 10 men who review the budget requests of 13 agencies will have to do a lot of soul-searching before they meet wtih agency representatives and a lot of teeth-gritting when they have to deny funds to agencies which really deserve them.

The Quota and Admissions committee inevitably will have to deny funds to deserving agencies and to prune certain services which are good but are less urgent than others.

As they trim dollars from agency proposals they have to by impartial, even at the risk of offending a friend or a client who is passionately devoted to the one agency he knows best.

The UGF Quota and Admissions Committee is now in the process of totaling up agency requests. Decisions made now by the unsung committee will have much to do with determining the goal for next fall's UGF campaign. Each agency makes a request that is weighed in several balances. The total of all requests by 13 agencies becomes the UGF goal.

Since the need for funds is increasing the goal for federated fund-raising in Ouachita Parish will edge higher this year.

"All our agencies charge a small fee to persons who can afford to pay for the services," Frazer points out. "United Givers Fund grants make up the difference between an agency's income from fees and sustaining memberships and that agency's total spending."

All should remember that these 10 men face one of the most difficult, but least understood jobs in the United Givers Fund. They have to make vital decisions — decisions that affect a majority of the people of Ouachita Parish.

INFORMATION ASSISTANCE

To help the budgeteers reach intelligent decision, the national office of United Fund supplies the local committee with information about duplication of services, unmet needs, changing needs, comparable tax-supported services, property maintenance and other guidelines.

As a study of other United Funds across the nation shows, every individual agency has a high idea of its own value, and it is well that it does. But sometimes it can't see the forest for the trees and may make unrealistic demands when viewed in the perspective of all agency needs.

A budgeting committee must never let itself be dazzled by an agency's size or popularity or by the prominence of its board members. "One reason why the United Way was originated in the first place," Frazer says, "is because some appeals are more emotional than others and appear to the public to be more important than others actually just as important." In the past, some organizations received more donations than they needed in any one year, while others suffered. Givers today can make certain designations on their pledge cards, but the distribution of funds is much more realistic than in the past.

An agency may be small and still perform an essential service. Popularity does not always mean excellence.

Whenever the budget committee reduces an agency's request the reduction is referred to the UGF executive committee and the executive committee reports to the board of directors. Agencies must meet certain standards and must be rendering vital services to the community, Frazer said. Each agency has to have an elected board of directors from the community at large and must render each year a budget of their expenditures. Monthly statements must also be submitted on expenditures.

ADMISSIONS

Any final goal is, of course, also affected by admission of new agencies to UGF. Organizations applying for admission must prove they have been supported by the community in the past, and must meet other UGF standards.

National trends also affect local decisions. An eight per cent increase in gross national product is predicted this year over 1965.

Rising costs of living on a national scale will force United Givers Fund to increase its campaign goal to meet this increase.

Then, too, the needs constantly change. A cure for a disease may be found and funds for research no longer needed. Money freed in this way may be turned into assistance to new youth programs or Scouting work.

Finally, one of the gravest problems of UGF is the apathy of the people — or more correctly, their misguided ideas. The story is told of a World War I soldier who was asked by the Red Cross to pay a small fee for a package of cigarettes. He refused for the rest of his life to give money to the Red Cross, never realizing that the small fee he paid went to buy other services for other soldiers.

Today, there are more than 2,200 United Fund agencies in the United States which conduct annual campaigns for funds. In 1954 there were 1,627. Most of these are small, but they blanket the country anf symbolize organized philanthropic giving outside the church by living donors.

As an attitude, such philanthropy may be defined as devotion to human welfare, and, as an act of good will, it is a manifestation of freedom of choice in the use of private resources for the benefit of one's fellow men. Frazer puts it this way: "Giving is not enough. Giving Enough is the answer."

In Ouachita Parish, the United Givers Fund agencies serve more than 36,000 persons. Broken down, the number of people served are 23,913 in the Monroe area; 10,689 in the West Monroe area, and 1,545 in the Sterlington area.

Arabs Meet To Plan Israeli Action

KUWAIT (AP)—The foreign ministers of the Arab nations gathered here Saturday for a two-day emergency session to plan joint action against Israel and its supposed allies.

The meeting was called by the Emir of Kuwait, Sheikh Sabah at Salem al Sabah, to seek agreement on how to carry out an oil embargo and other boycott measures against Britain and the United States. Several Arab leaders have demanded these moves in retaliation for alleged U.S. and British aid to Israel.

Qualified sources said the closed-door meeting will also consider a proposal that Arab nations withdraw their bank deposits and investments from Britain—a step they believe could seriously affect Britain's currency reserves.

Kuwait alone—the world's second-largest oil exporter—is reported to have deposits exceeding $1.6 billion in Britain.

The foreign mnisters' recommendations on an oil embargo and other economic sanctions against the two Western powers are to be submitted to an Arab summit conference, expected to convene in Khartoum, Sudan.

Informed sources said the Arab governments were almost certain to declare their unanimous determination to continue the struggle against Israel to final victory at any cost. They were also expected to agree to keep the Suez Canal and their own ports closed to British and American shipping and ban direct exports to the two Western powers, until Western pressure forces Israel to withdraw from occupied Arab territory.

Arab unanimity appeared more doubtful, at the foreign minister or summit level, on such measures as a total embargo on oil shipments to Western nations demanded by some of the more revolutionary Arab governments.

Saudi Arabia and Kuwait at present are continuing oil exports to destinations other than Britain and the United States in tankers not flying the British or American flag. Leftist labor unions in Kuwait staged a strike at the Kuwait oil installations last week to halt all oil exports.

Many of the strike leaders were non-Kuwaiti Arabs and the government quickly stopped the strike by threatening to expel them for this unique enclave of high-living standards.

Some Arab oil experts expressed concern over reports that the Soviet Union was stepping up a drive to sell oil to Britain.

They said they feared the Russians might take advantage of the present crisis to supplant Arab oil in the lucrative British market.

The foreign ministers were expected to review the role played by the Soviet Union in the United Nations and on the diplomatic level since the beginning of the Middle East crisis, and to consider what meaningful help they could expect from the Kremlin for their continuing struggle against Israel.

This is at present the touchiest topic in inter-Arab discussions. The 13 Arab nations here represent all shades of opinion on relations with Russia and are unlikely to reach agreement on a joint policy, despite a firmly pro-Russian stand expected from Egypt, Syria and Liberia.

World Food Problem Requires Vast Plans

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson's Science Advisory Committee said Saturday the world's food problem is of such scale, severity, and duration that a massive, long-range, innovative and unprecedented effort will be required to master it.

This effort, the committee said, will make it necessary that the United States assume leadership of the non-Communist world and of all international institutions in inaugurating and carrying out a gigantic program for bringing populations under control and expanding food production.

A somber picture of food needs and of a massively outlined effort to meet those needs was supplied in a committee report to President Johnson. The report was prepared, after more than 15 months' work, at the President's request.

As a panel of distinguished scientists see it, a program to head off mass famines, with accompanying riots and disorders, could cost Americans $6 billion to $7 billion a year more than the United States currently puts into food aid and in agricultural and economic development in deficit areas of the world.

"The over-all problem of the world food supply is so large and so extremely complex that it is almost impossible for the casual or even the moderately concerned observer to comprehend its true dimensions or to grasp its intricate interrelationships with the many other aspects of economic growth and development," the report said.

The panel came to such basic conclusions as:

— The problem must be solved within 20 years or the battle may well be lost for all time.

— The attainment of an adequate supply of food must come out of the development of all phases of the economies of underdeveloped areas, not of agriculture alone.

President Johnson, in a forword to the report, said the world food problem is "one of the foremost challenges of mankind today."

"The dimension of the challenge will define the dimension of our response and the means for the response," he added. "We must join others in a massive effort to help the less fortunate of the earth to help themselves."

The report spoke of "the grim reality of the food shortage that will occur during the next 20 years" unless agricultural production in the developing countries can be increased through the use of fertilizer, new plant varieties, pesticides and farm machinery. Needed also, it said, will be research to develop and apply new cropping systems to each country's climate and soil.

Subsistence agriculture must be changed to commercial agriculture in many areas, the report said. This will require improved transportation, marketing, farm credit, storage and distribution systems.

Dr. Donald F. Hornig, special assistant to the President for science and technology, and chairman of the Science Advisory Committee, told newsmen at a briefing that he is pessimistic regarding the success of the program his group outlined.

He said many things stand in the way, including domestic and international political factors, the difficulty of persuading leaders and their peoples of the immensity of the problem, and the urgency of starting now to do something about it.

Mental Health Group Slates Monthly Meet

The Northeast Louisiana Mental Health Association will hold its monthly meeting Monday at 7:30 p.m. in the Louis Locke room of the Ouachita Parish Public Library, 1800 Stubbs St. in Monroe, according to Diehlmann Bernhardt, association president.

The meeting will feature the showing of a film, "A Family Affair," which portrays the everyday life of a family whose relationships are strained to the breaking point. But, through the skill and understanding of a trained family case worker, the members of this family come to understand some of the reasons for their behavior and find hope for the future.

All members are requested to attend, and the meeting also is open to the general public, Bernhardt said.

Also on the agenda are committee progress reports and other miscellaneous business, president added.

Jewish Group Set To Hear Israel Report

The local United Jewish Appeal Charities will join others throughout the nation Tuesday in a coast-to-coast hookup to hear a report from Israel.

Jerry Bernat president of the local group, said the meeting will be held at the Paragon Club beginning at 12:30 p.m. The meeting is open to the public.

Speaking to the UJA organizations in the United States will be Edward Ginsberg, associate general chairman.

He left the United States June 14 for a personal check of Israel. His talk will come directly from the Mid-East.

Purpose of the meetings is to hear a report on the humanitarian programs of the UJC and the immediate reconstruction needs, Bernat said.

Enthusiasm Shown For Indian Music

CONCERT

Yehudi Menuhin's enthusiasm for Indian music has now reached the intensity where he squats cross-legged and plays it, on his violin, with squatting Indian musicians playing such Indian instruments as the sitar, the tabla and the tanpura.

And for photographs and the recording microphones, too! Angel Records calls the product "west meets east" but it is more west being nationalized by east since the great Indian musician, Ravi Shankar, recomposed two traditional Indian pieces to provide parts for the western violin but without the slightest departure from the Indian idiom.

One is a duet for violin and sitar, an enormously complex stringed instrument with a remote resemblance to the guitar. This he plays with Shankar who has been widely recognized as the foremost sitarist of the age. The other is a duet for violin and tabla or drums, and in this one his collaborator was Alla Rakha.

For ears untrained in Indian idiom, the performances sound entirely authentic which would be important only to connoisseurs. To western ears they are unfailingly attractive and in places betwitching. As usual Menuhin has a point to make and to make it he adds his own performance of Enesco's violin sonata No. 3 "in the popular Rumanian style" in which his sister, Hephzibah, played the piano part. The point is the kinship of westtern and eastern folk idoms (36418.)

The Russian label "Melodiya" newly entered on the American market has provided an unabashed sentimental recording of Tchaikovsky's string sextet, "Souvenir de Florence," by the Genrikh Talalyan, violinist, and Mstislav Rostropovich, cellist, added. It is rarely recorded Tchaikovsky and the Russian manner of playing makes it commanding. Tchaikovsky had an affair with the Italian city and in this piece he tried to tell all about it (40036).

Columbia is honoring the musically eloquent maestro of the Cleveland Orchestra, George Zell, by putting his interpretations of major masters in single packages. One is his playings of the four symphonies of Brahms (358.) Another has him conducting three Beethoven symphonies, the 5th, 6th and 9th (Epic-163.) Both are three record sets. There is also a single record on which Szell conduct's Mozarts' 35th and 41st symphonies (6969.)

POPULAR

Vaughn has recorded more than a dozen LP's during the last decade and every one of them has been a delight.

His latest is called "Josephine" (Dot 25796) and it is easy and pleasant listening from the opening "Cocoanut Grove" to the concluding "I'm Looking Over a Four Leaf Clover."

This collection includes an unusual version of "The Perfect Song," which oldtimers will remember as the theme tune of the old "Amos and Andy" radio show.

Other numbers in this Randy Wood production include "Boogie Woogie," San Antonio Rose," "Heartaches," "Peg O' My Heart" and "September Song" as well as the title tune.

"Guy Lombardo's Greatest Hits" (Decca 74812) is another good buy in the big band department. Guy is limited to 12 numbers, only a fraction of the tunes which Lombardo has popularized. Most of these are closely associated with Lombardo, among them "Boo Hoo," "Everywhere You Go," "Enjoy Yourself," "Give Me the Moon Over Brooklyn" and "The Third Man Theme."

And on the jazz side, "The Best of Artie Shaw" (RCA Victor LSP-3675e) is an electronically reprosessed reprise of some of this fine clarinetist's top numbers. Such Shaw standards as "Begin The Beguine," "All the Things You Are" and "Frenesi" make this LP one worth saving.

Selected Singles — "It's Such a Pretty World Today" (Capitol P5917), "El Dorado" by Nelson Riddle (Epic 5-10175), "So Tenderly" by St. George and Tana (Kapp K-832), "Un Poco Rio" by Joe Harnell (Columbia 4-44148), "All's Quiet on West 23rd" by The Jet Stream (Smash S-2095).

Tape Deck—"Jackie Gleason Presents A Taste of Brass for Lovers Only" (Capitol Y1W 2684) is an outstanding item in the current batch of reel-to-reel tapes. Roy Eldridge is featured on trumpet and Charlie Ventura on tenor and bass sax. If you are in the eight-track market, try "Connie Francis Live at the Sahara in Las Vegas" (MGM 84411). This Ampex cartridge packs in 18 numbers.

Northeast Study Tour Is Changed

The Israeli - Arab war early this month has caused some changes in this year's Northeast Louisiana State College Summer Study Tour.

Tour Director Tom McCann of the Northeast faculty has announced that stops in Italy, Spain and Portugal have been added to the tour to replace five countries involved in the Near East conflict which were on the original schedule. The countries dropped from the schedule are Egypt, Lebanon, Syria, Jordan and Israel.

Cost of the tour remains $1,297.50 per person, which covers all expenses — air, ship and bus fares, registration, meals, tips, lodging and insurance. A maximum of 30 persons can make the tour, which begins Aug. 3 and ends Aug. 24. The foreign tour is sponsored by the School of Liberal Arts.

Anyone eligible to attend Northeast can make the tour, McCann said. Persons can earn from three to six hours of undergraduate or graduate credit in history and geography on the tour or audit the courses.

Greece will be the first country on the tour. Among the highlights of the tour in that country will be a weekend cruise among the Greek Islands, visits to the Acropolis and other of the many tourist atractions in Athens, and trips to Delphi and the Monastery of St. Luke.

In Turkey, the tourists will visit the Blue Mosque, the Hippodrome and other attractions in Istanbul and take an excursion by steamer along the Bosphorus.

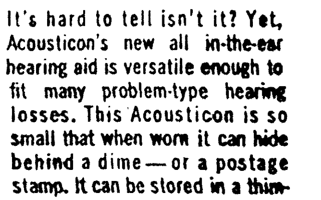
The Vatican, the Roman Forum, the Colosseum and other famous places will be visited during a three-day stay in Rome.

Seven days will be spent in Spain. Cities in that country to be visited are Madrid, Toledo, Malage, Granada, Seville and Cordoba.

In Portugal, the tourists will visit Lisbon, Monsanto, Queluz, Sintra, Pena, Guincho, Cascais and Estoril.

In addition to the scheduled tours, the tourists will have a total of five days of free time to visit places of particular interest or go shopping — a free day each in Greece and Turkey, one and a half days each in Italy and Spain.

Which ear has Acousticon's smallest hearing aid?



It's hard to tell isn't it? Yet, Acousticon's new all in-the-ear hearing aid is versatile enough to fit many problem-type hearing losses. This Acousticon is so small that when worn it can hide behind a dime — or a postage stamp. It can be stored in a thimble. Still, thanks to Acousticon's Golden Heart micro-circuits, it has the power to amplify distant sounds. Still don't believe us? Fill out the coupon below for more information and for a free actual-size replica. And, oh yes, Acousticon's smallest hearing aid is hiding in the ear on the left. We challenge anyone to show us a smaller hearing aid.

How can the contributor to the United Givers Fund of Ouachita Parish know where the need for his support and assistance is most deserving?

This is the problem that the United Givers Fund way has solved for the community.

The budgets for the 13 voluntary agencies serving Ouachita Parish in the field of health, welfare and recreation are being studied by 10 qualified, able and competent local citizens who make up the Quota and Admissions Committee of the UGF.

The 13 agencies that make up the United Givers Fund of Ouachita Parish follow a very comprehensive budgeting pattern.

For the last month agencies have been asked to describe their programs and financial needs for the coming calendar year. These programs are reviewed by the Quota and Admissions Committee. Realistic decisions are made on the practicability and necessity of the programs. Changes are negotiated and resolved with member agencies. The committee is thus assured that the programs are both needed and realistic.

THE CHAIRMAN

Harry Frazer Jr., committee chairman, said "The committee's assignment is to review the programs and finances of applying agencies in a partnership type approach. While recognizing the principals of autonomy of each agency in the administration of its program, the contributor must be assured that every dollar contributed to the United Givers Fund buys for the community the very best services possible."

This committee also screens all organizations that apply for membership in the United Givers Fund. The organization maintains an "open door policy" of admission for any agency which wants to apply for membership. The committee is charged with receiving these applications and investigating their qualifications based on certain standards.

To assure thrift is a complicated and unpopular job for the committee must look at the big picture — the whole pattern of community needs and services, and dollars available to pay the bills. And in most cases the bills stack higher than the dollars.

Quota and admissions committee members fight hard to equalize the scales while hardly anybody outside the United Givers Fund in-group cheers them on.

By contrast, thousands of other volunteers who help the UGF and its 13 member agencies get more recognition. The people who make headlines with disaster relief, with youth programs and with camp shows for servicemen are clearly Good Joes of the community. Nearly everybody appreciates them.

Perhaps they are the forgotten men when the cheers are passed out because they are not working directly with sick people or cute kids or lonely old folks, nor are they directly beating the drums for money.

Quota and Admissions committee members perspire over printed reports, cold columns of figures and the raw reality that "requests are increasing to beat the band while incoming funds are lagging."

JOB OF CAMPAIGN

So the job of this fall's fund campaign is to strike a more realistic balance between the money that the UGF agencies ask for and the amount likely to be raised in Ouachita Parish.

These 10 men who review the budget requests of 13 agencies will have to do a lot of soul-searching before they meet wtih agency representatives and a lot of teeth - gritting when they have to deny funds to agencies which really deserve them.

The Quota and Admissions committee inevitably will have to deny funds to deserving agencies and to prune certain services which are good but are less urgent than others.

As they trim dollars from agency proposals they have to by impartial, even at the risk of offending a friend or a client who is passionately devoted to the one agency he knows best.

The UGF Quota and Admissions Committee is now in the process of totaling up agency requests. Decisions made now by the unsung committee will have much to do with determining the goal for next fall's UGF campaign. Each agency makes a request that is weighed in several balances. The total of all requests by 13 agencies becomes the UGF goal.

Since the need for funds is increasing the goal for federated fund-raising in Ouachita Parish will edge higher this year.

"All our agencies charge a small fee to persons who can afford to pay for the services," Frazer points out. "United Givers Fund grants make up the difference between an agency's income from fees and sustaining memberships and that agency's total spending."

All should remember that these 10 men face one of the most difficult, but least understood jobs in the United Givers Fund. They have to make vital decisions — decisions that affect a majority of the people of Ouachita Parish.

INFORMATION ASSISTANCE

To help the budgeteers reach intelligent decision, the national office of United Fund supplies the local committee with information about duplication of services, unmet needs, changing needs, comparable tax - supported services, property maintenance and other guidelines.

As a study of other United Funds across the nation shows, every individual agency has a high idea of its own value, and it is well that it does. But sometimes it can't see the forest for the trees and may make unrealistic demands when viewed in the perspective of all agency needs.

A budgeting committee must never let itself be dazzled by an agency's size or popularity or by the prominence of its board members. "One reason why the United Way was originated in the first place," Frazer says, "is because some appeals are more emotional than others and appear to the public to be more important than others actually just as important." In the past, some organizations received more donations than they needed in any one year, while others suffered. Givers today can make certain designations on their pledge cards, but the distribution of funds is much more realistic than in the past.

An agency may be small and still perform an essential service. Popularity does not always mean excellence.

Whenever the budget committee reduces an agency's request the reduction is referred to the UGF executive committee and the executive committee reports to the board of directors. Agencies must meet certain standards and must be rendering vital services to the community, Frazer said. Each agency has to have an elected board of directors from the community at large and must render each year a budget of their expenditures. Monthly statements must also be submitted on expenditures.

ADMISSIONS

Any final goal is, of course, also affected by admission of new agencies to UGF. Organizations applying for admission must prove they have been supported by the community in the past, and must meet other UGF standards.

National trends also affect local decisions. An eight per cent increase in gross national product is predicted this year over 1965.

Rising costs of living on a national scale will force United Givers Fund to increase its campaign goal to meet this increase.

Then, too, the needs constantly change. A cure for a disease may be found and funds for research no longer needed. Money freed in this way may be turned into assistance to new youth programs or Scouting work.

Finally, one of the gravest problems of UGF is the apathy of the people — or more correctly, their misguided ideas. The story is told of a World War I soldier who was asked by the Red Cross to pay a small fee for a package of cigarettes. He refused for the rest of his life to give money to the Red Cross, never realizing that the small fee he paid went to buy other services for other soldiers.

Today, there are more than 2,200 United Fund agencies in the United States which conduct annual campaigns for funds. In 1954 there were 1,627. Most of these are small, but they blanket the country anf symbolize organized philanthropic giving outside the church by living donors.

As an attitude, such philanthropy may be defined as devotion to human welfare, and, as an act of good will, it is a manifestation of freedom of choice in the use of private resources for the benefit of one's fellow men. Frazer puts it this way: "Giving is not enough. Giving Enough is the answer."

In Ouachita Parish, the United Givers Fund agencies serve more than 36,000 persons. Broken down, the number of people served are 23,913 in the Monroe area; 10,689 in the West Monroe area, and 1,545 in the Sterlington area.

Arabs Meet To Plan Israeli Action

KUWAIT (AP)—The foreign ministers of the Arab nations gathered here Saturday for a two-day emergency session to plan joint action against Israel and its supposed allies.

The meeting was called by the Emir of Kuwait, Sheikh Sabah at Salem al Sabah, to seek agreement on how to carry out an oil embargo and other boycott measures against Britain and the United States. Several Arab leaders have demanded these moves in retaliation for alleged U.S. and British aid to Israel.

Qualified sources said the closed-door meeting will also consider a proposal that Arab nations withdraw their bank deposits and investments from Britain—a step they believe could seriously affect Britain's currency reserves.

Kuwait alone—the world's second-largest oil exporter—is reported to have deposits exceeding $1.6 billion in Britain.

The foreign mnisters' recommendations on an oil embargo and other economic sanctions against the two Western powers are to be submitted to an Arab summit conference, expected to convene in Khartoum, Sudan.

Informed sources said the Arab governments were almost certain to declare their unanimous determination to continue the struggle against Israel to final victory at any cost. They were also expected to agree to keep the Suez Canal and their own ports closed to British and American shipping and ban direct exports to the two Western powers, until Western pressure forces Israel to withdraw from occupied Arab territory.

Arab unanimity appeared more doubtful, at the foreign minister or summit level, on such measures as a total embargo on oil shipments to Western nations demanded by some of the more revolutionary Arab governments.

Saudi Arabia and Kuwait at present are continuing oil exports to destinations other than Britain and the United States in tankers not flying the British or American flag. Leftist labor unions in Kuwait staged a strike at the Kuwait oil installations last week to halt all oil exports.

Many of the strike leaders were non-Kuwaiti Arabs and the government quickly stopped the strike by threatening to expel them for this unique enclave of high-living standards.

Some Arab oil experts expressed concern over reports that the Soviet Union was stepping up a drive to sell oil to Britain.

They said they feared the Russians might take advantage of the present crisis to supplant Arab oil in the lucrative British market.

The foreign ministers were expected to review the role played by the Soviet Union in the United Nations and on the diplomatic level since the beginning of the Middle East crisis, and to consider what meaningful help they could expect from the Kremlin for their continuing struggle against Israel.

This is at present the touchiest topic in inter-Arab discussions. The 13 Arab nations here represent all shades of opinion on relations with Russia and are unlikely to reach agreement on a joint policy, despite a firmly pro-Russian stand expected from Egypt, Syria and Liberia.

World Food Problem Requires Vast Plans

Mental Health Group Slates Monthly Meet

The Northeast Louisiana Mental Health Association will hold its monthly meeting Monday at 7:30 p.m. in the Louis Locke room of the Ouachita Parish Public Library, 1800 Stubbs St. in Monroe, according to Diehlmann Bernhardt, association president.

The meeting will feature the showing of a film, "A Family Affair," which portrays the everyday life of a family whose relationships are strained to the breaking point. But, through the skill and understanding of a trained family case worker, the members of this family come to understand some of the reasons for their behavior and find hope for the future.

All members are requested to attend, and the meeting also is open to the general public, Bernhardt said.

Also on the agenda are committee progress reports and other miscellaneous business, president added.

Jewish Group Set, To Hear Israel Report

The local United Jewish Appeal Charities will join others throughout the nation Tuesday in a coast-to-coast hookup to hear a report from Israel.

Jerry Bernat, president of the local group, said the meeting will be held at the Paragon Club beginning at 12:30 p.m. The meeting is open to the public.

Speaking to the UJA organizations in the United States will be Edward Ginsberg, associate general chairman.

He left the United States June 14 for a personal check of Israel. His talk will come directly from the Mid-East.

Purpose of the meetings is to hear a report on the humanitarian programs of the UJC and the immediate reconstruction needs. Bernat said .

BUILDING COLLAPSES

SEOUL (UPI) — A five-story school building collapsed in the course of construction Thursday, killing seven workmen and injuring 20 others in Taegu city.

Which ear has Acousticon's smallest hearing aid?

It's hard to tell isn't it? Yet, Acousticon's new all in-the-ear hearing aid is versatile enough to fit many problem-type hearing losses. This Acousticon is so small that when worn it can hide behind a dime — or a postage stamp. It can be stored in a thimble. Still, thanks to Acousticon's Golden Heart micro-circuits, it has the power to amplify distant sounds. Still don't believe us? Fill out the coupon below for more information and for a free actual-size replica. And, oh yes, Acousticon's smallest hearing aid is hiding in the ear on the left. We challenge anyone to show us a smaller hearing aid.

Bridge That Crossed The Years

The road passes through scrub palms, near an inlet, and makes a swift turn into St Augustine Beach. Suddenly a bridge looms ahead. It is not a bridge of the new times, one with shiny toll gates and snake - like mercury vapor overhead lights. On each face post are electric lanterns, and the bridge allows only a pair of cars to pass. It is a bridge which wears its years with grace, a bridge with charm. On the other side, across the water, is another time, almost another life — St. Augustine.

Americans will this summer journey to many far corners of the earth. Even the wastes of Siberia will know the voices of those who are equipped with dollars and passports bearing the golden eagle. Aboard jets, ships, sailboats and, who knows, maybe even submarines, tourists will migrate to strange destinies on foreign strands. At home family cars will accept the challenge of summer, riding the epic of the open road. And some of the most fortunate world travelers will visit St. Ausgustine, oldest city on the North American continent, once a city of Spain.

Around a tree - lined square are buildings of interest. There is an old worldliness riding on the air which comes down the street. If there were no highway markers amidst the palms and no cars with Florida license plates, St. Augustine could be a city of Europe, somewhere on the Iberian Peninsula. One soon learns that the city is undergoing a change so drastic, so complete, as to render it a Spanish city, not of present days, but one in which the Dons might feel at home. It will cross a space time barrier in an experiment so fascinating as to capture the minds of even those who have "done everything." For the rest of us, it is already a living time machine-city worthy of the interest of all who travel.

Around a corner, half a block from the seawall, is a Spanish hospital of five centuries ago. The hospital is complete in every detail including the "death room" and a soldier of the king who sleeps beneath the cross. One imagines the hard times of those years and how often the death room must have been occupied. The Widener Museum tells of St Augustine's early years and the happy days of Henry Flagler and the glorious twenties. But nothing tells of history and the old times as does Casa de Hidalgo the Spanish government pavilion. Spain, in a gesture of great international friendship, has built and maintains an extensive and perfectly detailed estate of colonial years. Furnishings of the period are masterfully created by Spanish craftsmen.

Nearby streets are narrow and all buildings are faithfully in keeping with the restoration. Signs on doors and walls tell the story of each house each store. Shops merchandise products which though made now are produced on the spot with the processes which have survived five hundred years. The Restoration Committee in its search for complete accuracy has used city plans designed by the Dons when Florida was a province of Charles V. Buildings are being restored or built on their original sites according to the plans and records of the early city.

In the early days, towns of the new world faced starvation and swift death from enemies of nature and man. Of necessity they were more self - sufficient than can be understood or imagined today. In St. Augustine therefore awed visitors find candlemakers, silver and tin smiths, breadshops, printers, and artisans who specialize in the processes of Andalusia, the area of Seville. A restaurant off the Avenida Menendez is authentic Sevillian and serves good Gazpachos, the soup-salad of the Andalusia. The Ponce de Leon Hotel, soon to become a woman's college, is a hotel in the grand European manner. Very Spanish, it is more a palace than hotel. To assist the restoration, merchants and property owners have caught the spirit and seem to vie to see who can develop the most authentic likeness of five centuries into the past. Always a tourist attraction, St Augustine is fast becoming an attraction to rival Williamsburg or Greenfield Village.

Wind ruffles waters beneath the old bridge. On the shoreline to the north Castello de San Marcos broods in the late afternoon. As always on the ocean there is saltiness and a warm wind. Flags of Spain, England, the Confederacy, France, Florida, and the U. S. flap atop a building which could pass for the National Bank of Spain. A horse - drawn buggy trundles near the square and has a confident right of way over its deep - breathing, gas - burning competitors. A lone fisherman walked out of the sun, rod and reel in hand, toward the old-new - old St. Augustine, over the bridge that crosses the years.

Limping Liz Taylor

THE FAMILY LAWYER

Flunking The Teacher

Pupils who fear flunking may find comfort in the fact that teachers, too, sometimes have similar worries. The public school teacher who fails to meet basic standards of performance may face demotion or dismissal.

Statutory and contractual provisions vary. But a typical question is whether a particular teacher is "incompetent." What does that word mean, when tested in a court of law?

It applies most clearly, of course, to the teacher who simply does not know his subject. A math teacher baffled by math or a history teacher ignorant of history is obviously incompetent for the position he holds.

He is also incompetent if, although he knows his subject, he lacks the ability to explain it to his pupils.

But there are still other ways, beyond the mere ability to teach the subject, in which a teacher must measure up.

Thus, he must be able to keep order in his classroom without resorting to extreme methods. A woman teacher was held incompetent because she kept her pupils terrorized by cuffing them hard and often. The judge said such tactics "would not even have been tolerated in the days when the hickory stick was the symbol of authority in the classroom."

Also, a teacher must be reasonably cooperative with the school administration. One teacher was held incompetent because he refused to let supervisory personnel into his classroom. So was another teacher who, after collecting money for tickets to school plays, failed to account for the proceeds.

Even a physical handicap may amount to incompetence. A court upheld a charge of incompetence against a teacher who became too deaf to hear recitations — or the profanity that flowed freely in his classroom.

On the other hand, a teacher is not required to be a paragon of virtue.

One teacher would occasionally toss a piece of chalk at an unruly pupil. Incompetent? The court said no. Another teacher chewed tobacco. Again, a court held this was not grave enough to prove incompetence.

Nor does the law condemn a teacher just because his pupils don't happen to like him. As one court said:

"Popularity among pupils does not necessarily prove competency. The ablest teacher may be the most unpopular one."

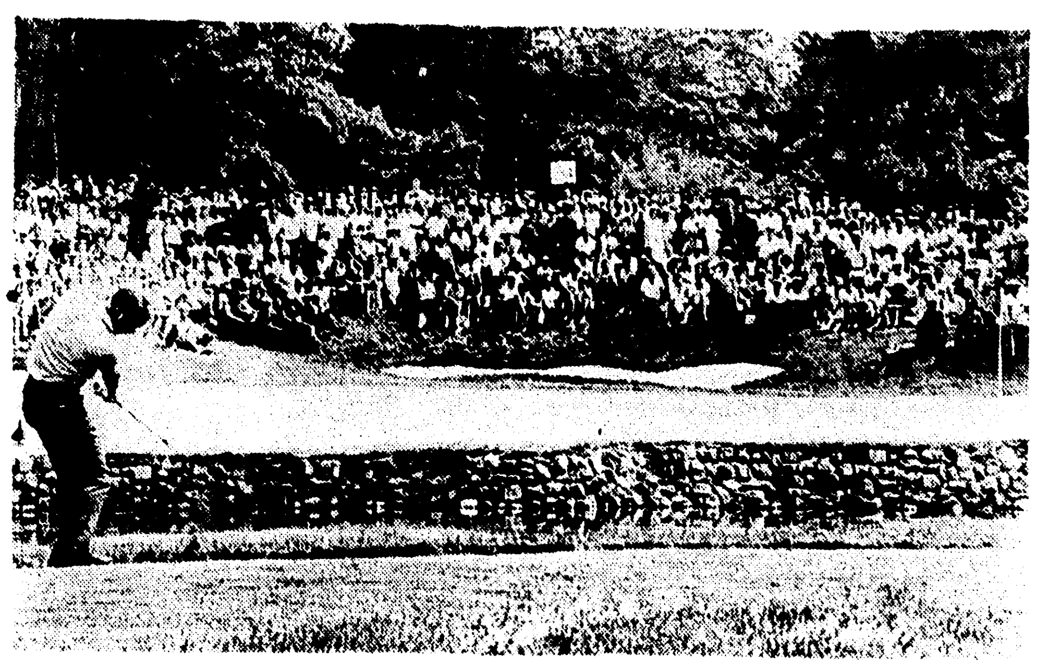
Fleckman Regains Open Lead



ARNOLD PALMER, having hit his tee shot into the water, plays his third shot to the green where he took a double-bogey 5 on the 162-yard par 3 hole. Arnie's Army is waiting on the embankment during Saturday's third round of the U. S. Open. (AP Wirephoto)

Only Player Under Par; Big Three 1-Stroke Back

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

Marty Fleckman, a shy, 23-year-old amateur from Port Arthur, Tex., came on with a rush while the game's big three eyed each other like wary cats and grabbed a one-stroke lead over Arnold Palmer, Jack Nicklaus and Bill Casper Saturday in the third round of the National Open Golf Championship.

It was a shocker.

Going three shots over par on the first two holes, the slender good looking Walker Cup alternate harnessed his game in a brilliant finish, knocking in six birdies for a one-under-par 69 and a 54-hole score of 209.

He was the only man in the elite field under par for three trips over the sweltering, 7-015 yard Baltusrol course, which plays to a par 70.

The defending champion, Casper, playing it cool and cozy, surged to a three-stroke lead at one stage but ran into a rash of three straight bogeys starting at the 15th hole and dragged home with a 71 for 210.

He was tied at that figure, even par, with Palmer and Nicklaus, the two heavyweights of golf, who were paired with each other in a dream bracketing at the end of the 66-man line-up.

Palmer, his face showing grim determination, bogeyed the first hold and knocked his tee shot in the water at the short fourth. He didn't get a birdie until the 18th, finishing with a 73.

Nicklaus, the Golden Giant who has been harassed by a nagging slump, went 16 holes also without a birdie but finished with a pair of fours on the back breaking par 5 17th and 18th for a 72.

Tied for fifth, and still very much in contention with 211s, were rookie pro Deane Beman of Bethesda, Md., 71; Miller Barber, 69; Don January, 70, and Gardner Dickinson, 68.

Fleckman is seeking to become the first amateur to win the open since Johnny Goodman did it in 1933, and he may have the shots and temperament to do the trick.

Sandra, his pretty bride of less than a year, said that her husband, who led the first round with a 67 but moved over Friday for the expected drive of Palmer, Nicklaus and Casper, went into the third round without a nerve twitching.

"He slept 12 hours over night—I couldn't wake him up until noon today," she said. "He never talked about the day's round at all. He was very calm."

Fleckman started with a bogey at the first, where he drove into the rough, and took a double bogey at the second, where his tee shot went into the rough and his second flew 20 yards over the green, landing in some twigs and leaves.

He barely was able to move the ball. He fluffed it only 15 feet, finally reached the green and two-putted.

"It beat the heck out of me," he said. "I said, 'Let's get back in there, and I did.' "

Casper got a bogey at the second, missing his drive, but he rallied quickly by nailing an iron to within 1½ feet of the pin at the third and sending his approach pin high 10 feet from the cup at the fifth.

He seemed headed for a runaway lead when he added a birdie at the 14th, but then disaster struck.

"It wasn't that I was tired," the defending champion said, in discussing his three straight bogeys starting at the 15th. "I just hit the ball in bad positions and couldn't salvage the shot."

He drove into the rough at the 15th and had to play his second safe into the fairway. He went over the green at the short 16th and chipped poorly. On the 17th, he hit his third into some high grass and coudn't chop the ball out. He had a chance to save his par but missed a six-foot putt.

Palmer and Nicklaus apparently made the mistake of playing each other instead of the course and the results were costly. They slugged away like a pair of heavyweights.

Palmer bogeyed the first hole when he pitched over the green and took a double bogey 5 on the fourth hole when he drew his tee shot to fine and dumped in the water. It was a daring but reckless shot.

He saved a par on the seventh with a magnificent chip and played par through to the 14th where he bogeyed again by missing a five-foot putt. His closing birdie came on a 12-foot putt.

Nicklaus, who called his iron play sloppy and didn't putt well, bogeyed the second hole, three-putting from eight feet; the tough sixth, hitting into the rough and pitching short; the 10th, pitching over the green, and the 15th, three-putting from 30 feet.

His muscle was brought into use on the 623-yard and 542-yard closing holes. On the 17th, he chipped within three feet and reached the green with two big hits on the 18th.

Once Fleckman settled down, he played superbly, hitting accurate irons and knocking in crucial putts.

He sank from six feet on the fourth and from 15 feet at the eighth. On the back nine, he rolled in an eight-footer on the 10th, a 15-footer at the 14th and short putts of five feet at the 16th and 17th.

After hitting into a trap on the final hole, he made a magnificent recovery and almost got a birdie when his 12-foot putt banged the back of the cup and stayed out.

Tigers Split Twinbill From A's, Set 9 Hour Playing Record

DETROIT (AP) — Rookie Dave Duncan smashed a leadoff home run in the 19th inning lifting Kansas City to a 6-5 victory in the second game of a record-breaking doubleheader against the Detroit Tigers Saturday.

The Tigers won the opener 7-6 on a bases-loaded single by pinch hitter Bill Heath with two out in the ninth inning.

The doubleheader lasted nine hours, five minutes, eclipsing the American League record of 8:04 set in a 24 inning doubleheader between Cleveland and Kansas City in 1965. The major league mark of 9:52 was set by San Francisco and New York in 1964 over 32 innings.

The first game lasted 3 hours, 25 minutes and the nightcap 5:40.

Drysdale Beats Cincinnati, 6-1

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Len Gabrielson cracked a two-run triple highlighting a four-run seventh inning rally that carried Don Drysdale and the Los Angeles Dodgers to a 6-1 victory over the National League leading Cincinnati Reds Saturday night.

A double by John Roseboro put the Dodgers ahead 2-1 and Gabrielson sent two more runners home with his triple. Los Angeles got another run off reliever Bob Lee when Gabbrielson scored on a sacrifice fly by Dick Schofield. The Dodgers added another run in the eighth on Johnson's sacrifice fly.

Southern California Lowers 440-Relay Mark By A Second

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Southern California's crack 440-yard relay team shattered the world record with a 38.6 clocking Saturday night as the West Coast school made a shambles of team competition in the 46th annual NCAA track and field meet.

The team of Earl McCullouch, Fred Kuller, O. J. Simpson and Lennox Miller bettered the listed world record by a full second and broke its own pending mark of 39.0, set just seven days ago.

"We're going to do a lot better," Simpson said. "Our passes were not good, especially mine to Miller."

Big Randy Matson of Texas A&M scored a double by winning the discus with a throw of 190-4. He won the shot Friday night with a meet-record toss of 67-9¼. Afterward, Matson said he would give up discus competition next year and concentrate on the shot put.

Jim Ryun of Kansas, who holds the world mile record of 3:51.3, coasted to victory in 4:03.5. "I didn't push myself," Ryun said. "The pace was slow and nobody was tired after the race."

Delmon McNabb of Louisiana State uncorked a throw of 263-5 to win the javelin and Steve Brown of Idaho took the high jump at 7-1. Ed Caruthers of Arizona cleared the same height but Brown was awarded first place because of fewer misses.

Emmett Taylor of Ohio University nipped Steve Carson of Iowa State in the 440 with a burst of speed in the final strides. Taylor was clocked in 45.9, Carson in 46.0.

Tommie Smith of San Jose, world record-holder at 20.0 in the 220-yard dash, won his specialty in 20.2. Smith clocked that time also in two earlier elimination heats. Miller was second in 20.4.

"Man, that cat was out there like lightning," Smith said of Miller whom he caught and passed with 50 yards remaining.

Southern California, with 42 points after 10 events, had nearly doubled the score of second place Oregon before the pole vault was completed.

440 relay final: 1. Southern California (McCullouch, Kuller, Simpson, Miller) 38.6 (world record, old record 39.6 by Southern University; Southern California [illegible] 39.5 mark pending); 2, Tennessee 40.3; 3, Rice, 40.5; 4, Ohio U. 40.7; 5, Washington 41.0; 6, Maryland, 41.2.

Mile final: 1, Jim Ryun, Kansas, 4:03.5; 2, Roscoe Divine, Oregon, 4:06.2; 3, Sam Bair, Kent State, 4:06.7; 4, Larry Wieczorck, Iowa, 4:07.6; 5, Dave Wilborn, Oregon 4:07.9; 6, Dave Roberts, Washington, 4:07.9.

220 semi final, first heat: 1, Tommie Smith, San Jose, 20.2; 2, Dave Reeves, Brigham Young 21.1; 3, Orin Richburg, Kent State, 21.1; 4, Fred Kuller, Southern California, 21.1.

220 semifinal, second heat—1, Lennox Miller, Southern California, 20.4; 2, Jerry Bright, Arizona State 20.9; 3, Bob Rovere, East Tennessee State, 20.9; 4, Doug Belzung, Rice 21.0.

Mathews Raps 498th, Houston, Atlanta Split

HOUSTON (AP) — Eddie Mathews led off the last of the ninth inning with the 498th homer of his career, giving Houston a 4-3 victory over Atlanta in the nightcap of their day-night doubleheader Saturday.

Mathews' fifth homer of the season came against reliever Bob Bruce, the pitcher the Braves received for him in a trade last winter.

The Braves had tied the game in the top half of the inning with three runs, the last two on pinch hitter Mike de la Hoz's two-out homer. That blow knocked out Dave Giusti, who entered the ninth with a two-hit shutout.

Denis Menke doubled for the Braves with one out in the ninth and Woody Woodward singled him home with two out before de la Hoz connected for the second homer of the season.

Wade Blasingame, traded to Houston by the Braves this week, got the last out and picked up the victory.

The Astros had scored twice in the fourth off Tony Cloninger. Jim Wynn cracked his 16th homer of the season in the eighth. It was his eighth homer in 10 games and fifth in three days.

Talks On Defenses Complete Northeast's Coaching Clinic

Doug Dickey of Tennessee and Jack Hartman of Southern Illinois dipped into the technical problems of defense in their two professions Saturday as the two - day Northeast Summer Coaching Clinic closed on the Northeast campus.

Dickey paused briefly after his talk to talk a little offense with a group of coaches. He explained that the Vols like to use the quarterback option - run pass play especially around the 10 - yard line because of the natural versaility of the play.

Speaking of a diagramed look-in pass, Dickey said, "We'll never drive all the way for a touchdown without running it. It's that good of a play."

Hartman told the group, "When most people think of pressure defense, they think of pressuring the man with the ball, but that's not the way we do it.

"Too many forwards (wings) run downcourt to get set to play defense and they're not even looking to see if the ball gets in bounds. If a guard is putting on the pressure and a wing is letting his man go, it's not doing a bit of good."

The clinic was sponsored by the Department of Health and Physical Education at Northeast with A. S. Huffman and Jack Rowan serving as coordinators.

Rowan described the clinic as, "a tremendous success."

"We had a lot of people here," said Rowan, "and I think they all learned something."

Nash Set To Defend Crown At DeSiard

Nash is defending champion of the event which kicks off Thursday to run through Sunday.

Contestants will play an 18-hole medal qualifying round Thursday, including those qualifying for the All - Age Championship Flight. The low seven qualifiers and the defending champ will be placed in the championship flight.

All others will be placed in their respective flights.

Players will be bracketed according to age groups. Class A, 50 - 54, Class B, 55 - 59, Class C, 60 - 6[illegible], Class D, 6[illegible] - 64, Class E, 65 - 69 and Class E, 70 and over.

First round matches will be played Friday with all flights beginning at 8:30 a.m. Semifinals will be played beginning at 8:30 a.m. Saturday and finals will be played with a shotgun start at 9 a.m. Sunday.

Other past winners of the tournament include Bill Jones in 1964, George Thomas in 1962, and Malley Reynolds in 1961. The tournament was not scheduled in 1963.

The entertainment lineup includes a ladies' luncheon and style show at noon, ladies' bridge at 2 p.m. and a buffet at 7:30 p.m. Thursday for contestants and wives. Friday there will be a ladies sherry party at 10 a.m., ladies golf at 3:30 p.m. and a barbecue and dance at 7:30 p.m.

A party will be held at 7:30 p.m. Saturday at the Lotus Club.

Fleckman Regains Open Lead

Only Player Under Par; Big Three 1-Stroke Back

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

Marty Fleckman, a shy, 23-year-old amateur from Port Arthur, Tex., came on with a rush while the game's big three eyed each other like wary cats and grabbed a one-stroke lead over Arnold Palmer, Jack Nicklaus and Bill Casper Saturday in the third round of the National Open Golf Championship.

It was a shocker.

Going three shots over par on the first two holes, the slender good looking Walker Cup alternate harnessed his game in a brilliant finish, knocking in six birdies for a one-under-par 69 and a 54-hole score of 209.

He was the only man in the elite field under par for three trips over the sweltering, 7-015 yard Baltusrol course, which plays to a par 70.

The defending champion, Casper, playing it cool and cozy, surged to a three-stroke lead at one stage but ran into a rash of three straight bogeys starting at the 15th hole and dragged home with a 71 for 210.

He was tied at that figure, even par, with Palmer and Nicklaus, the two heavyweights of golf, who were paired with each other in a dream bracketing at the end of the 66-man line-up.

Palmer, his face showing grim determination, bogeyed the first hold and knocked his tee shot in the water at the short fourth. He didn't get a birdie until the 18th, finishing with a 73.

Nicklaus, the Golden Giant who has been harassed by a nagging slump, went 16 holes also without a birdie but finished with a pair of fours on the back breaking par 5 17th and 18th for a 72.

Tied for fifth, and still very much in contention with 211s, were rookie pro Deane Beman of Bethesda, Md., 71; Miller Barber, 69; Don January, 70, and Gardner Dickinson, 68.

Fleckman is seeking to become the first amateur to win the open since Johnny Goodman did it in 1933, and he may have the shots and temperament to do the trick.

Sandra, his pretty bride of less than a year, said that her husband, who led the first round with a 67 but moved over Friday for the expected drive of Palmer, Nicklaus and Casper, went into the third round without a nerve twitching.

"He slept 12 hours over night—I couldn't wake him up until noon today," she said. "He never talked about the day's round at all. He was very calm."

Fleckman started with a bogey at the first, where he drove into the rough, and took a double bogey at the second, where his tee shot went into the rough and his second flew 20 yards over the green, landing in some twigs and leaves.

He barely was able to move the ball. He fluffed it only 15 feet, finally reached the green and two-putted.

"It beat the heck out of me,"he said. "I said, 'Let's get back in there, and I did.' "

Casper got a bogey at the second, missing his drive, but he rallied quickly by nailing an iron to within 1½ feet of the pin at the third and sending his approach pin high 10 feet from the cup at the fifth.

He seemed headed for a runaway lead when he added a birdie at the 14th, but then disaster struck.

"It wasn't that I was tired," the defending champion said, in discussing his three straight bogeys starting at the 15th. "I just hit the ball in bad positions and couldn't salvage the shot."

He drove into the rough at the 15th and had to play his second safe into the fairway. He went over the green at the short 16th and chipped poorly. On the 17th, he hit his third into some high grass and coudn't chop the ball out. He had a chance to save his par but missed a six-foot putt.

Palmer and Nicklaus apparently made the mistake of playing each other instead of the course and the results were costly. They slugged away like a pair of heavyweights.

Palmer bogeyed the first hole when he pitched over the green and took a double bogey 5 on the fourth hole when he drew his tee shot to fine and dumped in the water. It was a daring but reckless shot.

He saved a par on the seventh with a magnificent chip and played par through to the 14th where he bogeyed again by missing a five-foot putt. His closing birdie came on a 12-foot putt.

Nicklaus, who called his iron play sloppy and didn't putt well, bogeyed the second hole, three-putting from eight feet; the tough sixth, hitting into the rough and pitching short; the 10th, pitching over the green, and the 15th, three-putting from 30 feet.

His muscle was brought into use on the 623-yard and 542-yard closing holes. On the 17th, he chipped within three feet and reached the green with two big hits on the 18th.

Once Fleckman settled down, he played superbly, hitting accurate irons and knocking in crucial putts.

He sank from six feet on the fourth and from 15 feet at the eighth. On the back nine, he rolled in an eight-footer on the 10th, a 15-footer at the 14th and short putts of five feet at the 16th and 17th.

After hitting into a trap on the final hole, he made a magnificent recovery and almost got a birdie when his 12-foot putt banged the back of the cup and stayed out.

Tigers Split Twinbill From A's, Set 9 Hour Playing Record

DETROIT (AP) — Rookie Dave Duncan smashed a leadoff home run in the 19th inning lifting Kansas City to a 6-5 victory in the second game of a record-breaking doubleheader against the Detroit Tigers Saturday.

The Tigers won the opener 7-6 on a bases-loaded single by pinch hitter Bill Heath with two out in the ninth inning.

The doubleheader lasted nine hours, five minutes, eclipsing the American League record of 8:04 set in a 24 inning doubleheader between Cleveland and Kansas City in 1965. The major league mark of 9:52 was set by San Francisco and New York in 1964 over 32 innings.

The first game lasted 3 hours, 25 minutes and the nightcap 5:40.

Drysdale Beats Cincinnati, 6-1

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Len Gabrielson cracked a two-run triple highlighting a four-run seventh inning rally that carried Don Drysdale and the Los Angeles Dodgers to a 6-1 victory over the National League leading Cincinnati Reds Saturday night.

A double by John Roseboro put the Dodgers ahead 2-1 and Gabrielson sent two more runners home with his triple. Los Angeles got another run off reliever Bob Lee when Gabbrielson scored on a sacrifice fly by Dick Schofield. The Dodgers added another run in the eighth on Johnson's sacrifice fly.

Southern California Lowers 440-Relay Mark By A Second

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Southern California's crack 440-yard relay team shattered the world record with a 38.6 clocking Saturday night as the West Coast school made a shambles of team competition in the 46th annual NCAA track and field meet.

The team of Earl McCullouch, Fred Kuller, O. J. Simpson and Lennox Miller bettered the listed world record by a full second and broke its own pending mark of 39.0, set just seven days ago.

"We're going to do a lot better," Simpson said. "Our passes were not good, especially mine toMiller.' '

Big Randy Matson of Texas A&M scored a double by winning the discus with a throw of 190-4. He won the shot Friday night with a meet-record toss of 67-9¼. Afterward, Matson said he would give up discus competition next year and concentrate on the shot put.

Jim Ryun of Kansas, who holds the world mile record of 3:51.3, coasted to victory in 4:03.5. "I didn't push myself," Ryun said. "The pace was slow and nobody was tired after the race."

Delmon McNabb of Louisiana State uncorked a throw of 263-5 to win the javelin and Steve Brown of Idaho took the high jump at 7-1. Ed Caruthers of Arizona cleared the same height but Brown was awarded first place because of fewer misses.

Emmett Taylor of Ohio University nipped Steve Carson of Iowa State in the 440 with a burst of speed in the final strides. Taylor was clocked in 45.9, Carson in 46.0.

Tommie Smith of San Jose, world record-holder at 20.0 in the 220-yard dash, won his specialty in 20.2. Smith clocked that time also in two earlier elimination heats. Miller was second in 20.4.

"Man, that cat was out there like lightning," Smith said of Miller, whom he caught and passed with 50 yards remaining.

Southern California, with 42 points after 10 events, had nearly doubled the score of second-place Oregon before the pole vault was completed.

440 relay final—1, Southern California (McCullouch, Kuller, Simpson, Miller), 38.6, (world record, old record 39.6 by Southern University—Southern California has 39.0 mark pending). 2, Tennessee, 40.3. 3, Rice, 40.5. 4, Ohio U. 40.7. 5, Washington 41.0. 6, Maryland, 41.2.

Mathews Raps 498th, Houston, Atlanta Split

HOUSTON (AP) — Eddie Mathews led off the last of the ninth inning with the 498th homer of his career, giving Houston a 4-3 victory over Atlanta in the nightcap of their day-night doubleheader Saturday.

Mathews' fifth homer of the season came against reliever Bob Bruce, the pitcher the Braves received for him in a trade last winter.

The Braves had tied the game in the top half of the inning with three runs, the last two on pinch hitter Mike de la Hoz's two-out homer. That blow knocked out Dave Giusti, who entered the ninth with a two-hit shutout.

Denis Menke doubled for the Braves with one out in the ninth and Woody Woodward singled him home with two out before de la Hez connected for the second homer of the season.

Wade Blasingame, traded to Houston by the Braves this week, got the last out and picked up the victory.

The Astros had scored twice in the fourth off Tony Cloninger. Jim Wynn cracked his 16th homer of the season in the eighth. It was his eighth homer in 10 games and fifth in three days.

Talks On Defenses Complete Northeast's Coaching Clinic

Doug Dickey of Tennessee and Jack Hartman of Southern Illinois dipped into the technical problems of defense in their two professions Saturday as the two - day Northeast Summer Coaching Clinic closed on the Northeast campus.

Dickey paused briefly after his talk to talk a little offense with a group of coaches. He explained that the Vols like to use the quarterback option - run pass play especially around the 10 - yard line because of the natural versaility of the play.

Speaking of a diagramed look-in pass, Dickey said, "We'll never drive all the way for a touchdown without running it. It's that good of a play."

Hartman told the group, "When most people think of pressure defense, they think of pressuring the man with the ball, but that's not the way we do it.

"Too many forwards (wings) run downcourt to get set to play defense and they're not even looking to see if the ball gets in bounds. If a guard is putting on the pressure and a wing is letting his man go, it's not doing a bit of good."

The clinic was sponsored by the Department of Health and Physical Education at Northeast with A. S. Huffman and Jack Rowan serving as coordinators.

Rowan described the clinic as, "a tremendous success."

"We had a lot of people here," said Rowan, "and I think they all learned something."

Nash Set To Defend Crown At DeSiard

Nash is defending champion of the event which kicks off Thursday to run through Sunday.

Contestants will play an 18-hole medal qualifying round Thursday, including those qualifying for the All - Age Championship Flight. The low seven qualifiers and the defending champ will be placed in the championship flight.

All others will be placed in their respective flights.

Players will be bracketed according to age groups: Class A, 50 - 54; Class B, 55 - 59; Class C, 60 - 64; Class D, 65 - 64; Class E, 65 - 69 and Class E, 70 and over.

First round matches will be played Friday with all flights begining at 8:30 a.m. Semifinals will be played begining at 8:30 a.m. Saturday and finals will be played with a shotgun start at 9 a.m. Sunday.

Other past winners of the tournament include Bill Jones in 1964, George Thomas in 1962, and Malley Reynolds in 1961. The tournament was not scheduled in 1963.

The entertainment lineup includes a ladies' luncheon and style show at noon, ladies' bridge at 2 p.m. and a buffet at 7:30 p.m. Thursday for contestants and wives. Friday there will be a ladies sherry party at 10 a.m., ladies golf at 3:30 p.m. and a barbecue and dance at 7:30 p.m.

A party will be held at 7:30 p.m. Saturday at the Lotus Club.

Lincoln Liberty Sweeps Into Semis Of Fast Pitch Tourney

Lincoln Liberty smashed Texarkana, 5-0 to move into the semi-finals Saturday in the Monroe Jaycees Fast Pitch Softball tournament.

Duncan hurled a beauty for Lincoln, with Baker's single the only spoiler fo rthe no-hit try. Lockwood rapped two doubles for Lincoln, which can do no worse than finish third in the tourney.

Lincoln Liberty had advanced to the quarterfinals with wins over El Dorado, 5-1 and Larry's Gulf Service 4-0 Friday night.

Texarkana marched to the Lincoln match with a 3-2 conquest of [illegible] and a 6-0 win over F. N. Edwards.

The other quarterfinal will be played today at 9 a.m. at Benoit A between Stephens Truck Line of Lake Charles and Yazoo of Baton Rouge. Yazoo stopped Monsanto, 3-1 and England AFB, 1-0. Stephens defeated defending champion Cobbs', 3-0 in the second round after knocking off Beeson's of Texarkana, 2-0.

After losing its opening game to Stephens, 6-0, Brookhaven, Miss., charged back into the limelight by nearly controlling the top half of the losers' bracket. Brookhaven then stopped Beesons' 10-2, Burger Chef, 7-1 and El Dorado 11-6 before meeting Monsanto in the final game of the evening.

The championship game will be played at 7:30 p.m. today at Benoit A with a second game, if needed in the double elimination tournament beginning at 9 p.m.

Dennis Trahan had a homer for Stephens in its win over Brookhaven and Bobby Spell fanned 19 batters while pitching a no-hitter for Yazoo against England.

Erie allowed only four hits and picked up two himself to pace Cobbs' past Beeson's. He also struck out 12 batters.

Barney Bridges collected three hits, including two doubles as Stephens sent Cobbs' to the bracket.

Lienex homered in Yazoo's slim 3-1 win over Monsanto in the second round and C. Smith hurled a two-hitter while Jimmy Bradley homered as Brookhaven beat Beesons. Robert Fugler came back with three straight hits for Brookhaven as it knocked out Burger Chef with a 7-1 win. T. Bone Bradley collected two hits for Brookhaven in the 11-6 win over El Dorado.

In the loser's bracket, Monsanto blanked Brookhaven, 2-0 on the fine pitching of Carl Bartenhager and a home run by catcher Don Muller. Chuck Smith was the loser.

England Air Force Base nosed out Lasco, 4-3. Ament got credit for the win, while Ensminger was tagged for the loss. [illegible] had two hits for Lasco.

F. N. Edwards then clubbed England Air Force, 9-2 with Sullivan getting two homers for Edwards. Nelson homered for the losers. Page got the win and Ament the loss.

Earlier Edwards knocked off Jackson, 4-0 as Salter got the win and clouted two homers. Fisher was the loser.

In the quarters of the losers bracket, Cobb Bar-B-Q blanked Edwards, 4-0 as Erie hurled a two-hitter. Salter got the loss.

Pirates Curb Late Phil Rally

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Pittsburgh Pirates raked Jim Bunning for six runs and nine hits in the first six innings then held off Philadelphia's late rally for a 6-5 victory over the Phillies Saturday.

Matty Alou and Andre Rodgers led the Pirates' attack against Bunning, 6-7, and two successors. Alou slapped out four hits and drove in two runs while Rodgers touched off a two-run second inning burst with a single, then led off the fourth with his first homer of the season.

The Phillies, held to one run — Gene Oliver's homer — and two hits by Dennis Ribant through the first five innings, chased the Pirate starter in the sixth when Johnny Briggs doubled home a run.

But Pete Mikkelsen worked out of a bases-loaded jam and Roy Face checked a two-run rally in the eighth, preserving Ribant's third victory in six decisions.

Williams' smash, which a fan intercepted at the box seat railing, scored Al Weis, who had beaten out an infield single, advanced to second on Charlie Smith's hurried throw, and moved to third on an infield out by pinch hitter Smoky Burgess.

Horlen, who was lifted for Burgess, struck out seven and held the Yankees to four hits in his eight inning stint. Hoyt Wilhelm pitched the ninth to protect Horlen's eighth victory.

Lincoln Liberty smashed Texarkana, 5-0 to move into the semi-finals Saturday in the Monroe Jaycees Fast Pitch Softball tournament.

Duncan hurled a beauty for Lincoln, with Baker's single the only spoiler fo rthe no-hit try. Lockwood rapped two doubles for Lincoln, which can do no worse than finish third in the tourney.

Lincoln Liberty had advanced to the quarterfinals with wins over El Dorado, 5-1 and Larry's Gulf Service, 4-0 Friday night.

Texarkana marched to the Lincoln match with a 3-2 conquest of Freison and a 6-0 win over E. N. Edwards.

The other quarterfinal will be played today at 9 a.m. at Benoit A between Stephens Truck Line of Lake Charles and Yazoo of Baton Rouge. Yazoo stopped Monsanto, 3-1 and England AFB, 1-0. Stephens defeated defending champion Cobbs', 3-0 in the second round after knocking off Beeson's of Texarkana, 2-0.

After losing its opening game to Stephens, 6-0, Brookhaven, Miss., charged back into the limelight by nearly controlling the top half of the losers' bracket. Brookhaven then stopped Beesons', 10-2, Burger Chef, 7-1 and El Dorado, 11-6 before meeting Monsanto in the final game of the evening.

The championship game will be played at 7:30 p.m. today at Benoit A with a second game, if needed in the double elimination tournament beginning at 9 p.m.

Dennis Trahan had a homer for Stephens in its win over Brookhaven and Bobby Spell fanned 19 batters while pitching a no-hitter for Yazoo against England.

Erie allowed only four hits and picked up two himself to pace Cobbs' past Beeson's. He also struck out 12 batters.

Barney Bridges collected three hits, including two doubles as Stephens sent Cobbs' to the bracket.

Lienex homered in Yazoo's slim 3-1 win over Monsanto in the second round and C. Smith hurled a two-hitter while Jimmy Bradley homered as Brookhaven beat Beesons. Robert Fugler came back with three straight hits for Brookhaven as it knocked out Burger Chef with a 7-1 win. T. Bone Bradley collected two hits for Brookhaven in the 11-6 win over El Dorado.

In the loser's bracket, Monsanto blanked Brookhaven, 2-0 on the fine pitching of Carl Bartenhager and a home run by catcher Don Muller. Chuck Smith was the loser.

England Air Force Base nosed out Lasco, 4-3. Ament got credit for the win, while Ensminger was tagged for the loss. Summer had two hits for Lasco.

E. N. Edwards then clubbed England Air Force, 9-2 with Sullivan getting two homers for Edwards. Nelson homered for the losers. Page got the win and Ament, the loss.

Earlier Edwards knocked off Jackson, 4-3 as Salter got the win and clouted two homers. Fisher was the loser.

In the quarters of the losers bracket, Cobb Bar-B-Q blanked Edwards, 4-0 as Erie hurled a two - hitter. Salter got the loss.

Pirates Curb Late Phil Rally

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Pittsburgh Pirates raked Jim Bunning for six runs and nine hits in the first six innings, then held off Philadelphia's late rally for a 6-5 victory over the Phillies Saturday.

Matty Alou and Andre Rodgers led the Pirates' attack against Bunning, 6-7, and two successors. Alou slapped out four hits and drove in two runs while Rodgers touched off a two-run second inning burst with a single, then led off the fourth with his first homer of the season.

The Phillies, held to one run — Gene Oliver's homer — and two hits by Dennis Ribant through the first five innings, chased the Pirate starter in the sixth when Johnny Briggs doubled home a run.

But Pete Mikkelsen worked out of a bases-loaded jam and Roy Face checked a two-run rally in the eighth, preserving Ribant's third victory in six decisions.

Hiatt Puts Giants Past Cards, 3-2

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Jack Hiatt singled home his second run of the game in a two-run third inning that sent the San Francisco Giants to a 3-2 victory over St. Louis Saturday, ending a three-game losing streak.

Hiatt's hit came off reliever Ron Willis, who replaced loser Steve Carlton after Willie Mays and Jim Davenport walked and Jim Hart singled in the tying run.

Hiatt doubled in a first-ining run after another walk to Mays and a hit by Hart.

The Cardinals, who had taken a 1-0 lead on Curt Flood's two-out homer in the first inning, pulled ahead 2-1 in the second when winner Joe Gibbon hit Tim McCarver with a pitch and McCarver came around on a hit by Alex Johnson and a fielder's choice.

Cubs Pound New York, 9-1

NEW YORK (AP) — Rookie Rich Nye cut down New York on five hits while Billy Williams and Ted Savage led a 10-hit Chicago attack with home runs as the Cubs trounced the Mets 9-1 Saturday.

Nye, 5-3, yielded a run in the second inning on a double by Tommy Davis and a single by Ron Swoboda, but took command the rest of the way.

Williams unloaded his 11th homer in the first inning after Don Kessinger walked. Savage connected for his third homer with none on in the fourth.

The Cubs added two unearned runs in the third on Kessinger's triple, a throwing error and Ron Santo's run-scoring single.

Red Sox Chop Washington, 5-1

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tony Conigliaro's home run and Carl Yastrzemski's two-run double backed the five-hit pitching of Jim Lonborg Saturday as the Boston Red Sox defeated Washington 5-1.

Conigliaro led off the second inning against loser Barry Moore with his sixth homer. Yastrzemski's third-inning double, fllowing two-out singles by Reggie Smith and Mike Andrews, staked Lonborg to a 2-0 lead.

The Red Sox' right-hander singled another run across in the fourth and breezed to his eighth victory in 10 decisions, striking out six.

Orioles, Angels Snap Streaks; Baltimore Gets Better Shake

BALTIMORE (AP) — Frank Robinson and Curt Blefary socked homers, triggering the Baltimore Orioles to a 7-5 victory over California Saturday night.

Robinson's 20th homer capped a three-run rally in the first inning off loser George Brunet, 3-10. Blefary hit his 12th homer as the first batter to face reliever Pete Cimino in the seventh.

Winner Steve Barber allowed only two hits but was replaced by Moe Drawbowsky in the sixth when California scored two runs on three walks, an infield out and a single by Woodie Held.

Held, who beat the Orioles twice Friday night with homers one day after being traded by Baltimore, also doubled in the fourth for the first hit off Barber, who brought his record to 4-6.

The Angels added a run in the seventh off Drawbowsky on singles by Rick Reichardt and Bob Rodgers, and a double play grounder. Rodgers blasted a two-run homer in the ninth before Eddie Watt came on to get the last out.

Wagner Clouts Winning Homer

CLEVELAND (AP) — Leon Wagner's three-run homer capped a four-run seventh inning that powered the Cleveland Indians to a 7-3 victory over the Minnesota Twins Saturday night in a game that started an hour late because of rain.

Wagner's blast over the right center field fence was his 10th. It came after the Indians broke a 3-3 tie when Lee Maye singled to score Pedro Gonzalez, who led off with a bunt single and advanced to third on Larry Brown's hit.

Harmon Killebrew's bases-empty homer, his 18th, gave the Twins a run in the first inning and they added another in the second when Rich Rollins reached safely on an error by Max Alvis, and eventually scored on Frank Kostro's single.

The Indians tied the score in the second on Brown's two-run double following a single by Alvis and a walk to Joe Azcue. They went ahead in the third when Maye tripled and Hinton singled.

Minnesota pulled even in the fourth when Bob Allison walked, went to third on a single by Rollins and scored as Zoilo Versalles hit into a double play.

Aces Come Easy

Scoring holes-in-one is not such an easy task that it can become habit forming, but W. O. Webb of Monroe is getting close to making it something regular.

Webb uncorked a two-iron shot on the 140-yard fourth hole at Bayou DeSiard Country Club Saturday to log his second ace on the same course.

Undefeated Horlen Blanks Yanks, 1-0

Williams' smash, which a fan intercepted at the box seat railing, scored Al Weis, who had beaten out an infield single, advanced to second on Charlie Smith's hurried throw, and moved to third on an infield out by pinch hitter Smoky Burgess.

Horlen, who was lifted for Burgess, struck out seven and held the Yankees to four hits in his eight inning stint. Hoyt Wilhelm pitched the ninth to protect Horlen's eighth victory.

Golf Sponsors Support Players

SPRINGFIELD, N.J. (AP) — The International Golf Sponsors Association, which represents 32 tournaments on the pro tour, issued a statement Saturday supporting the players in their current feud with PGA officials.

Cassius Clay vs. Draft Law-- Brief Trial Expected Monday

HOUSTON (AP) — Cassius Clay, unbeaten in the ring, begins the biggest fight of his life Monday when he goes on trial in federal court charged with violating the universal Military Training and Service Act.

Conviction could mean five years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Both defense and prosecution predict a brief trial.

The heavyweight champion claims he is a Black Muslim minister and should be exempt from the draft. He also contends draft boards are stacked with white members and therefore discriminate against Negroes.

Clay, who has won 29 straight fights including 23 by knockouts, was stripped of his heavyweight crown by domestic groups moments after he refused to take the oath as a draftee last April 28.

Ten days later he was indicted by a federal grand jury. He entered a plea of innocent and was released on $5,000 bond.

His original trial date was set for June 5 but he received a two-week delay. The Fifth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals and the Supreme Court rejected appeals seeking a delay until August.

Clay, a descendant of a runaway Kentucky slave, prefers to be known by his Black Muslim name of "Muhammad Ali". He says he preaches 90 per cent of the time and boxes 10 per cent.

"If justice prevails, if my constitutional rights are upheld, I will be forced to go neither to the Army nor to jail," Clay said when he refused to be inducted. "In the end I am confident that justice will come my way for the truth must eventually previal."

A jury will hear the evidence in U.S. Dist. Judge Joe M. Ingraham's courtroom which is expected to be filled to capacity.

The defense and prosecution say the primary issues the jury must decide are whether a draft board was justified in classifying Clay 1-A or should it have exempted him from military service, thus recognizing his claim to being a true Muslim minister.

Hayden Covington of New York City and Quinnan Hodges of Houston, Clay's lawyers, have filed numerous civil actions challenging the structure of the Selective Service System.

HOUSTON (AP) — Cassius Clay, unbeaten in the ring, begins the biggest fight of his life Monday when he goes on trial in federal court charged with violating the universal Military Training and Service Act.

Conviction could mean five years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Both defense and prosecution predict a brief trial.

The heavyweight champion claims he is a Black Muslim minister and should be exempt from the draft. He also contends draft boards are stacked with white members and therefore discriminate against Negroes.

Clay, who has won 29 straight fights including 23 by knockouts, was stripped of his heavyweight crown by domestic groups moments after he refused to take the oath as a draftee last April 28.

Ten days later he was indicted by a federal grand jury. He entered a plea of innocent and was released on $5,000 bond.

His original trial date was set for June 5 but he received a two-week delay. The Fifth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals and the Supreme Court rejected appeals seeking a delay until August.

Clay, a descendant of a runaway Kentucky slave, prefers to be known by his Black Muslim name of "Muhammad Ali". He says he preaches 90 per cent of the time and boxes 10 per cent.

"If justice prevails, if my constitutional rights are upheld, I will be forced to go neither to the Army nor to jail," Clay said when he refused to be inducted. "In the end I am confident that justice will come my way for the truth must eventually previal."

A jury will hear the evidence in U.S. Dist. Judge Joe M. Ingraham's courtroom which is expected to be filled to capacity.

The defense and prosecution say the primary issues the jury must decide are whether a draft board was justified in classifying Clay 1-A or should it have exempted him from military service, thus recognizing his claim to being a true Muslim minister.

Hayden Covington of New York City and Quinnan Hodges of Houston, Clay's lawyers, have filed numerous civil actions challenging the structure of the Selective Service System.

Criticisms Of A Critic

With Paul Martin

(Editor's Note: Paul Martin is on vacation. His guest writer today is Richard Alden Knight, nationally syndicated outdoor writer and author of Solunar Tables for hunters and fishermen)

By RICHARD ALDEN KNIGHT

In a past column, Cleveland Amory, erudite and opinionated television critic for TV Guide, chose as his subject for kudos and brickbats the hour-long show "American Sportsman." Calling it the worst show on the air, Mr. Amory takes it to task for assassinating weekly certain species of rare game for the dubious enjoyment of the viewing public. In part, he is correct; in other areas, he finds himself lamentably far afield.

I hold no brief whatsoever for the killing of the great bears. . . . we have pathetically few enough of them as it is now. When they are dispatched with bow and arrow, I feel even more strongly. I have little use or respect for a man who has to be backed up in his quest for dangerous game; an archer must if he is to continue to provide for his family in later years. I also know that polar bears have been sent to the great beyond by handguns, but the practice is scarcely recommended by insurance actuaries.

Where I find myself in complete agreement with Mr. Amory is in the use of "television and movie and entertainment personalities" as the members of these weekly walkabouts on the bare spaces of the world. The fact that Bing Crosby likes to fish scarcely qualifies him national exposure as a fisherman; Phil Harris would do well to stick to his nightclub acts and not bore the pants off viewing sportsmen with his antics afield. The excited claims of Curt Gowdy, calling Lee Wulff's flyrod sailfish an all-time first, grate on sensibilities attuned to the knowledge that the late (and great) Dr Webster Robinson of Key West, Florida, had accomplished this a full two years before. A television first it may have been but not a first in any true sense of the word.

Quite frankly, I am bored to tears with entertainers and personalities. I decry the practice of giving these overpaid and overexposed people awards and further exposure for guaranteed space and pull on a rating scale. The fact that Grits Gresham, a good outdoor writer and a sportsman with few peers, appeared on a recent segment of the "American Sportsman" was greeted with cheers on the part of this writer. Grits knows which end of a shotgun goes "bang" which is a lot more than I can say about many of the "experts" gathered from the ranks of the movie and TV colony to date.

Today, television is a desert when it comes to outdoor news shows. Producers are loathe to risk rating wars on the basis of the outdoor sports, preferring to hammer us with detectives and cowboys until they come out our ears. We will become far better acquainted with ski jumping and track meets than we will with the running of the finals of the "Roaring" Grand American Trapshoot at Vandalia, Ohio. Our children will grow up well grounded in the fine points of playing split end rather than be able to appreciate a trout stream on a May afternoon.

'Have-Nots' On Outside

Who are these people who control the picture? Amory is a rabid anti-violence campaigner, a reactionary product of a school that would see wild animals through the eyes of Walt Disney's saccarine approach to Bambi-ism. He would prefer (and says so) programs like "Flipper," a show that would make a self-respecting dolphin violently ill. He points to "Daktari," a show that somehow has lasted while showing a weekly rundown of as dangerous and inaccurate a set of gun manners and handling practices as I have ever seen. I wouldn't hunt with a single member of that cast.

There is a crying need for hunting and fishing exposure on the TV screen. "American Sportsman" is a start, not a good one, but at least a beginning. American sportsmen, the real ones who spend their hard earned coin on tackle and equipment each year and promote this four-billion dollar business we call hunting and fishing, should be getting a bit weary of seeing African veldt and overblown actors in concert. Like the pristine scriveners for "Sports Illustrated" magazine who would throw up their hands in dismay if any person asked them to consume game not cooked in a vintage wine sauce, there lies here in an essence of snobbery, of rank outright "have-ism." The have-nots watch vicariously, knowing full well they will never see Valhalla.

Mr. Amory points out that the shows that hunt with a camera are by far the choicer fare. I would suggest he ask a professional white hunter. The charging lion bearing down on the lens didn't just say heck with it and walk off. Rather, he was on the double-barreled receiving end of a pair of express solids to skid him to a stop just this side of inflicted violence.

There are ways to present a true picture of hunting and fishing, this as we all see it within our own area, to the viewing public. The way not to do it is to doll it up, make it glamorous, send it to the beauty parlor and then show it to America with full sound track.

Hunters normally get dirty and they are not always successful, but they do one simple thing that has not been displayed aside from a wooden "watch the birdie" approach to photojournalism applied to the boob-tube they have fun!

The youth of this country, the kids we expect to carry on the ideals we have been taught, are far better versed in watching Captain Wally Binghamton wave all manner of violent firearms about in a manner akin to the thinking attributed to a moronic monkey rather than a Naval officer on "McHale's Navy." They learn how to judo (karate?) chop down opponent in combat . . . . indeed they become well schooled in arson and killing. But they learn hunting and fishing, if they learn it at all, by doing it. This is too bad.

I wouldn't be the least bit surprised if a show to come had Eva Gabor on a tiger hunt, costumes by Dior and elephants courtesy of a Rajah anxious to see his name emblazoned over the TV screens of this nation. Quite frankly, Cleveland Amory was right. "American Sportsman" is a poor show. But is the only game in town?

Lions Sign Two Top Pitchers

HAMMOND (Special) — Two pitchers, including one hurler who tossed his team to its second straight state championship, are the first prep diamond stars to be signed by Southeastern Louisiana College baseball coach Jim Waldrop.

Knight posted a perfect 9 - 0 record in leading Franklinton to its second straight Class A title. The slender hill ace tossed the championship victory both seasons for the Demons.

A unanimous all - state choice this season, Knight performed an iron-man stunt on the final day of the season to bring the title back to Franklinton. Knight pitched 15 innings of baseball, beating Farmerville in the semifinals and Rapides in the title game.

Okker Takes Title

BRISTOL, England (AP) — Tom Okker, on special leave from The Netherlands Army, played brilliant tennis Saturday and defeated South Africa's Cliff Drysdale 6-2, 5-7, 8-6 for the West of England title.

This is too bad.

I wouldn't be the least bit surprised if a show to come had Eva Gabor on a tiger hunt, costumes by Dior and elephants courtesy of a Rajah anxious to see his name emblazoned over the TV screens of this nation. Quite frankly, Cleveland Amory was right . . . "American Sportsman" is a poor show. But is the only game in town!

Lions Sign Two Top Pitchers

HAMMOND (Special) — Two pitchers, including one hurler who tossed his team to its second straight state championship, are the first prep diamond stars to be signed by Southeastern Louisiana College baseball coach Jim Waldrop.

Knight posted a perfect 9-0 record in leading Franklinton to its second straight Class A title. The slender hill ace tossed the championship victory both seasons for the Demons.

A unanimous all-state choice this season, Knight performed an iron-man stunt on the final day of the season to bring the title back to Franklinton. Knight pitched 15 innings of baseball, beating Farmerville in the semifinals and Rapides in the title game.

Okker Takes Title

BRISTOL, England (AP) — Tom Okker, on special leave from The Netherlands Army, played brilliant tennis Saturday and defeated South Africa's Cliff Drysdale 6-2, 5-7, 8-6 for the West of England title.

Eban Denies Liberty Charge

NEW YORK (AP) — Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban said Saturday it was "preposterous and unbelievable" to think that Israel deliberately attacked the American ship Liberty during the recent Middle East war.

There were 34 Americans killed in the attack and 75 injured. The Israeli government apologized and offered to pay damages, but the United States rejected the explanation that the Israelis had mistaken the Liberty for an Egyptian ship.

Israel and the U.S. Navy have started inquiries.

Newsweek magazine printed a report that some Washington officials believe Israel ordered the Liberty sunk because it suspected the ship had intercepted messages revealing that Israel had started the war.

Eban flatly denied such reports on his arrival at Kennedy Airport to attend the U.N. General Assembly meeting on the Middle East.

He repeated that Israel believes it should negotiate peace directly with the Arabs, without "external pressures."

"If the General Assembly desires to have a debate," he said, "we shall, of course, join that debate in full vigor."

Doubts About Vietnam Top LBJ Issue In '68

By GEORGE GALLUP

PRINCETON —The chief reason for President Johnson's popularity decline during the last year and a half has been the Vietnam war — and this conflict presently appears to be his biggest hurdle to re-election.

In planning his political strategy during the coming months, the President must take account of three important facts that come to light in recent nationwide surveys:

1. Even after three years of active U.S. participation in the war and scores of speeches, as many persons say they do not have a clear idea of what the Vietnam war is all about as say they do.
2. Despite the fillip given to American hopes by General William Westmoreland's visit, still only one person in seven sees an all-out victory for the U.S.
3. Only one person in four thinks that a government strong enough to withstand communist pressures can be developed in South Vietnam after peace terms have been arranged and U.S. troops withdrawn.

Attitudes of the doubters have special significance to the 1968 presidential race since these voters hold President Johnson in far less esteem than do those who accept his explanations of our war aims and who are more optimistic about its outcome.

A total of 326 interviewers, working in as many locations across the nation asked the following question of 1511 persons selected according to scientific principles:

"Do you feel that you have a clear idea of what the Vietnam war is all about — that is, what we are fighting for?"

Nationally the public is evenly divided on the question, with women far more inclined to say they do not hav ea clear idea than are men, as seem in the following tables:

Clear Idea Of What War Is All About?

	Yes	No	No Opin.
National	48	48	4
Women	40	56	4
Men	58	39	3

The same question asked after the same lapse of time in World War II showed a much smaller proportion of the public saying they did not have a clear idea of what we were fighting for, as these figures reveal:

	Vietnam (After 3 yrs.)	WWII (After 3 yrs.)
Yes, have clear idea	48	78
No, do not	48	18
No opinion	4	4

Most See Compromise Settlement

To shed light on present expectations of the public in respect to the way the war in Vietnam will end, the following question, asked in earlier surveys, was included:

"How do you think the war in Vietnam will end — in an all-out victory for the U.S. and the South Vietnamese, in a compromise peace settlement, or in a defeat for the U.S. and the South Vietnamese?"

The findings show that the victories scored along the DMZ line and the escalation of the bombing of North Vietnam have made little difference in the public's views as to the final outcome of the war. In the course of the last year, no important changes in sentiment have been registered.

Progress of the pacification program and the conduct of the present Ky government have not increased the confidence of the American public in the ability of the South Vietnamese to build a governemnt strong enough to withstand the inroads of communists — when the war is settled and we have withdrawn our troops.

To measure trends on this point, this question was asked in the most recent survey:

"If the U.S. and North Vietnam come to peace terms and U.S. troops are withdrawn from Vietnam, do you think a strong enough government can be developed in South Vietnam to withstand communist pressures?"

The Danger To LBJ

The political dangers in the Vietnamese issue to President Johnson and to the Democratic party — assuming no important change in the war situation during the coming year — arise out of the likely loss of many democratic votes.

The main thrust of the majority party is to keep its voters in line. Democratic strategists need not bother too much about winning Republican votes or Independent votes since the number of persons who claim allegiance to the Democratic party are nearly as numerous as Republican and Independent followers combined.

Doubts about Vietnam are almost as widely held by members of the President's own party as those in opposition. This is the political fact of life with which President Johnson must be concerned in the months ahead.

The figures below, presenting the views of Democrats, show the dimension of his problems in this respect:

Prince Hall Grand Lodge Begins Meet

Statewide delegates of the M. W. Prince Hall Grand Lodge, of Free and Accepted Masons, opened their five-day annual convention here Saturday with an automobile parade by the organization's Shriners.

The group held a business session in the afternoon and had slated a social hour for Saturday night.

Following today's scheduled religious and business meetings the group has scheduled their annual ball in the ballroom of the Hotel Francis. Funds collected at the ball will go to the Masons' campaign for Camp Chicota, a recreation center sponsored by the Prince Hall Masons.

Tuesday, the Prince Hall Masons' will hold their 104th annual session, where more than 600 master Masons from throughout the state are expected to attend.

Coburn Rites Set For Today

Funeral services will be at 2 p.m. today at Kilpatrick's Funeral Home Chapel in West Monroe for Donovan S. Coburn, 18, of 111 Oaklawn St. in West Monroe.

The Rev. W. T. Hemphill will conduct the services for the youth who died Friday morning at the E. A. Conway Memorial Hospital in Monroe after a long illness. Burial will be in Hasley Cemetery in West Monroe.

Finance Firm Buys Company

The Home Finance Service Inc., of New Orleans has announced the purchase of the McGinn Finance Co. which had operated two offices in the Twin Cities for the past 20 years. One office is located at 202½ North Second, Monroe, and the other at 226 Trenton St., West Monroe.

Ray L. Gumpert, sales finance director for the Home Finance Service, announced the purchase. The firm operates 50 offices in Alabama, Mississippi, Georgia and Louisiana.

The two offices purchased in the Twin Cities will be remodeled and modernized, the announcement said.

Youth Killed In Burglary

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP)— Melvin Palmer, 15, of Baton Rouge died Saturday of a bullet wound in the neck after being shot by a policeman after a liquor store burglary.

Authorities said city policeman Kenneth Melancon, one of the officers investigating hte burglary, shot Palmer when the youth advanced on him after refusing his order to halt.

A police spokesman said a service station attendant reported seeing at least three youths break through a liquor store window and flee with bottles of liquor Saturday night.

Zoo To Close On Mondays For Economy

The municipal zoo at Bernstein Park will be closed each Monday, beginning this week, Director Kit Beecher announced Saturday.

The closing one day each week is in line with the directive from city officials that all departments economize as much as possible.

Beecher said a skeleton crew will be on duty to take care of the animals and birds, but the zoo proper will be closed to the public.

The rest of the park, including the picnic and recreation areas, will remain open to the public.

Jews Return War Prisoners

GENEVA (AP) — Israeli forces have returned nearly 11,600 Egyptian prisoners to Egypt so far, the International Red Cross Committee announced Saturday night.

Most of the Egyptian soldiers had been held in a large camp near the Suez Canal since the fighting in the Sinai Peninsula, according to the committee.

The all-Swiss committee said the transfer nearly completed the return of the captured Egyptian forces. It said Israeli patrols accompanied by Red Cross officials continue combing the Sinai Desert for Egyptian troops who will be brought back to the canal for repatriation.

NAMED DISTRIBUTOR

Southern Hardware Co., of Monroe, has been appointed as area distributor for industrial values of the W-K-M Valve division of ACF Industries.

Southern Hardware will handle the company's DynaSeal 310 and 350 ball valves, MagnaSeal plug valves, and ACF lubricated plug valves for application in chemical process industries, commercial buildings and utilities.

SEEDLINGS PLACED

Georgia - Pacific, one of the nation's largest forest products suppliers, recently announced that approximately 3,384,750 seedling pine trees were placed in the company's Arkansas division, headquartered in Crossett.

These seedlings were only a small protion of some 57,000,000 new trees that have been established on the company's prime tree growing lands during the 1966-67 planting season in nine states across the nation.

NEW OFFICE

Ford, Bacon and Davis, Inc., engineers, constructors and management consultants, with offices in Monroe has announced the opening of a new European office in Lausanne, Switzerland.

It will be the first European office for the firm which has offices in Brisbane, Australia and regional offices in Chicago, San Fransicso and Dallas.

AWARDED SEAL

Arnold Clark of Monroe has been awarded a 1967 Seal of Confidence of Allstate Insurance Companies. Clark, who joined Allstate in 1953, is a member of Allstate's Honor Ring organization.

ATTENDS MEETING

George W. Garner, local associate of the James L. McCann agency of The Paul Revere Life Insurance Co. is attending a three-day international sales conference Monday through Wednesday at the Royal Hotel in Toronto, Canada.

Garner will receive special recognition as a member of the company's national sales leaders' club. The conference will include sessions on current insurance developments, sales and service procedures and techniques.

He joined the Worcester, Mass. company in January and is a member of the Toppers' Club.

JOINS STAFF

James Herbert Gilbert and Joseph G. Mack Jr hav joined Joseph G. Mack Jr. have joined Georgia-Pacific Corporation's Crossett division professional forestry staff, according to Sulo V. Sihvonen, division timberlands manager. Both men will be assistant district foresters.

Gilbert, a graduate of Louisiana Tech at Ruston, with a bachelor of science degree, is a native of Louisiana. Formerly, he worked in the woodlands department of Continental Can Co.

Mack is a graduate of Arkansas A & M College with a bachelor of science degree in forestry. He joined Georgia-Pacific from the St. Joe Paper Company.

CPA MEETING

HOUSTON, Tex. (Special) — John L. Luffey and wife, Rosemary; H. Brinson Miles and wife, Kathleen; and Jack N. Thompson and wife, Maida, are attending the 52nd annual meeting of the Texas Society of CPA's and the 23rd annual Southern States Conference of CPA's. The two organizations are meeting in joint sessions at the Rice Hotel today through Wednesday.

Luffey, Miles and Thompson are Certified Public Accountants in Monroe.

McKeithen To Talk At Dedication

OAK GROVE (Special) Gov. John J. McKeithen will be the featured speaker Wednesday at 2 p.m. at the formal dedication ceremonies of the newly completed Wells Lamont Corporation glove factory here.

The plant, located on Wellmont Street, one block north of West Main street west of the Oak Grove High School, was constructed through Louisiana's industry inducement program with a $450,000 bond issued voted by the taxpayers of West Carroll Parish.

Of this amount, $400,000, plus interest, will be repaid by the corporation through lease rental payments and $50,000 will be retired by the parish property tax, currently set at one half mill.

Following the formal program refreshments will be served and tours of the plant will be conducted, according to Floyd H. Weems, president of the West Carroll Development Corporation, co - host with the company for the event.

The plant is expected to employ 200 persons and the payroll is expected to exceed $500,000 per year. Approximately 14,000 pairs of gloves will be produced per week when the plant is in full operation, according to Ivan W. Hammons, plant manager.

The public is invited to the dedication ceremonies, Hammon said.

Stepchild Of Health

Man Plagued With Miseries Of Mouth

By ALTON BLAKESLEE
AP Science Writer

During most of his recorded history, man has been plagued by mighty miseries with his mouth, teeth and gums.

England's Queen Elizabeth I had nearly constant toothaches during her reign from 1558 to 1603. George Washington was fitted with false teeth carved from wood and ivory.

Even until fairly recently, dentists mainly plied an art of plugging holes and pulling teeth. Visiting the dentist conjured fears of pain.

In health care, the long neglected stepchild, like Cinderella, was the human mouth and teeth.

But now Cinderella is leaving her scullery.

"Except for oral cancer, people don't die of dental disease. That's one reason why major research into oral health was dormant until 10 to 15 years ago," remarks Dr. Harvey Lyon, clinical director of a new research facility of the American Dental Association in Chicago. "Now it is all changing."

Dental researchers now have hopeful leads toward developing a vaccine to prevent tooth decay. New fluoride treatments apparently are reducing decay by 50 to 80 per cent. New defenses are rising against pyorrhea, the disease that destroys of loss of teeth.

Other research augurs tooth banks to supply healthy human teeth as living transplants for lost teeth.

Better, longer-lasting, more attractive filling materials are coming from laboratories.

Dentistry is becoming a new health science through vigorous research enlisting the skills of many types of scientists. Human volunteers and barnacles—the supertenacious clinging barnacles hold a secret for a superior cement to hold fillings in place—are all playing roles.

Prevention of oral disease is a prime goal of dental research. "We'd like to put ourselves out of business," says one dentist who recently turned to full time research.

The nation has only 97,000 practicing dentists, about one for every 2,000 Americans, and the ratio has been growing worse. Half of U.S. children under age 15 have never been to a dentist. More than 20 million American adults have no teeth left at all, a U.S. Public Health Service study indicates, and the rest have 2¼ billion decayed, missing, or filled teeth.

To the Great Lakes Naval Training Station north of Chicago each year come 100,000 seemingly healthy young naval recruits averaging 18 years of age — healthy until they open their mouths for inspection.

"Sixty to 70 per cent need urgent dental care. They average seven open cavities apiece, meaning 700,000 cavities to be filled each year at this post alone. And 20 per cent have serious periodontal gum disease," says Capt. Gordon H. Rovelstad, director of the Dental Research Institute at Great Lakes.

The recruits are lucky. They receive good reparative and preventive care, for the armed forces cannot afford to have men become dentally crippled on small ships or during critical duties.

If corrective care is still out of everyone's reach, there is an air of optimism now in major research centers that the worst mouth ailments can be prevented.

Tooth decay — caries — affecting 98 per cent of Americans, is one. Gum disease, afflicting 67 million Americans, is another.

A major advance has come through adding tiny but precise amounts of sodium fluoride to drinking water. This is credited with reducing decay among children by 50 to 60 per cent.

Fathers Day Reported As Commercial

NEW YORK (AP) — It all began in 1910 when a young Spokane, Wash., woman, sought recognition for her widowed father who had raised six children. She orginated Fathers Day as an expression of love, devotion and gratitude.

Today the idea credited to Mrs. John Bruce Dodd has grown into a billion-dollar business.

"We're living in a commercial situation," says a spokesman for the Father's Day Council Inc., "and no matter what we do it is expressed in business."

The council says Fathers Day, which is observed today, is the biggest single promotion for men's merchandise. Last year more than $12 million was spent on publicity, not including paid advertising which "broke all previous records."

The council, a nonprofit promotional organization, and the National Retail Merchant's Association expect sales for Fathers Day gifts to reach well over a billion dollars this year. Gifts will range from the usual ties, socks and shirts to air conditioners, backyard barbecue equipment and even automobiles.

"There's money around — everybody's working and nobody's worried," said William Burston, merchandising manager of the association.

To promote the occasion, the Fathers Day Council set down a strict schedule beginning with distribution of displays and advertising mats to merchants April 1.

May 25, was "national curtain-raising day" for publicity, and June 5 was the suggested date for retailers to start advertising and assembling window displays.

So what will be bestowed on Dad this morning?

One department store says it could be a banana-color, double-breasted blazer, or a tie in wild prints, florals, paisleys, stripes or checks.

LOUISIANA — Clear to partly cloudy through Monday with widely scattered mainly daytime thundershowers extreme Southern portion with a few afternoon thundershowers elsewhere. High today 86 to 94.

ARKANSAS — Clear to partly cloudy and continued warm through Monday. Widely scattered thundershowers mainly in the North half through today. Lows tonight in the 60's and low 70's. High today in the 90's.

NORTH HALF MISSISSIPPI — Clear to partly cloudy and continued warm through Monday. Highs today in the 90's with lows tonight in the 60's and low 70's.

MID-SOUTH HIGHLIGHTS — Early morning temperatures dipped down to the low 60's in part of Northeast and Northern Arkansas Saturday with readings generally from the mid 60's to the low 70's elsewhere.

Saturday afternoon temperatures were generally in the low 90's with the exception of Extreme West and Norhwest Arkansas where readings were in the low mid 80's. Northwest Arkansas remained cooler than the remainder of the Mid-South due to a heavier cloud cover coupled with the fact that a cold front has moved quite near the area.

Scattered thundershowers were again indicated by U. S. Weather Bureau radar but no significant precipitation was reported at any of the regular reporting stations.

Winds were generally light to variable Saturday.

U. S. Ships Collide With No Injuries

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — The aircraft carrier Kitty Hawk, returning from duty off Vietnam, collided Friday night with the fleet oiler USS Platte during refueling operations 1,000 miles west of San Francisco, the Navy reported Saturday.

The information office of the Naval Air Force Pacific Fleet said there were no personnel casualties aboard either ship.

Refueling equipment of the Platte was damaged and another oiler was requested to finish the refueling job.

The collision occurred at 11 p.m. Friday.

The Platte was refueling the Kitty Hawk and the destroyer Shelton when the accident occurred. The Navy said there was no reported damage to the Shelton.

The Kitty Hawk was returning from seven months deployment in the Tonkin Gulf.

Gas Ignites, Burns Youth In W. Monroe

A 14 - year - old West Monroe youth received first, second and third degree burns about his chest and arms Saturday when his gasoline - drenched clothes were accidently ignited.

Rushed to St. Francis Hospital by Gentry's Ambulance was Edward W. Donaldson, 304 N. 9th, West Monroe.

Donaldson's father, James E. Donaldson also received minor burns on his hands when he tried to remove his son's clothes as they burned.

According to the elder Donaldson, the boy had been filling an auto's gas tank when it overflowed, "slushing back" on the boy's clothing.

The youth was on his way to the rest room to change his clothing when a fellow worked flicked a cigarette lighter near the boy causing the clothes to ignite, his father said.

Plane Crash Fatal To 34 In Vietnam

SAIGON (AP) — A U.S. Air Force four-engine C130 transport loaded with passengers crashed and burned at An Khe Airport Saturday night after the crew attempted to abort the take-off, apparently because of a mechanical failure.

A spokesman at the Military Graves Registration Department in An Khe said 34 persons were killed, including both Americans and South Vietnamese. He said some of the dead were military personnel. Presumably, some also were civilians. The plane had a seven-man crew.

There were 22 survivors, according to Air Force officers in An Khe.

Turboprop C130s carry both troops and cargo, but this was a regularly scheduled passenger flight. The passenger flights carry both military personnel and civilians of various nationalities, including South Vietnamese military personnel and their dependents.

The crew of the C130, apparently because of a last-minute mechanical failure, tried to abort the take-off by applying the brakes and reversing the engines.

But the aircraft had gone too far down the 3,700-foot runway.

Witnesses said it went about 200 feet past the end of the runway, skidded into a gulley and burned.

"It never became airborne," said one officer. "It may have momentarily, but not very much. He must have had mechanical trouble."

The C130 had left Saigon's Tan Son Nhut Airport headed for stops north. An Khe was the third stop, and its next stop was Pleiku.

Fast Return To Oil Normalcy Anticipated

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil began to flow again in the Middle East this past week, and a fast return to normalcy in the troubled area was hoped for by U.S. business and financial leaders.

Saudi Arabia, largest oil source in the Arab world, was the first to return to full production.

Tankers again began steaming to various world ports with cargoes of oil. They could not go to the United States or Britain, however, because of an embargo imposed by most of the Arab nations.

But the embargo was not expected to affect the United States, which produces most of its own oil. It could be troublesome, though, for Western Europe which depends on Middle Eastern and North African oil for 80 per cent of its imports. Most of the Western countries, however, are reported to have reserve supplies for about two months or more.

Reopening of the Suez Canal was a question mark. Egypt claims the canal was closed by vessels sunk during the Arab-Israeli war and says it has no idea how long it will take to reopen the vital waterway.

The closing has dislocated ocean shipping and shipping rates are being forced upward. Some shippers are reported to have chartered ocean tankers at 50 per cent increased rates.

In other news of the week, U.S. automobile production was estimated at 174,396 units, up slightly from the 173,410 cars built in the previous week but down 6 per cent from the 186,291 in the year-ago week.

The auto industry said its early June sales ran 4 per cent ahead of the year earlier, totaling 247,989 cars. During the June 1-10 period, Ford Motor Co. said its retail deliveries were 20.7 per cent over 1966 and Chrysler Corp. had a 1.5 per cent gain. General Motors Corp., however, said its sales were down 2.7 per cent and American Motors Corp. reported a 5.3 per cent drop.

Heading into the final weeks of production of 1967 models, the industry has set a target of 929,000 more cars before the model year ends. Most of these cars are to be built during the last three weeks of July, with the last '67 scheduled to come off the Ford lines early in August.

U. S. Ships Collide With No Injuries

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — The aircraft carrier Kitty Hawk, returning from duty off Vietnam, collided Friday night with the fleet oiler USS Platte during refueling operations 1,000 miles west of San Francisco, the Navy reported Saturday.

The information office of the Naval Air Force Pacific Fleet said there were no personnel casualties aboard either ship.

Refueling equipment of the Platte was damaged and another oiler was requested to finish the refueling job.

The collision occurred at 11 p.m. Friday.

The Platte was refueling the Kitty Hawk and the destroyer Shelton when the accident occurred. The Navy said there was no reported damage to the Shelton.

The Kitty Hawk was returning from seven months deployment in the Tonkin Gulf.

Light to locally moderate dew Saturday night drying off by 9:30 a.m. today. Probability of rain 20 per cent in the afternoons. Rain less than one quarter inch. Winds easterly 5 to 15 mph.

LOUISIANA — Clear to partly cloudy through Monday with widely scattered mainly daytime thundershowers extreme Southern portion with a few afternoon thundershowers elsewhere. High today 86 to 94.

ARKANSAS — Clear to partly cloudy and continued warm through Monday. Widely scattered thundershowers mainly in the North half through today. Lows tonight in the 60's and low 70's. High today in the 90's.

NORTH HALF MISSISSIPPI — Clear to partly cloudy and continued warm through Monday. Highs today in the 90's with lows tonight in the 60's and low 70's.

MID-SOUTH HIGHLIGHTS — Early morning temperatures dipped down to the low 60's in part of Northeast and Northern Arkansas Saturday with readings generally from the mid 60's to the low 70's elsewhere.

Saturday afternoon temperatures were generally in the low 90's with the exception of Extreme West and Northwest Arkansas where readings were in the low mid 80's. Northwest Arkansas remained cooler than the remainder of the Mid-South due to a heavier cloud cover coupled with the fact that a cold front has moved quite near the area.

Scattered thundershowers were again indicated by U. S. Weather Bureau radar but no significant precipitation was reported at any of the regular reporting stations.

Winds were generally light to variable Saturday.

Gas Ignites, Burns Youth In W. Monroe

A 14 - year - old West Monroe youth received first, second and third degree burns about his chest and arms Saturday when his gasoline - drenched clothes were accidently ignited.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS Average of 60 stocks advanced for the second straight week, closing Friday at 327.8 from 323.3 a week earlier. The weekly volume was the heaviest in about three months. The Dow Jones Average of 30 industrials closed at 885.00, up from 874.89 a week ago. (AP Wirephoto Chart)

Renewed Confidence Buoys Stock Market

NEW YORK (AP) A renewal of confidence buoyed the stock market last week and it posted its second straight weekly gain in heavy trading.

Volume climbed to 54,757,250 shares on the New York Stock Exchange from 48,544,801 the week before. This was the greatest volume since a record weekly total of 56.7 million shares in the week ended March 11.

Stocks were bought as the investment community displayed a more tranquil and assured attitude.

This followed the emotional buying spree of the previous week on news of the Israeli victory and the fact that the United States had not been involved in a direct confrontation with Russia over the Middle East.

The consequence of the Arab-Israeli war seemed even less hazardous this week, dspite the large number of problems to be worked out.

Meanwhile, the economic news background was brighter. At long last, the 7 per cent investment tax credit was restored, although this had been anticipated. This had a bullish effect on railroad equipment and other machinery stocks.

In addition, stock market analysts looked with satisfaction at the gains in May for housing starts and personal income. The fact that a railroad strike had been avoided for the time being also was bullish.

The Dow Jones industrial average this week rose 10.11 to 885.00.

This was a big rebound from the closing low of 847.77 on June 5 when it was knocked down by war panic selling. Some analysts thought the Dow was now heading for a test of the interim high of 909.63 made on May 8.

They saw the market in a trading range represented roughly by those two figures. If the average were to smash through the level of the May 8 high, of course, it would then have a green light for a big additional rise.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks this week rose 4.5 to 327.8, making its best weekly rise since the week ended March 18 when it posted a gain equal to this week's.

Some old favorites came back into the list of stock market leaders this were Standard Kollsman rose 6⅛, Pittston Co. 4⅞ and Avco 5¾.

Gulf & Western gained 4 points, Hunt Foods 2 and an American Sulphur 2⅜.

Of 1,592 issues traded this week, 918 rose and 543 fell.

The Middle East complexities appeared to have no appreciable effect on the market. And for the first time about a month, the Federal Reserve didn't enter the long-term market.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS Average of 60 stocks advanced for the second straight week, closing Friday at 327.8 from 323.3 a week earlier. The weekly volume was the heaviest in about three months. The Dow Jones Average of 30 industrials closed at 885.00, up from 874.89 a week ago. (AP Wirephoto Chart)

Renewed Confidence Buoys Stock Market

NEW YORK (AP—A renewal of confidence buoyed the stock market last week and it posted its second straight weekly gain in heavy trading.

Volume climbed to 54,757,250 shares on the New York Stock Exchange from 48,544,801 the week before. This was the greatest volume since a record weekly total of 56.7 million shares in the week ended March 11.

Stocks were bought as the investment community displayed a more tranquil and assured attitude.

This followed the emotional buying spree of the previous week on news of the Israeli victory and the fact that the United States had not been involved in a direct confrontation with Russia over the Middle East.

The consequence of the Arab-Israeli war seemed even less hazardous this week, dspite the large number of problems to be worked out.

Meanwhile, the economic news background was brighter. At long last, the 7 per cent investment tax credit was restored, although this had been anticipated. This had a bullish effect on railroad equipment and other machinery stocks.

In addition, stock market analysts looked with satisfaction at the gains in May for housing starts and personal income. The fact that a railroad strike had been avoided for the time being also was bullish.

The Dow Jones industrial average this week rose 10.11 to 885.00.

This was a big rebound from the closing low of 847.77 on June 5 when it was knocked down by war panic selling. Some analysts thought the Dow was now heading for a test of the interim high of 909.63 made on May 8.

They saw the market in a trading range represented roughly by those two figures. If the average were to smash through the level of the May 8 high, of course, it would then have a green light for a big additional rise.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks this week rose 4.5 to 327.8, making its best weekly rise since the week ended March 18 when it posted a gain equal to this week's.

Some old favorites came back into the list of stock market leaders this were. Standard Kollsman rose 6¼, Pittston Co. 4⅞ and Avco 5¾.

Gulf & Western gained 4 points, Hunt Foods 2 and an American Sulphur 2⅜.

Of 1,592 issues traded this week, 918 rose and 543 fell.

The Middle East complexities appeared to have no appreciable effect on the market. And for the first time about a month, the Federal Reserve didn't enter the long-term market.

Oil, Gas States Bring In Millions

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — Oil and gas states are collecting more than $365 million a year in royalties and other income from state-owned lands.

The revenue is in addition to the many millions of dollars being collected in oil and gas production taxes.

A survey by the Interstate Oil Compact Commission indicated 25,991,663 acres of state-owned land are under lease in 24 states. The acreage includes 8,815 producing leases that account for about 410 million barrels of crude oil and 1.8 traillion cubic feet of gas each year.

Most of the states were reported for the calendar year 1965 but some reported for the fiscal year ending last June 30.

The $365 million in income from such leases includes $151 million in bonuses from lease sales, $16 million in lease rentals, and $191 million in oil and gas royalties.

Only about 27 per cent of the state-owned lands under lease are in Texas and Louisiana but the two states dominate the production and income figures.

The two states account for 78 per cent of the oil produced from such lands and 82 per cent of the natural gas production. In turn they receive about 71 per cent of the royalty and lease payments.

Oil, Gas States Bring In Millions

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — Oil and gas states are collecting more than $365 million a year in royalties and other income from state-owned lands.

The revenue is in addition to the many millions of dollars being collected in oil and gas production taxes.

A survey by the Interstate Oil Compact Commission indicated 25,991,663 acres of state-owned land are under lease in 24 states. The acreage includes 8,815 producing leases that account for about 410 million barrels of crude oil and 1.8 traillion cubic feet of gas each year.

Most of the states were reported for the calendar year 1965 but some reported for the fiscal year ending last June 30.

The $365 million in income from such leases includes $151 million in bonuses from lease sales, $16 million in lease rentals, and $191 million in oil and gas royalties.

Only about 27 per cent of the state-owned lands under lease are in Texas and Louisiana but the two states dominate the production and income figures.

The two states account for 78 per cent of the oil produced from such lands and 82 per cent of the natural gas production. In turn, they receive about 74 per cent of the royalty and lease payments.

Mayor Daley Of Chicago Is A 'Political Phenomenon'

EDITOR'S NOTE — Every four years like clock work, it seems, Chicago's Democratic Mayor Richard J. Daley wins another four-year term, supported even by diehard Republicans. One historian has called him the finest mayor Chicago has ever had. Here is a portrait of a political phenomenon.

By JOHN K. IGLEHART

CHICAGO (AP) — By all the new standards of modern politics Mayor Richard J. Daley of Chicago shouldn't even be considered.

At [illegible], portly and jowly, he is not young, rich or handsome. He's close-mouthed and practically inaccessible to the press. He is a big city boss when bossism is a political liability.

And most important in an age where television is supposed to make or break a political candidate, Daley comes across the little screen like a heavy in a cops-and-robbers series.

VOTE GETTER

Yet to the Democratic party he is among the nation's top vote-getters, who won an unprecedented fourth four-year term April 4 in a landslide victory of 500,000 votes over Republican John L. Waner.

Also in a political time when exposure is so important Daley's name isn't even in the card catalogue at the Public Library — although he is the leader of a political machine, as well as mayor — that has held power in Chicago under the Democratic party banner for 36 years.

There are other paradoxes.

Daley controls 32,000 patronage jobs and in the 50-member City Council dominated by 39 organization Democrats his wish is a command. But he leads a city which has in theory a weak mayor system of government.

Political scientists call Chicago the nation's most studied city, but the first book on Daley is still to be written.

What does this 5-foot-8, 200-pound Irishman have?

He has 73 per cent of the voting electorate on his side; he has a fanatic interest in the progress of Chicago, and he has the ear of the White House.

In the April mayoralty election, it was suggested that Daley had finally met his match, not in Waner, but in a touchy racial problem that erupted on the streets of Chicago last summer. Daley steers a conservative course toward the solution of social problems and resents pressure from militant civil rights groups. But Republicans aided his cause.

"What kind of alternative did the GOP give the Negroes?" asked Republican Alderman Jack Sperling, a Polish politician who based his campaign on white supremacy without saying so."

Warner, whose all-white ward takes a fervent anti-Negro stance undertook a job nobody else wanted. And he did it without much Republican party financing and with even less backing from the Republican business community which is firmly behind Daley.

Probably no other Republican could have won either because the Mayor has not only conquered the normally Republican business community but has melted into one vast political pot most of the city's [illegible] Negroes — in a population of nearly 3.5 million — and their antithesis — the white blue-collar worker who generally resents the Negro.

PLOTS COURSE

Daley plotted the course he hoped to take as mayor — "to be mayor of all the people" — before his election to the $35,000-a-year job. His Republican opponent in 1955 Robert E. Merriam suggested that a Daley victory would mean the return of vice, crime and gangster control of Chicago.

Soon after the charge was made Daley tore up his text prepared for a civic group gathering and answered it in an emotion-charged speech unusual for a man of such serious demeanor.

"When I walk down the street where I live, I see every street in the city," he declared. "When I walk into my church, I see every church and every temple in the city. When I look at my children, I see every child in the city of Chicago.

"And I promise [illegible] that if elected I shall [illegible] of all the people [illegible] the turn [illegible] Merriam [illegible] and has been winning ever since.

Since Daley's first term he has actively sought support from all elements of the city as part of his consensus brand of politics. He stacks civic committees with corporation executives who cast their votes for only one Democrat — Daley — but otherwise call the Gop home.

Daley speaks their language. He is a brick and mortar man. Anyone can gaze at Chicago's skyline and see an architectural renaissance. Some 600 skyscrapers have shot up since his first term. For 25 years before that few structures had gone up in the Loop, Chicago's center.

But Chicago's Negroes usually don't fit into these groups. And this is where the rub comes in although he received about 80 per cent of their votes in his overwhelming election victory this year.

It is easier to form a civic committee and push for an improvement that will benefit the entire citizenry than it is to create conditions that will provide a Negro child of Chicago's inner city with the means to break a seemingly endless chain of poverty.

KING CRITICAL

Many civil rights advocates such as Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. who makes Chicago his battleground for improving the lot of minority groups, are critical of what Daley has done for Negroes.

But says Edwin Berry, a Negro and director of the Chicago Urban League: [illegible] Chicago doesn't provide the [illegible] the housing the [illegible] Negroes so desperately need. Daley's beloved city will be in the process of committing suicide. I don't think the mayor intends for his city to commit suicide."

Daley sheds little light on how he feels about the problem of meshing the cry for improvements Negroes demand with the strong anti-Negro stance taken by many white persons in Chicago. Does he consider his election victory a mandate for anything?

"To me it's a mandate that means most of Chicago's residents like the way I've run the city for the past 12 years," Daley said. "I'm for civil rights, but with law and order, not disorder. It's a different age and we have to live with it."

Daley is wary of reporters to whom he is virtually inaccessible much of the time. But he was endorsed for re-election by all of Chicago's daily newspapers.

"One of his outstanding characteristics is his control of information," said Thomas Anton, an urban affairs specialist at the University of Illinois Chicago campus.

"Daley doesn't rush into print until he understands all the elements of a controversy," said the Rev. Joseph Small, chairman of Loyola University's political science department.

"The man doesn't speak unnecessarily," Father Small said.

"He doesn't read the comics on radio, or ride on fire trucks like La Guardia (former Mayor Fiorello La Guardia of New York). He plays the role of the decision-maker between the various tides of public opinion. He sees himself as a finder of common ground."

Frequently called "last of the big city bosses," Daley prefers to be known as the "first of the big city leaders."

Although he [illegible] the organization operates, one of the 39 Democratic city aldermen — there are seven Republicans and four independents — with long years in the party offers a glimpse of the system.

Alderman Vito Marzullo, 69, has been a Democratic committeeman for 11 years from a ward that votes overwhelmingly for his party. Marzullo says he controls 160 patronage jobs. This does not include lower-paying positions.

"I got an assistant state's attorney and I got an assistant attorney general," Marzullo says. "I got an electrical inspector at $10,500 a year and surveyors and a $7,900-a-year county highway inspector."

"I got an administrative assistant to the zoning board and some bailiffs," he adds.

Marzullo sponsors at least 200 other persons in public jobs — clerks, typists, laundry workers and cleaning women.

LOST JOBS

Last November when Republican Richard B. Ogilvie was elected Cook County Board president, Marzullo lost 50 patronage jobs. But he doesn't resent this. It's part of the system and he believes in it.

"I don't like civil service," Marzullo said. "If a man is civil service, how do you know he's for you or against you?"

"If he's got a chip on his shoulder, he can obstruct your administration," he added. "But with patronage you can tell him one day 'you're through' and he's through."

Marzullo agrees the system is highly political, but he says, "They play politics all over the world everywhere — countries, churches, businesses, cemeteries."

Daley is a Chicago native. [illegible] modest neighborhood on the South Side, he has known [illegible]. After high school, he took a job in the stockyards and struggled through 11 years of De Paul University's night school for his undergraduate and law degree. He never practiced law.

"I was very fortunate," says Daley. "I had fine parents, a good family life, the opportunity for an education, good friends and the advantage of being born and raised in Chicago."

Daley still lives in the same South Side neighborhood, a keen earshot from the International Amphitheatre and a long ball from Comiskey Park, home of the Chicago White Sox baseball club. The mayor is an avid fan although he takes in a baseball game only occasionally, one of his few recreations.

He is the father of seven children — four boys and three girls. The youngest is attending college. His wife of 31 years, the former Eleanor Guilfoyle, stays close to the Lowe Street home they built 27 years ago. It's a working class neighborhood, and the only thing that distinguished their single-story brick home from any other is a pair of "no parking" signs out front.

"I've lived in this neighborhood all my life," he said. "Why should I move out just because I'm mayor?"

After winning his second term in 1959, Daley said: "Power calls for humility. Power sometimes can be dangerous, and with power comes the need for leadership and responsibility to carry out the wishes of the people."

Philip M. Hauser, director of the University of Chicago's Population Research and Training Center, says that to a large extent Daley's power is his trump card.

"Daley doesn't have to do much clearing when he makes a decision, except with himself," Hauser said. "He's a remarkable combination of authoritarian efficiency with the interest of the public at heart. He's a beneficient dictator. The next guy could be a nightmare with the same power."

Another source of Daley's power is his close relationship with President Johnson, and before him President John F. Kennedy, a fellow Irishman. Kennedy carried Illinois by 9,000 votes in 1960, and Daley is generally credited with turning out enough Democratic votes in Chicago to offset the downstate Republican trend.

It's not a one-way street, though. Daley plucks the federal plum regularly. The Department of Health, Education and Welfare froze some $30 million in federal aid to Chicago in the fall of 1965 until an investigation could be made of charges that the school system was deliberately segregated by race. The funds were released in a matter of hours after Daley telephoned Washington.

One of Johnson's chief rivals in the Democratic party, Sen. Robert F. Kennedy of New York, knows like his brother before him what Daley could mean to presidential aspirations.

RECENT HEARING

At a recent Senate subcommittee hearing on the federal antipoverty program, Kennedy told the mayor, "Personally, as I have said before, I believe that you are the outstanding figure in urban centers today."

If Daley seems invulnerable, there are cracks in his Democratic machine. A Republican won the Cook County Board presidency last November, at the same time Charles Percy defeated Democratic Sen. Paul Douglas with the help of a sizeable Chicago vote.

"The organization is a strong ward and precinct organization that feeds on some patronage and hopelessly incompetent opponents," he said. "Without Daley it would be in trouble."

EDITOR'S NOTE — Every four years like clock work, it seems, Chicago's Democratic Mayor Richard J. Daley wins another four-year term, supported even by diehard Republicans. One historian has called him the finest mayor Chicago has ever had. Here is a portrait of a political phenomenon.

By JOHN K. IGLEHART

CHICAGO (AP) — By all the new standards of modern politics Mayor Richard J. Daley of Chicago shouldn't even be. Consider:

At 65, portly and jowly, he is not young, rich or handsome. He's closemouthed and practically inaccessible to the press. He is a big city boss when bossism is a political liability.

And most important in an age where television is supposed to make or break a political candidate, Daley comes across the little screen like a heavy in a cops-and-robbers series.

VOTE GETTER

Yet to the Democratic party he is among the nation's top vote-getters, who won an unprecedented fourth four-year term April 4 in a landslide victory of 500,000 votes over Republican John L. Waner.

Also in a political time when exposure is so important Daley's name isn't even in the card catalogue at the Public Library — although he is the leader of a political machine, as well as mayor — that has held power in Chicago under the Democratic party banner for 36 years.

There are other paradoxes:

Daley controls 32,000 patronage jobs and in the 50-member City Council, dominated by 39 organization Democrats, his wish is a command. But he leads a city which has, in theory, a weak mayor system of government.

Political scientists call Chicago the nation's most studied city, but the first book on Daley is still to be written.

Probably no other Republican could have won either because the Mayor has not only conquered the normally Republican business community but has melted into one vast political pot most of the city's 973,000 Negroes — in a population of nearly 3.5 million — and their antithesis — the white blue-collar worker who generally resents the Negro.

PLOTS COURSE

Daley plotted the course he hoped to take as mayor — "to be mayor of all the people" — before his election to the $35,000-a-year job. His Republican opponent in 1955 Robert E. Merriam suggested that a Daley victory would mean the return of vice, crime and gangster control of Chicago.

"And I promise you here and now that if elected, I shall be mayor of all the people," said Daley, who thereupon scored a decisive victory over Merriam and has been winning ever since.

Since Daley's first term he has actively sought support from all elements of the city as part of his consensus brand of politics. He stacks civic committees with corporation executives who cast their votes for only one Democrat — Daley — but otherwise call the Gop home.

Oil Field Interests Reviving

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Mississippi oil speculators are showing revived interest in the Conerly field of Pike County after completion of a well this week flowing 317 barrels per day.

This is the first producer to be completed since the field was discovered in 1962. After the field was discovered a number of dry holes were drilled in the area and activity ceased.

Smith County is also getting a lot of attention as Shell is testing a second zone in the Tallahala Creek field after recording an indicated flow rate of 640 barrels per day from the Smackover lime.

There are strong indications this venture will turn into a third producer for the recently found deep field. Tests were at 15,940 with the Cotton Valley oil section at about 15,500 feet.

A second drilling operation in the field is claiming attention with the venture reported to have encountered high gas shows while drilling. The well is also a Shell operation.

About a mile east of the producing limit of the Tallahala Creek field southwest gas and Placid Oil are running electrical log below 16,600 feet in their wildcat with the venture reported low on structure.

Also in Smith County, Michel Halbouty is drilling below 2,100 in his wildcat which is a 15,000 Smackover lime test.

Shell and Love continue to try and free portions of stuck drill pipe in their potential Smackover lime discovery at Pelhatchie in Rankin County. The closely watched well is reported to have encountered about 85 feet of oil and gas shows at 17,200 feet.

In Jasper County, R. Merrill Harris and associates are below 4,300 feet in their Jasper County wildcat northeast of the Bay Springs oil field. Contract depth is 16,000 feet.

In the recently found Nancy field of Clarke County, Placid Oil is below 12,000 feet which is the fourth test for the new field. The field was found in February of this year and has recorded two producers and one dry hole.

Union producing is below 5,100 in its Hinds County wildcat in the Brownsville area. Contract depth is 13,000 feet.

Meredith Says He'll Finish Hike

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — James Meredith, who sparked a marathon civil rights march a year ago, vowed Saturday to return to complete his unfinished hike across half of Mississippi.

Meredith said he wanted to take up from the point where he was shot from ambush near Hernando and walk to Jackson, over 200 miles away. The march is to start next Saturday.

"The primary purpose of the walk is to challenge, expose and extinguish that all pervasive fear that permeates the existence of the Negro," Meredith said in a statement announcing his new effort.

Meredith said he also wanted to encourage preparation "for political participation by Negroes in the United States, especially in the two states where participation is lowest — New York and Mississippi.

The Negro must learn to plan his financial activities and manage his own business affairs," Meredith said "both as regards his personal and family matters as well as public matters."

Meredith, wearing a pith helmet and carrying a walking stick, was shot from ambush near Hernando June 6, 1966 on his march to the state capital.

Aubrey J. Norvell, 40, of Memphis, pleaded guilty in November to a charge of assault and battery with intent to kill and is now serving two years in the state penitentiary for the shotgun shooting.

After several weeks the marchers reached Jackson and held a rally with over 16,000 people on the capitol grounds.

Meredith, who lowered racial barriers at the University of Mississippi in 1962, said he had invited "all able-bodied men over 16 who care to join me on this walk. Everyone who joins the walk will have to be self-sufficing. Veterans of the Vietnam War and the Korean War should be particularly conditioned for this walk."

He asked that no women or children participate because "where there is a chance for danger, the man should occupy the position. It has been proven that a walk such as this can be dangerous, even in the United States."

UNOFFICIAL VISIT

HELSINKI (UPI)—The United States guided missile destroyer Farragut will pay an unofficial visit to Finland from June 30 through July 5, it was announced Friday.

Youth Court Changes Ordered By High Court

WSHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, in the term just ended, ordered a revolutionary overhaul in the nation's juvenile court system, broadened press freedom and made citizenship an almost indestructible right.

The states were barred from actively encouraging housing discrimination and were told they have no right to prohibit Negro-white marriages.

And yet, in this 14th year of the "Warren Court," there seemed to be little zeal to reach out toward new frontiers. Whether the nation was catching up with the court or the court with the nation the result appeared the same: "The justices kept largely to the middle of the road.

They took a dim view of the shift in the civil rights fight from the courts to the street, refused to become embroiled in the national debate over the Vietnam war and passed up a chance to clarify the rights of welfare recipients.

While police "bugging" was virtually outlawed, wider police searches in the home and use of informers and undercover agents were sanctioned.

In some respects the noticeable shift toward moderation and caution could be attributed to Justice Hugo L. Black, who in his 30th year on the bench broke away in several instances from the liberal wing headed by Chief Justice Earl Warren.

In November, for the first time, and again at last Monday's closing session, the court cracked down on Negro civil rights demonstrators. In both instances Black converted the conservative minority to a 5-4 majority.

MAY SALESMAN OF THE MONTH

KENNETH INABNETT

FOR THE 2ND MONTH IN A ROW, KEN INABNETT has been recognized as Salesman of the Month for Ryan Chevrolet. Inabnett, a veteran of over 25 years in Chevrolet sales and service, was the outstanding salesman in April as well as May. Although Ken is located at the Ryan Chevrolet OK Corral, he gives good deals on brand new '67 Chevrolet cars and trucks as well as clean OK used cars and trucks. "I cordially invite anyone who is interested in a new car or truck, or a quality used car, to get in touch with me at Ryan Chevrolet or by calling 387-2252," says Ken Inabnett. "Right now, I can give especially good deals during our Ryan Chevrolet Gigantic Pacesetter Sale," Inabnett continued. Ryan Chevrolet is located at 1101 Oliver Road at Roselawn.

Oil Field Interests Reviving

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Mississippi oil speculators are showing revived interest in the Conerly field of Pike County after completion of a well this week flowing 317 barrels per day.

This is the first producer to be completed since the field was discovered in 1962. After the field was discovered a number of dry holes were drilled in the area and activity ceased.

Smith County is also getting a lot of attention as Shell is testing a second zone in the Tallahala Creek field after recording an indicated flow rate of 640 barrels per day from the Smackover lime.

There are strong indications this venture will turn into a third producer for the recently found deep field. Tests were at 15,940 with the Cotton Valley oil section at about 15,500 feet.

A second drilling operation in the field is claiming attention with the venture reported to have encountered high gas shows while drilling. The well is also a Shell operation.

About a mile east of the producing limit of the Tallahala Creek field southwest gas and Placid Oil are running electrical log below 16,600 feet in their wildcat with the venture reported low on structure.

Also in Smith County, Michel Halbouty is drilling below 2,100 in his wildcat which is a 15,000 Smackover lime test.

Shell and Love continue to try and free portions of stuck drill pipe in their potential Smackover lime discovery at Pelhatchie in Rankin County. The closely watched well is reported to have encountered about 85 feet of oil and gas shows at 17,200 feet.

In Jasper County, R. Merrill Harris and associates are below 4,300 feet in their Jasper County wildcat northeast of the Bay Springs oil field. Contract depth is 16,000 feet.

In the recently found Nancy field of Clarke County, Placid Oil is below 12,000 feet which is the fourth test for the new field. The field was found in February of this year and has recorded two producers and one dry hole.

Union producing is below 5,100 in its Hinds County wildcat in the Brownsville area. Contract depth is 13,000 feet.

Meredith Says He'll Finish Hike

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — James Meredith, who sparked a marathon civil rights march a year ago, vowed Saturday to return to complete his unfinished hike across half of Mississippi.

Meredith said he wanted to take up from the point where he was shot from ambush near Hernando and walk to Jackson, over 200 miles away. The march is to start next Saturday.

"The primary purpose of the walk is to challenge, expose and extinguish that all pervasive fear that permeates the existence of the Negro," Meredith said in a statement announcing his new effort.

Meredith said he also wanted to encourage preparation "for political participation by Negroes in the United States, especially in the two states where participation is lowest — New York and Mississippi.

The Negro must learn to plan his financial activities and manage his own business affairs," Meredith said "both as regards his personal and family matters as well as public matters."

Meredith, wearing a pith helmet and carrying a walking stick, was shot from ambush near Hernando June 6, 1966 on his march to the state capital.

Aubrey J. Norvell, 40, of Memphis, pleaded guilty in November to a charge of assault and battery with intent to kill and is now serving two years in the state penitentiary for the shotgun shooting.

After several weeks the marchers reached Jackson and held a rally with over 16,000 people on the capitol grounds.

Meredith, who lowered racial barriers at the University of Mississippi in 1962, said he had invited "all able-bodied men over 16 who care to join me on this walk. Everyone who joins the walk will have to be self-sufficing. Veterans of the Vietnam War and the Korean War should be particularly conditioned for this walk."

He asked that no women or children participate because "where there is a chance for danger, the man should occupy the position. It has been proven that a walk such as this can be dangerous, even in the United States."

UNOFFICIAL VISIT

HELSINKI (UPI)—The United States guided missile destroyer Farragut will pay an unofficial visit to Finland from June 30 through July 5, it was announced Friday.

Youth Court Changes Ordered By High Court

WSHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, in the term just ended, ordered a revolutionary overhaul in the nation's juvenile court system, broadened press freedom and made citizenship an almost indestructible right.

The states were barred from actively encouraging housing discrimination and were told they have no right to prohibit Negro-white marriages.

And yet, in this 14th year of the "Warren Court," there seemed to be little zeal to reach out toward new frontiers. Whether the nation was catching up with the court or the court with the nation the result appeared the same: "The justices kept largely to the middle of the road.

They took a dim view of the shift in the civil rights fight from the courts to the street, refused to become embroiled in the national debate over the Vietnam war and passed up a chance to clarify the rights of welfare recipients.

While police "bugging" was virtually outlawed, wider police searches in the home and use of informers and undercover agents were sanctioned.

In some respects the noticeable shift toward moderation and caution could be attributed to Justice Hugo L. Black, who in his 30th year on the bench broke away in several instances from the liberal wing headed by Chief Justice Earl Warren.

In November, for the first time, and again at last Monday's closing session, the court cracked down on Negro civil rights demonstrators. In both instances Black converted the conservative minority to a 5-4 majority.

'Fold Down" model Body

Here is a farm body that gives you the profit advantage of bigger payload space and a chance to profit from additional uses you've previously had to pass up. Hinged Stock Racks—light-weight "Swing or Slide" Stock End Gate—"metering" grain gate, lowest possible loading height, kiln-dried hardwood or all-steel floors, patented steel stakes, all contribute to lower operating costs.

WITH STOCK RACKS DOWN

With Stock Racks folded down and ventilator slots in place body is quickly converted to 37" grain body. Available with or without underbody hoist.

Come in and see us today.

MAY SALESMAN OF THE MONTH

KENNETH INABNETT

FOR THE 2ND MONTH IN A ROW, KEN INABNETT has been recognized as Salesman of the Month for Ryan Chevrolet. Inabnett, a veteran of over 21 years in Chevrolet sales and service, was the outstanding salesman in April, as well as May. Although Ken is located at the Ryan Chevrolet OK Corral, he gives good deals on brand new '67 Chevrolet cars and trucks as well as clean OK used cars and trucks. "I cordially invite anyone who is interested in a new car or truck, or a quality used car, to get in touch with me at Ryan Chevrolet or by calling 387-2222," says Ken Inabnett. "Right now, I can give especially good deals during our Ryan Chevrolet Gigantic Pacesetter Sale," Inabnett continued. Ryan Chevrolet is located at 1101 Oliver Road at Roselawn.

Take a ride in a MARK IV air conditioned car!

In two different series of tests Mark IV Monitor was pitted against the best auto air conditioners from Detroit . . . against other independents. In every test, at every stage, Mark IV outcooled every other brand tested. And this performance is matched by lasting quality: many Mark IV's have given over 300,000 miles of service, having been transferred to their third and fourth cars. Make your own test. Ride in a car with factory air. Ride in an identical car with Mark IV. You'll feel the difference immediately. And so will your pocketbook!

Take a ride in a MARK IV air conditioned car!

In two different series of tests Mark IV Monitor was pitted against the best auto air conditioners from Detroit . . . against other independents. In every test, at every stage, Mark IV outcooled every other brand tested. And this performance is matched by lasting quality: many Mark IV's have given over 300,000 miles of service, having been transferred to their third and fourth cars. Make your own test. Ride in a car with factory air. Ride in an identical car with Mark IV. You'll feel the difference immediately. And so will your pocketbook!

Premier Ky Enters Third Year Stronger

By BARRY KRAMER

SAIGON (AP) — It hasn't been easy, but Nguyen Cao Ky enters his third year as prime minister this week stronger politically than ever before.

During those two years Ky has fought off challengers ranging from other generals to the Buddhists. He now is running for the presidency of South Vietnam and appears unbeatable.

Ky was one of several "young Turk" officers who rose rapidly to power following the overthrow of Ngo Dinh Diem in 1963. He insists he hasn't basically changed.

"I still consider myself a young Turk," he said recently. "You can't become an old Turk at the age of 37."

But those who have observed Nguyen Cao Ky during the two years he has been in power say he is a different man.

Ky's charm and wit remain, but the flamboyance, almost cockiness, of Ky, the air force pilot, is gone. The two years in office have tempered his tendency to say what he thought without considering the political consequences.

In meetings with newsmen, which Ky seems to relish, he takes the time to qualify answers to questions. He still speaks his mind, but minds what he says. He has attended several conferences outside Vietnam and even managed to steal the spotlight from President Johnson at the Guam conference last March.

Educated in Hanoi, Ky is fluent in English and French in addition to his native tongue, and switches at will to answer questions thrown at him by newsmen of all three languages. He even translates into English the Vietnamese questions and answers for the predominantly unilingual American newsmen.

Once a flashy dresser who favored a black flying suit with lavender scarf, Ky now usually appears in public in conservative suits. He wears his military uniforms when visiting military installations, and occasionally dons the black flying suit when the occasion calls for it.

Using a combination of force and compromise, Ky has successfully gotten rid of all major opposition until now he confidently expects he will get 2 million votes from South Vietnam's 5.2 million registered voters in the Sept. 3 presidential election.

Ky's major opponent in the race, Chief of State Nguyen Van Thieu, bitterly denounces Ky for using the government apparatus to insure his victory. Although he denies it, Ky is using the Information Ministry, the Revolutionary Development—pacification—Ministry and the police to campaign for him.

Painted signs are springing up all over South Vietnam singing the praises of Ky.

"March forward, Nguyen Cao Ky, we will follow you," said a recent banner at a youth festival in the Saigon stadium.

"The government of Nguyen Cao Ky is the government of the poor," it says.

Each of the 44 province chiefs has been told to deliver 20,000 votes for the prime minister, or a total of 880,000 votes.

It almost seems as if Ky is doing too much to insure his victory.

If not officially, Ky apparently has the silent backing of the United States, which sees in Ky a force that has been able to stabilize the South Vietnamese government so the war against the Communists could continue.

When Ky took over on June 19, 1965, there was little chance that his government would not end as the 10 previous governments that followed one another like dominoes in the 20 months after Diem was slain.

Ky's troubles with the Buddhists boiled over when he ousted Lt. Gen. Nguyen Chanh Thi as commander of the northernmost of the country's four military corps areas in March 1966.

Thi had established a war lord control over his area, flouting orders from Saigon and posing a threat to Ky's rule.

The dismissal gave the Buddhists the spark they needed to call mobs into the streets for several weeks of antigovernment rioting. Ky used force to put down the most serious of the disturbances and at the same time negotiated with Buddhist leaders.

Out of those negotiations came South Vietnam's new constitution and an elected provisional Legislative Assembly which is now drafting laws for the election of a president and vice president and for a two-house legislature.

For the first time, a South Vietnamese government had promised elections and meant it. Elections already have been held in thousands of villages and hamlets and there is no reason now why the presidential and legislative elections cannot go off as scheduled later this year.

With Ky running for president, the United States seems to have done well in pushing for an elected government in South Vietnam. The government would still have a strong military man at its helm and at the same time have the legitimacy that the United States thinks so important.

Ky agrees.

"A stable government in South Vietnam can end the war sooner," he says, "perhaps as soon as two years. While they (North Vietnam) are having more and more difficulties, in South Vietnam we are becoming more and more stable. It can persuade them to come to the negotiating table.

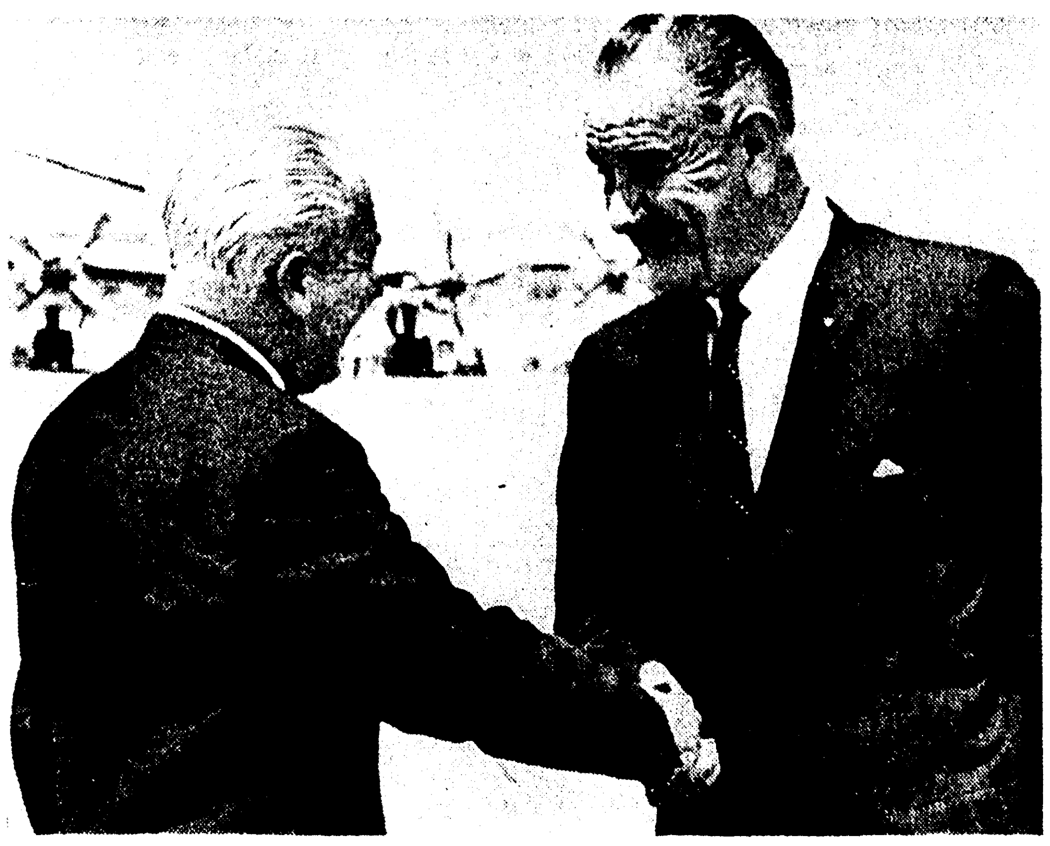
"The stronger the regime in South Vietnam becomes, the better position we will be in to talk with the enemy."

Ky's regime has never been stronger. Although, as Ky likes to say, "anything can happen in Vietnam," he has been able to weed out of the government most of those who pose a threat to him.

In addition to Gen. Thi, now in exile outside Washington, D.C., Ky also fired Defense Minister Nguyen Huu Co. And in moves to cut down corruption in the government, Ky dismissed Gen. Dang Van Quang. Ky also accused Co of corruption.

Rampant corruption continues to be one of the negative aspects of the Ky government, as in every previous government. The pay scales of government workers have remained low, making it very tempting for civil servants and military officials to accept bribes and similar payments. One of Ky's promises is to weed out corruption, but it seems an unsolvable problem.

Censorship, too, is an integral part of the Ky government. Stories and parts of stories are cut every day from the nation's newspapers. Outgoing dispatches by foreign journalists are not censored as they were during the Diem regime. Ky has warned Vietnamese newspapers they will be closed if they print anything during the election campaign that "will create dissension among the people."



PRESIDENT JOHNSON greets Prime Minister Harold Holt of Australia at Dulles International Airport Saturday. From the airport the two flew to Camp David, Md., for a weekend of talks. (AP Wirephoto)

LBJ-Kosygin Summit Meet Still Big If

Johnson said he had not foreclosed the possibility of a summit meeting but that "it's an iffy question" of whether it will take place. "I wouldn't want to foreclose the possibility of talking about going to the moon," Johnson said, "but it's not on the agenda."

"Do you have any better idea of Mr. Kosygin's plans?" a newsman asked. "I think you have all the information I have," Johnson replied.

The questioning was brief, as Johnson invited reporters to put queries to him while he and Holt sat in blue-cushioned, redwood lounge chairs on the flagstone patio outside Johnson's lodge.

The President said he expected to meet wtih Holt at Camp David until Monday morning although there was a possibility they might conclude their talks Sunday.

He pointed out that he had originally invited Holt to spend the weekend with him at the LBJ ranch in Texas but "in view of developments," he decided they should stay closer to home and the United Nations and meet at Camp David, 65 miles from the White House.

Kosygin arrived in New York before dawn Saturday to attend the United Nations General Assembly meeting on the Middle East.

There were no indications about when and where Johnson would meet Kosygin, but it appeared likely the meeting would occur in New York around the first of the week.

Kosygin, who arrived in New York for a 10-day visit early Saturday, will appear before a special session of the U.N. General Assembly Monday to seek condemnation of Israel as the "aggressor" in the Middle East war.

Officials indicated the Kosygin-Johnson meeting would not take place before Kosygin made his speech to the United Nations. By this, Johnson could cancel the meeting if Kosygin went too far in accusing the United States of being Israel's accomplice in a war of aggression.

It was announced Friday that Johnson would deliver a speech at 9:30 a.m. EDT Monday at a national foreign policy conference for educators at the State Department.

This would give Johnson a forum to present his views even before the U.N. General Assembly meets later in the morning.

SHOOT NON-STRIKERS

MANILA (UPI)—Strikers shot and wounded seven non-striking employes of the Shell Oil Co. in Manila Friday, and overturned two trucks that tried to deliver oil from a company depot.

Employes have been striking for several weeks in protest against a proposal to hire private guards to prevent stealing at the depot.

Kosygin's Daughter Called 'Nice Person'

MOSCOW (AP) — An elegantly dressed brunette who speaks English well and has been described as "an extremely nice person' is accompanying Premier Alexei N. Kosygin as his hostess in New York.

A daughter of Soviet communism, she has already charmed the Anglican bishop of Coventry Cathedral in England. Now, those who know her say, she can be expected to charm persons she meets on her first trip to the United States.

Mrs. Ludmila Alexeyevna Gvishiani, 38, the only child of Kosygin and his late wife, impresses most foreigners who meet her. She makes conversation easily in English. A friendly, informal manner permits her to laugh and be more relaxed than the stolid Soviet officials around her father—who does not relax publicly very often.

Mrs. Gvishiani lives in Moscow behind the screen of anonymity which protects Soviet officials, only rarely appearing on official occasions. The private life of Kremlin leaders and their families is kept very private.

She is variously reported to work in the archives of the Soviet Foreign Ministry or in some other archives. When she puts on her glasses for reading, Mrs. Gvishiani assumes the properly scholarly look for such a job.

At the Tashkent conference between India and Pakistan in January 1966, she was one of her father's chief secretarial aides as Kosygin pulled off a diplomatic triumph of negotiation. Recently, she played a large part in arranging a British-Soviet historical exhibit in London.

Ludmila was born Sept. 4, 1928, to Alexei and Klavdiya Kosygin at a time when the future premier was an instructor of factory management in Siberia.

Much of her childhood was spent in Leningrad. By the time she was ready for college her father had become a deputy premier in Moscow under Premier Josef V. Stalin.

A darkly handsome youth technical student from the south Soviet mountain region of Georgia—Stalin's home territory—entered her life, and Ludmila married Dzermen M. Gvishiani. In 1948 their son, named Alexei fo rhis grandfather, was born.

Gvishiani is now a deputy chairman of the State Committee for Science and Technology, which comes directly under Kosygin's contrl.

Premier Ky Enters Third Year Stronger

By BARRY KRAMER

SAIGON (AP) — It hasn't been easy, but Nguyen Cao Ky enters his third year as prime minister this week stronger politically than ever before.

During those two years Ky has fought off challengers ranging from other generals to the Buddhists. He now is running for the presidency of South Vietnam and appears unbeatable.

Ky was one of several "young Turk" officers who rose rapidly to power following the overthrow of Ngo Dinh Diem in 1963. He insists he hasn't basically changed.

"I still consider myself a young Turk," he said recently. "You can't become an old Turk at the age of 37."

But those who have observed Nguyen Cao Ky during the two years he has been in power say he is a different man.

Ky's charm and wit remain, but the flamboyance, almost cockiness, of Ky, the air force pilot, is gone. The two years in office have tempered his tendency to say what he thought without considering the political consequences.

In meetings with newsmen, which Ky seems to relish, he takes the time to qualify answers to questions. He still speaks his mind, but minds what he says. He has attended several conferences outside Vietnam and even managed to steal the spotlight from President Johnson at the Guam conference last March.

Educated in Hanoi, Ky is fluent in English and French in addition to his native tongue, and switches at will to answer questions thrown at him by newsmen of all three languages. He even translates into English the Vietnamese questions and answers for the predominantly unilingual American newsmen.

Once a flashy dresser who favored a black flying suit with lavender scarf, Ky now usually appears in public in conservative suits. He wears his military uniforms when visiting military installations, and occasionally dons the black flying suit when the occasion calls for it.

Using a combination of force and compromise, Ky has successfully gotten rid of all major opposition until now he confidently expects he will get 2 million votes from South Vietnam's 5.2 million registered voters in the Sept. 3 presidential election.

Ky's major opponent in the race, Chief of State Nguyen Van Thieu, bitterly denounces Ky for using the government apparatus to insure his victory. Although he denies it, Ky is using the Information Ministry, the Revolutionary Development—pacification—Ministry and the police to campaign for him.

Painted signs are springing up all over South Vietnam singing the praises of Ky.

"March forward, Nguyen Cao Ky, we will follow you," said a recent banner at a youth festival in the Saigon stadium.

"The government of Nguyen Cao Ky is the government of the poor," it says.

Each of the 44 province chiefs has been told to deliver 20,000 votes for the prime minister, or a total of 880,000 votes.

It almost seems as if Ky is doing too much to insure his victory.

If not officially, Ky apparently has the silent backing of the United States, which sees in Ky a force that has been able to stabilize the South Vietnamese government so the war against the Communists could continue.

When Ky took over on June 19, 1965, there was little chance that his government would not end as the 10 previous governments that followed one another like dominoes in the 20 months after Diem was slain.

Ky's troubles with the Buddhists boiled over when he ousted Lt. Gen. Nguyen Chanh Thi as commander of the northernmost of the country's four military corps areas in March 1966.

Thi had established a war lord control over his area, flouting orders from Saigon and posing a threat to Ky's rule.

The dismissal gave the Buddhists the spark they needed to call mobs into the streets for several weeks of antigovernment rioting. Ky used force to put down the most serious of the disturbances and at the same time negotiated with Buddhist leaders.

Out of those negotiations came South Vietnam's new constitution and an elected provisional Legislative Assembly which is now drafting laws for the election of a president and vice president and for a two-house legislature.

For the first time, a South Vietnamese government had promised elections and meant it. Elections already have been held in thousands of villages and hamlets and there is no reason now why the presidential and legislative elections cannot go off as scheduled later this year.

With Ky running for president, the United States seems to have done well in pushing for an elected government in South Vietnam. The government would still have a strong military man at its helm and at the same time have the legitimacy that the United States thinks so important.

Ky agrees.

"A stable government in South Vietnam can end the war sooner," he says, "perhaps as soon as two years. While they (North Vietnam) are having more and more difficulties, in South Vietnam we are becoming more and more stable. It can persuade them to come to the negotiating table.

"The stronger the regime in South Vietnam becomes, the better position we will be in to talk with the enemy."

Ky's regime has never been stronger. Although, as Ky likes to say, "anything can happen in Vietnam," he has been able to weed out of the government most of those who pose a threat to him.

In addition to Gen. Thi, now in exile outside Washington, D.C., Ky also fired Defense Minister Nguyen Huu Co. And in moves to cut down corruption in the government, Ky dismissed Gen. Dang Van Quang. Ky also accused Co of corruption.

Rampant corruption continues to be one of the negative aspects of the Ky government, as in every previous government. The pay scales of government workers have remained low, making it very tempting for civil servants and military officials to accept bribes and similar payments. One of Ky's promises is to weed out corruption, but it seems an unsolvable problem.

Censorship, too, is an integral part of the Ky government. Stories and parts of stories are cut every day from the nation's newspapers. Outgoing dispatches by foreign journalists are not censored as they were during the Diem regime. Ky has warned Vietnamese newspapers they will be closed if they print anything during the election campaign that "will create dissension among the people."

LBJ-Kosygin Summit Meet Still Big If

Johnson said he had not foreclosed the possibility of a summit meeting but that "it's an iffy question" of whether it will take place. "I wouldn't want to foreclose the possibility of talking about going to the moon," Johnson said, "but it's not on the agenda."

"Do you have any better idea of Mr. Kosygin's plans?" a newsman asked. "I think you have all the information I have," Johnson replied.

The questioning was brief, as Johnson invited reporters to put queries to him while he and Holt sat in blue-cushioned, redwood lounge chairs on the flagstone patio outside Johnson's lodge.

The President said he expected to meet wtih Holt at Camp David until Monday morning although there was a possibility they might conclude their talks Sunday.

He pointed out that he had originally invited Holt to spend the weekend with him at the LBJ ranch in Texas but "in view of developments," he decided they should stay closer to home and the United Nations and meet at Camp David, 65 miles from the White House.

Kosygin arrived in New York before dawn Saturday to attend the United Nations General Assembly meeting on the Middle East.

There were no indications about when and where Johnson would meet Kosygin, but it appeared likely the meeting would occur in New York around the first of the week.

Kosygin, who arrived in New York for a 10-day visit early Saturday, will appear before a special session of the U.N. General Assembly Monday to seek condemnation of Israel as the "aggressor'" in the Middle East war.

Officials indicated the Kosygin-Johnson meeting would not take place before Kosygin made his speech to the United Nations. By this, Johnson could cancel the meeting if Kosygin went too far in accusing the United States of being Israel's accomplice in a war of aggression.

It was announced Friday that Johnson would deliver a speech at 9:30 a.m. EDT Monday at a national foreign policy conference for educators at the State Department.

This would give Johnson a forum to present his views even before the U.N. General Assembly meets later in the morning.

SHOOT NON-STRIKERS

MANILA (UPI)—Strikers shot and wounded seven non-striking employes of the Shell Oil Co. in Manila Friday, and overturned two trucks that tried to deliver oil from a company depot.

Employes have been striking for several weeks in protest against a proposal to hire private guards to prevent stealing at the depot.

Kosygin's Daughter Called 'Nice Person'

MOSCOW (AP) — An elegantly dressed brunette who speaks English well and has been described as "an extremely nice person' is accompanying Premier Alexei N. Kosygin as his hostess in New York.

A daughter of Soviet communism, she has already charmed the Anglican bishop of Coventry Cathedral in England. Now, those who know her say, she can be expected to charm persons she meets on her first trip to the United States.

Mrs. Ludmila Alexeyevna Gvishiani, 38, the only child of Kosygin and his late wife, impresses most foreigners who meet her. She makes conversation easily in English. A friendly, informal manner permits her to laugh and be more relaxed than the stolid Soviet officials around her father—who does not relax publicly very often.

Mrs. Gvishiani lives in Moscow behind the screen of anonymity which protects Soviet officials, only rarely appearing on official occasions. The private life of Kremlin leaders and their families is kept very private.

She is variously reported to work in the archives of the Soviet Foreign Ministry or in some other archives. When she puts on her glasses for reading, Mrs. Gvishiani assumes the properly scholarly look for such a job.

At the Tashkent conference between India and Pakistan in January 1966, she was one of her father's chief secretarial aides as Kosygin pulled off a diplomatic triumph of negotiation. Recently, she played a large part in arranging a British-Soviet historical exhibit in London.

Ludmila was born Sept. 4, 1928, to Alexei and Klavdiya Kosygin at a time when the future premier was an instructor of factory management in Siberia.

Much of her childhood was spent in Leningrad. By the time she was ready for college her father had become a deputy premier in Moscow under Premier Josef V. Stalin.

A darkly handsome youth technical student from the south Soviet mountain region of Georgia—Stalin's home territory—entered her life, and Ludmila married Dzermen M. Gvishiani. In 1948 their son, named Alexei fo rhis grandfather, was born.

Gvishiani is now a deputy chairman of the State Committee for Science and Technology, which comes directly under Kosygin's contrl.

MISS NANCY HAZEL CROSSLAND

Miss Nancy Hazel Crossland, whose engagement to Charles Stovall Weems Jr. of Alexandria, is being announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Conway Crossland, 2805 Pargoud Blvd., was honored at an announcement tea on Thursday, June 15 in the home of Mrs. John Sherrouse Jr., 4500 DeSiard. Parents of the prospective bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Weems Sr., Alexandria.

Hostesses for the announcement party with Mrs. Sherrouse were Mrs. John W. Perry, Mrs. Allen Barham and Mrs. Ben Cobb.

Saturday, August 12 is the date chosen by the betrothed couple for their wedding which will be solemnized at 7:30 p.m. in First Methodist Church, Monroe, with Rev. Fred Flurry of St. Paul's Methodist, officiating.

On either side of the door to the entrance hall where Mrs. Sherrouse greeted guests were twin arrangements of magnolia blossoms in white vases. Receiving with the bride - elect, were her mother, the mother of her fiance, and her grandmother, Mrs. Forrest Hazel, of Springdale, Ark.

A mass arrangement of white roses, stock, gladioli and dahlias in a cutglass epergne, flanked by crystal candelabra holding smaller arrangements of flowers, formed the central decor for the table in the dining room, where coffee was served from one end with the silver punch bowl opposite.

An arrangement of Chysler Imperial roses and green zinnias was used on the piano in the living room while in the library were masses of roses in shades from light to deep pink. The garden room was decorated with a profusion of lemon yellow daylilies and daisies in a tiered brass container. A second punch bowl here was encircled at the base by ivy and daisies.

The bride's book was placed on the breakfront in the living room and marked by a bud vase holding a single specimen white rose. Alternating at the book during the appointed hours of 3 until 6 p.m. were Miss K K Kite, Miss Cynthia Leigh, Miss Heidi Rowan, Miss Carol Koontz, Mrs. Eddie Kincaid, Miss Faye Cannon and Mrs. George Smelser.

Those serving coffee in the dining room were Mrs. Edward Seymour Sr., Mrs. Ned Leigh, Mrs. Thomas Pete Godwin, Mrs. R. R. Rhymes, Mrs. Porter Burgess, Mrs. Jack Mabray and Mrs. Tom Scott. Presiding at the punch bowl in the dining room were Mrs. Henry Guerriero, Mrs. G. L. Morgan, Mrs. Harold Woods, Mrs. King Stubbs, Mrs. George Weaks and Mrs. Kent Breard and alternating at the punch service on the patio were Mrs. Grayson Guthrie, Mrs. James Moore, Mrs. Evans Ethridge, Mrs. Lee Vanderpool, Mrs. Clay Wilson, Mrs. Eric Wade, Mrs. Burt Sperry, Mrs. H. W. McSherry and Mrs. Corbin Turpin.

Others assisting were Mrs. John Lauve, Mrs. Mike Herrington, Miss Leila Godwin, Misses Jane, Ann and Susan Sherrouse, Miss Martha Perry, Misses Roberta, Bibb, Janie and Carolyn Cobb, Misses Ann and Nina Johnston, Miss Jeanie Cannon, Mrs. Ray Doege, Mrs. Henry Bernstein and Mrs. Bishop Johnston Jr.

Miss Crossland has chosen her sister, Miss Mary Beth Crossland to serve as her maid of honor. Bridesmaids will be Miss Susan Sherrouse, Miss Cynthia Leigh, Miss Anne Lagrange, Lake Charles; Miss Sally Sheffield, Kentwood; Miss Lois Pillow, Greenwood, Miss., Miss Terry Cobena, of Rayne; Miss Susan Petersen, cousin of the bride - elect, Springdale, Ark., and Miss Tricia Weems, sister of the future groom.

Mr. Weems will attend his son as best man and named as groomsmen are Marlow Neil Morgan, Paul Harvey, Dudley Pillow of Delta; Conley Juban, Baton Rouge; Rick Nevils, Baton Rouge; Bill Gahagen, Albin Johnson, David Crockett, all of Alexandria. Ushers will be Bill Clay, Monroe and David Petersen, cousin of the bride - elect.

Grandparents of the bride-elect are Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Hazel of Springdale and the late Mr. and Mrs. Conway Crossland Sr., Little Rock, Ark. A member of Chi Omega sorority, she is a graduate of LSU where she received the B.S. degree.

Mr. Weems is the grandson of Professor and Mrs. Willard Bond, Jackson, Miss., and the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Weems. A graduate of LSU with a degree in accounting, he is presently a senior at LSU School of Law, where he will serve as editor - in - chief of the Louisiana Law Reveiw. He is a member of Sigma Chi social fraternity; Omicron Delta Kappa honorary; Phi Kappa Phi, scholastic and Phi Alpha Delta, legal.

Following their marriage the couple will be at home at 3942 Gourrier St., in Baton Rouge.

Mary Lou Perry Becomes Bride Of Harold T. Priestley

A morning ceremony at 11 a.m. Saturday, June 17 in First Baptist Church of Bastrop, united in marriage Miss Mary Lou Perry, daughter of Wesley Guthrie Perry of Perryville, and Harold Travis Priestley, son of Mrs. Maud C. Priestley, 120 Egan, Monroe.

Escorted to the altar by her brother, Wesley Guthrie Perry Jr., the bride was wearing a traditional gown of ivory silk organza over taffeta, designed with fitted bodice, scoop neckline and brief sleeves, embellished with appliques of French lace. Lace medallions outlined the straight front panel of the skirt and back pleats extended into a wide court train. French lace appliques also bordered the bride's veil of silk illusion worn mantilla style. She carried a spray of white orchids, stephanotis and ivy, atop a white prayer book carried by her aunt the late Carrie Perry McKenzie on her wedding day.

Serving as best man was Paul Crenshaw, uncle of the groom. Groomsmen were Robert Hawthorne and David Carlson and ushers included Willie A. Roberts, Monroe; Henson Crenshaw and Richard Paulus, cousins of the groom, of Monroe and Winfred Crenshaw, Memphis, Tenn., also his cousin.

Covered with a white Belgium linen cutwork and lace cloth, the bride's table was centered with a gilt epergne filled with white bride's roses, daisies, lilies, dahlias and gypsophilia. Fern trees formed a background setting. Serving wedding cake at one end of the table were Mrs. J. W. Perry, Mrs. Everitt Carlson, Mrs. Hank Mosely of Virginia and Mrs. Hollis Venable and presiding at the punch bowl opposite were Mrs. George Mouk, Mrs. John Sherrouse Jr., Mrs. Jack Smith and Mrs. Paul Crenshaw.

Also covered in a white linen and lace cloth, the table which held the bride's book was ornamented by an epergne of the same mixed white flowers. Presiding at the book were Mrs. William Sartor, Mrs. William Givens and Mrs. Kenneth Burgess.

For travel when the couple left on a short wedding trip the bride changed into a yellow A-line voile dress with white collar, white accessories and a double white orchid corsage. The bride attended Bastrop high school and is a May 1967 graduate of Northeast Louisiana State College. A graduate of Ouachita Parish high school, Mr. Priestley attended Northeast and is now attending Naval School in Millington, Tenn., near Memphis where the couple will reside until September.

CREAM FOR HAIR

A new beauty breakthrough is a soft cream that stabilizes hair color and acts as a hair conditioner, the manufacturer reports. The cream, it is reported, prevents fading, streaking and dulling of bleached, toned and tinted hair.

MISS NANCY HAZEL CROSSLAND

Miss Nancy Hazel Crossland, whose engagement to Charles Stovall Weems Jr. of Alexandria, is being announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Conway Crossland, 2805 Pargoud Blvd., was honored at an announcement tea on Thursday, June 15 in the home of Mrs. John Sherrouse Jr., 4500 DeSiard. Parents of the prospective bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Weems Sr., Alexandria.

Hostesses for the announcement party with Mrs. Sherrouse were Mrs. John W. Perry, Mrs. Allen Barham and Mrs. Ben Cobb.

Saturday, August 12 is the date chosen by the betrothed couple for their wedding which will be solemnized at 7:30 p.m. in First Methodist Church, Monroe, with Rev. Fred Flurry of St. Paul's Methodist, officiating.

On either side of the door to the entrance hall where Mrs. Sherrouse greeted guests were twin arrangements of magnolia blossoms in white vases. Receiving with the bride - elect, were her mother, the mother of her fiance, and her grandmother, Mrs. Forrest Hazel, of Springdale, Ark.

A mass arrangement of white roses, stock, gladioli and dahlias in a cutglass epergne, flanked by crystal candelabra holding smaller arrangements of flowers, formed the central decor for the table in the dining room, where coffee was served from one end with the silver punch bowl opposite.

An arrangement of Chysler Imperial roses and green zinnias was used on the piano in the living room while in the library were masses of roses in shades from light to deep pink. The garden room was decorated with a profusion of lemon yellow daylilies and daisies in a tiered brass container. A second punch bowl here was encircled at the base by ivy and daisies.

The bride's book was placed on the breakfront in the living room and marked by a bud vase holding a single specimen white rose. Alternating at the book during the appointed hours of 3 until 6 p.m. were Miss K K Kite, Miss Cynthia Leigh, Miss Heidi Rowan, Miss Carol Koontz, Mrs. Eddie Kincaid, Miss Faye Cannon and Mrs. George Smelser.

Those serving coffee in the dining room were Mrs. Edward Seymour Sr., Mrs. Ned Leigh, Mrs. Thomas Pete Godwin, Mrs. R. R. Rhymes, Mrs. Porter Burgess, Mrs. Jack Mabray and Mrs. Tom Scott. Presiding at the punch bowl in the dining room were Mrs. Henry Guerriero, Mrs. G. L. Morgan, Mrs. Harold Woods, Mrs. King Stubbs, Mrs. George Weaks and Mrs. Kent Breard and alternating at the punch service on the patio were Mrs. Grayson Guthrie, Mrs. James Moore, Mrs. Evans Ethridge, Mrs. Lee Vanderpool, Mrs. Clay Wilson, Mrs. Eric Wade, Mrs. Burt Sperry, Mrs. H. W. McSherry and Mrs. Corbin Turpin.

Others assisting were Mrs. John Lauve, Mrs. Mike Herrington, Miss Leila Godwin, Misses Jane, Ann and Susan Sherrouse, Miss Martha Perry, Misses Roberta, Bibb, Janie and Carolyn Cobb, Misses Ann and Nina Johnston, Miss Jeanie Cannon, Mrs. Ray Doege, Mrs. Henry Bernstein and Mrs. Bishop Johnston Jr.

Miss Crossland has chosen her sister, Miss Mary Beth Crossland to serve as her maid of honor. Bridesmaids will be Miss Susan Sherrouse, Miss Cynthia Leigh, Miss Anne Lagrange, Lake Charles; Miss Sally Sheffield, Kentwood; Miss Lois Pillow, Greenwood, Miss., Miss Terry Cobena, of Rayne; Miss Susan Petersen, cousin of the bride - elect, Springdale, Ark., and Miss Tricia Weems, sister of the future groom.

Mr. Weems will attend his son as best man and named as groomsmen are Marlow Neil Morgan, Paul Harvey, Dudley Pillow of Delta; Conley Juban, Baton Rouge; Rick Nevils, Baton Rouge; Bill Gahagen, Albin Johnson, David Crockett, all of Alexandria. Ushers will be Bill Clay, Monroe and David Petersen, cousin of the bride - elect.

Grandparents of the bride-elect are Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Hazel of Springdale and the late Mr. and Mrs. Conway Crossland Sr., Little Rock, Ark. A member of Chi Omega sorority, she is a graduate of LSU where she received the B.S. degree.

Mr. Weems is the grandson of Professor and Mrs. Willard Bond, Jackson, Miss., and the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Weems. A graduate of LSU with a degree in accounting, he is presently a senior at LSU School of Law, where he will serve as editor - in - chief of the Louisiana Law Reveiw. He is a member of Sigma Chi social fraternity; Omicron Delta Kappa honorary; Phi Kappa Phi, scholastic and Phi Alpha Delta, legal.

Following their marriage the couple will be at home at 3942 Gourrier St., in Baton Rouge.

A morning ceremony at 11 a.m. Saturday, June 17 in First Baptist Church of Bastrop, united in marriage Miss Mary Lou Perry, daughter of Wesley Guthrie Perry of Perryville, and Harold Travis Priestley, son of Mrs. Maud C. Priestley, 120 Egan, Monroe.

Escorted to the altar by her brother, Wesley Guthrie Perry Jr., the bride was wearing a traditional gown of ivory silk organza over taffeta, designed with fitted bodice, scoop neckline and brief sleeves, embellished with appliques of French lace. Lace medallions outlined the straight front panel of the skirt and back pleats extended into a wide court train. French lace appliques also bordered the bride's veil of silk illusion worn mantilla style. She carried a spray of white orchids, stephanotis and ivy, atop a white prayer book carried by her aunt the late Carrie Perry McKenzie on her wedding day.

Serving as best man was Paul Crenshaw, uncle of the groom. Groomsmen were Robert Hawthorne and David Carlson and ushers included Willie A. Roberts, Monroe; Henson Crenshaw and Richard Paulus, cousins of the groom, of Monroe and Winfred Crenshaw, Memphis, Tenn., also his cousin.

Pink Tapers Illuminate Bridal Scene

MRS. ARTHUR EDWARD VALENTINE JR.

Buring pink tapers in wrought iron candelabra entwined with greenery behind the communion rail and twin mass arrangements of pink gladioli, chrysanthemums and stock formed an altar setting in Ferriday First Church of God, Saturday, June 17 for the wedding of Miss Patricia Kathleen White and Arthur Edward Valentine Jr., both of Shreveport.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Luther White Sr., of Wildsville and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Valentine Sr., of Jonesville.

The bride was wearing a gown of French imported Chantilly lace over shimmering peau de soie, featuring bell sleeves highlighted with appliques of lace and tiny seed pearls. The lace appliques were repeated on the bodice of the floor length gown featuring free flowing lines with chapel train. Her tiered veil of English illusion drifted from a lace covered crown with seed pearls. She carried a cascade bouquet comprising a white orchid surrounded by pink sweetheart roses, atop a lace covered Bible. She was escorted by her father who gave her in marriage.

Miss Connie White, who attended her sister as maid of honor, wore a floor length empire gown of pink crepe featuring a lace covered bodice and matching headdress of tulle anchored by two pink roses. She carried a nosegay of pink sweetheart roses. Bridesmaids, dressed identically to the honor attendant, were Miss Jean Walton, Shreveport, Mrs. Jimmy King, Wildsville and Miss Janice White, Jonesville. Flower girl was Miss Janet Valentine, Shreveport.

Harold Wayne Stickell, Alexandria, uncle of the groom, served as best man and groomsmen-ushers were Tony Stickell, Robery Davis, Luther White Jr., Gary White and Barry Bond. Lynn White acted as ring bearer.

For the occasion the bride's mother wore a buff crepe with lace overblouse featuring bell sleeves. Her hat was a matching chiffon pillbox and her other accessories were in matching tones. She wore a cymbidium orchid. The groom's mother wore a blue silk sheath with matching jacket, blue accessories and a cymbidium orchid.

The church parlor was scene of the reception which followed the ceremony. Covered with a white lace cloth over pink, the bride's table was centered with a mass of pink and white chrysanthemums flanked by lighted tapers. Mrs. Lucille Bond, aunt of the bride, served the cake and Mrs. Helen Wilson presided at the punch bowl.

Chandler Ferme Barham, Joseph Moody Ford Wed Saturday, Plan Europe Honeymoon

A reception at Bayou DeSiard Country Club Saturday, June 17 at 5:30 p.m. followed the wedding in Oak Ridge Baptist Church at 4 o'clock of Miss Chandler Ferme Barham and Joseph Moody Ford, Greenville, Miss. For their wedding trip the couple plans a two months tour of Europe.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph West Barham, Duval Plantation, Oak Ridge and parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Lester Lee Ford, Teheran, Iran and Greenville, Miss.

Standards and urns of white and yellow stock and gladioli, white and yellow roses, carnations and daisies formed a background setting for the ceremony performed by Dr. Glen Lee Green with music provided by Mrs. Green, organist. Daisy clusters with greenery and white satin bows marked family pews.

Escorted by her father the bride wore an Empire style gown of white Chantilly lace with bateau neckline and short scalloped sleeves. A Chantilly Watteau style train extended chapel length from the shoulders and her veil was a shoulder length mantilla of the Chantilly lace. She wore short white gloves and silk pumps and carried a chapel spray bouquet of English daisies and white veined caladium leaves. She also wore a family heirloom gold ring with oblong onyx stone centered with large green baroque pearl.

Miss Nora Stevens of Shreveport, who served as maid of honor, wore a heavy white linen floor length Empire style gown with the waistline defined by white Venise lace and matching lace trim on the Kabuki sleeves. White linen pumps and short white gloves completed her attire and she carried a spray bouquet of English daisies with fern and wide moss green velvet streamers.

Junior bridesmaids, Miss Laurie Alexander of Greenville, niece of the groom and Miss Bonnie Bratton, Austin, Tex., cousin of the bride, wore floor length Empire dresses of white linen with Venise lace trim at the waistline threaded with moss green velvet ribbon, ending in double flat bows in back. They also wore white shoes, short white gloves and carried bouquets of English daisies, fern and moss green velvet ribbon. Dressed identically to the junior bridesmaids were the flower girls, Miss Amy Barham and Miss Mimi Barham, Oak Ridge, cousins of the bride.

Serving as best man was George E. Alexander Jr. and ushers were Mack Barham and Anderson Barham, brothers of the bride; James H. Deterly and Paul M. Parish.

RECEPTION

For her daughter's wedding and the reception which followed Mrs. Barham wore an emerald green Point de Venise lace cage over nude crepe shift, with a halo of matching silk leaves and matching slippers. The groom's mother, Mrs. Ford, chose a beige lace shift with jewel trim, accenting the neckline and bracelet length bell sleeves. She wore a matching lace pillbox and beige shoes. Each wore a corsage of cattleya orchids.

A tall cupid epergne filled with white and yellow roses, stock, daisies and tulips was reflected in the mirror over the table in the entrance of the country club where guests were greeted by Mrs. T. O. Files Jr. and Mrs. Neil W. Mott. The guest book table, ornamented with a similar arrangement, was presided over by Misses Lil Shaw, Cynthia Terzia, Pam and Nancy Milner, all of Monroe and Miss Lynn Wimberly of Oak Ridge.

Magnolia foliage in white Grecian urns atop pedestals formed a background for the receiving line.

Silver punch bowls were at either end of a table, covered with a floor length organdy cloth, garlanded with boxwood and centered with a silver epergne of the same white and yellow flowers. Serving champagne punch were Mrs. Robert E. Bratton, aunt of the bride; Mrs. E. D. Shaw Jr., Mrs. Nelson Abel and Mrs. W. E. Conger. Serving punch were Mrs. James A. Brown, Mrs. Robert McGehee, Mrs. E. A. Barham and Mrs. King Mott, all cousins of the bride.

Wedding cake was on a round table, covered with an heirloom lace cloth, encircled with greenery and English daisies. Alternating in serving were Mrs. Edwards Barham, Mrs. Thomas W. Barham, cousins of the bride; Mrs. George E. Alexander Jr., sister of the groom and Mrs. Abner Wimberly. A table on the sunporch held the silver coffee service and groom's cake at opposite ends of an arrangement of white and yellow flowers in a tall cupid epergne. Greenery trailed to either end with clusters of green grapes. Low arrangements in the same bridal colors were used on coffee tables. Groom's cake was served by Mrs. Norman McDuffie, Mrs. W. H. Files, Mrs. Barham Bratton and Mrs. Joe Mott Jr., the latter two cousins of the bride. Presiding at the coffee service were Mrs. Leo Terzia, Mrs. James E. Files, Mrs. Louis Milner and Mrs. Joe Mott Sr., cousin of the bride.

Music throughout the reception was provided by Phares Corder's orchestra.

For travel when the couple departed for their wedding trip the bride donned a navy and white Chanel suit with white shell and matching accessories. They will be at home in the fall at Cambridge, Mass., where Mr. Ford will attend Harvard Law School. The bride is a graduate of All Saints Episcopal School in Vicksburg, Miss., and the University of Mississippi at Oxford. She is a member of Pi Beta Phi, Phi Sigma Tau, national honor philosophy society and was panhellenic representative scholarship chairman and recording secretary. Mr. Ford was graduated from the Webb School, Bellbuckle, Tenn., and University of Mississippi, where he was a member of Delta Kappa Epsilon and president of Phi Sigma Tau.

ANNOUNCEMENT is made by Dr. and Mrs. Poley Evans of Jonesboro, of the engagement of their daughter, Cheryl Dianna to Lt. (jg) Dayton LeMoyne Baker, United States Naval Reserve, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. L. Baker, Springhill. Miss Evans will be graduated in August with a B. S Degree from Louisiana Polytechnic Institute, where Lt. Baker also received his B. S. degree. He is presently on a tour of duty in Vietnam. The wedding will take place August 6 at 4 p.m. in the Jonesboro Church of Christ, following which the couple will reside in Oak Harbor, Wash.

MISS BARBARA MAUREEN HOUCK

South Carolina Girl To Wed Robert L. Gill in Late July

Announcement is made today by Mr. and Mrs. William Jacob Houck, Cameron, South Carolina, of the engagement and forthcoming marriage of their daughter, Barbara Maureen Houck to Robert Lawrence Gill, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Selig Gill of Monroe.

The wedding will be an event of July 29 at 7:30 p.m. in Resurrection Lutheran Church at Cameron, S. C., with Rev. G. B. Corley officiating.

Miss Houck was graduated from Cameron high school and from Newberry College, Newberry, S.C. and has taught in the Brookland - Coyce Schools, West Columbia, S. C. She is the granddaughter of Mrs. James Lewis Clarkson, of Columbia and the late William Jesse Sowell of Camden, S. C. and the late Mr. and Mrs. Shuler Hiller Houck of Cameron.

Mr. Gill is descended from the late Dr. and Mrs. James Arthur Wigley of Mulberry, Ark., and the late Mr. and Mrs. Mack Lawrence Gill of Monroe. He was graduated from Neville high school and from Louisiana State University with a degree in Chemical engineering. His fraternity is Lambda Chi Alpha.

The prospective bridegroom served two years as a lieutenant in the U. S. Army and is now an employee of Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. Following their marriage the couple will be at home in Lake Charles.

BRIGHT FOR MEN

When the men tie one on, they're more and more looking like a color-blindness test walking. The Men's Tie Foundation says African motifs and bold geometric prints, the brightest in years, are finding great acceptability.

MISS MARY ANNE ERWIN

Anne Erwin To Be July Bride Of Edmund Jacob Giering III

Saturday, July 29 is the date chosen for their wedding by Miss Mary Anne Erwin and Edmund Jacob Giering III, both of Monroe, whose engagement is announced today. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Joseph Erwin of Lake Providence and he is the son of Edmund Jacob Giering Jr., Natchitoches and the late Mrs. Lillian Frances Kelly Giering.

Wedding vows will be exchanged at 4:30 p.m. in St. Patrick's Catholic Church at Lake Providence with the Rev. John Cunningham of Our Lady of Fatima Church, Monroe, officiating.

The bride-elect has chosen her sister, Miss Frances Nelle Erwin of Mt. Morris, N.Y., to serve as maid of honor. Bridesmaids will be Mrs. James Milton Poteet, Monroe, and Miss Debra Ann Avery, West Monroe, niece of the bride-elect.

Carl Waymond David, Shreveport, will attend the bridegroom as best man and ushers will be Francis O. Giering, Helena, Ark and David A. Lee, New Orleans, brothers of the future groom.

Miss Erwin attended Lake Providence high school, Louisiana Tech, Northeast Louisiana State College and graduated from Bish Mathis Institute, Monroe. Her fiance graduated from St. Mary's high school in Natchitoches, attended Northwestern State College, and graduated from Louisiana Tech with a B.S. in civil engineering. Mr. Giering served four years with the missile program of the United States Air Force and is presently employed as a civil engineer with a Monroe firm.

Following their marriage the couple will be at home at 808 Warren Drive, West Monroe.

The general rule for cooking all protein foods is to cook slowly at low temperature and only until done.

Morning Ceremony Unites Cecilia Wood, Calvin Arnold

In a double ring ceremony Saturday, June 17 at St. Joseph's Catholic Church in Pine Bluff, Ark., Miss Cecilia Wood of Pine Bluff, formerly of this city, became the bride of Calvin Mobley Arnold Jr., of West Memphis, Ark.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Samuel Boyce Cook, 1710 Cole Ave., Monroe and the late Edward Sydney Wood, Grady, Ark. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Mobley Arnold of Pine Bluff.

The bride was given in marriage by her stepfather, Samuel Boyce Cook. Her floor length gown of silk organza over taffeta featured an Empire waist and short sleeves highlighted with appliques of Alencon lace and seed pearls. A flowing chapel train extended from the Empire waistline over the A-line skirt and her veil of English illsion was attached to a pillbox of Alencon lace, accented with pearl teardrops and silk organza roses at the back. The bride carried a cascade bouquet of white roses accented with satin streamers and centered with a white orchid.

Miss Jane Elizabeth Cook, Monroe, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and bridesmaids were Miss Sharon Frances Royston of Pine Bluff, and Miss Alice Elisabeth Butler of Monroe. Their identical gowns of aqua silk organza over taffeta were fashioned with moulded bodices, scoop necklines and set-in sleeves. Sheer floating panels fell from the back neckline. Aqua silk organza bows with matching back flowing tulle formed their headpieces. Each carried one large magnolia blossom with strands of magnolia leaves.

Serving as best man was Sonny Kimbrell of Pine Bluff and groomsmen were Billy Ray Jones, Pine Bluff and Richard Guy Arnold, North Little Rock. Ushers were Charles Werninger and Garratt P. Plant of Pine Bluff.

Following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Cook entertained at a reception in the Parish Hall where the bride's table was covered with a white net cloth on which was appliqued hand-sequined love birds and wedding bells. Centering the table was a silver candelabra, garlanded with magnolia blossoms and white tulle. Mrs. Charles E. Smith of Monroe, presided at the bride's book and other members of the houseparty for the reception were Mrs. Eddie Craven, cousin of the bride; Mrs. J. Walter Cook, her aunt; Mrs. Garratt P. Plant and Miss Pat Wiggins, all of Pine Bluff; Mrs. Richard Guy Arnold, North Little Rock; Miss Charlotte Haley of El Dorado and Miss Paula Lawrence of Dallas, Tex.

For traveling when the couple departed on a wedding trip through North Arkansas, the bride donned a suit of sky blue silk, black straw roller and black patent accessories and the orchid from her bouquet. They will be at home in Pine Bluff for the summer after which they will reside in West Memphis, Ark., where both will be employed by Hulbert - West Memphis School District.

Mrs. Arnold graduated from Orleans American high school in Orleans, France; attended University of Maryland in Munich, Germany and received her B. S. in home economics from Northeast Louisiana State College. She is a member of Alpha Omicron Pi sorority. A graduate of Pine Bluff high school, Mr. Arnold received his B. S. in industrial education from Arkansas A & M College, and did graduate work at Memphis State University.

Announcement is made today by Mr. and Mrs. William Jacob Houck, Cameron, South Carolina, of the engagement and forthcoming marriage of their daughter, Barbara Maureen Houck to Robert Lawrence Gill, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Selig Gill of Monroe.

The wedding will be an event of July 29 at 7:30 p.m. in Resurrection Lutheran Church at Cameron, S. C., with Rev. G. B. Corley officiating.

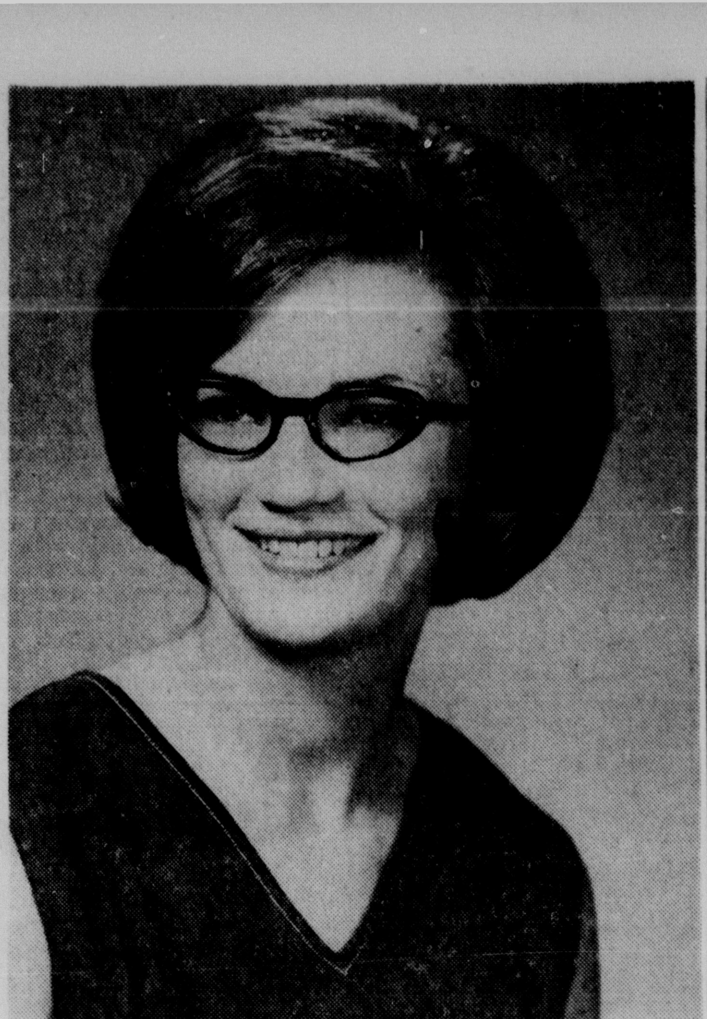
Miss Houck was graduated from Cameron high school and from Newberry College, Newberry, S.C. and has taught in the Brookland - Coyce Schools, West Columbia, S. C. She is the granddaughter of Mrs. James Lewis Clarkson, of Columbia and the late William Jesse Sowell of Camden, S. C. and the late Mr. and Mrs. Shuler Hiller Houck of Cameron.

Mr. Gill is descended from the late Dr. and Mrs. James Arthur Wigley of Mulberry, Ark., and the late Mr. and Mrs. Mack Lawrence Gill of Monroe. He was graduated from Neville high school and from Louisiana State University with a degree in Chemical engineering. His fraternity is Lambda Chi Alpha.

The prospective bridegroom served two years as a lieutenant in the U. S. Army and is now an employee of Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. Following their marriage the couple will be at home in Lake Charles.

BRIGHT FOR MEN

When the men tie one on, they're more and more looking like a color-blindness test walking. The Men's Tie Foundation says African motifs and bold geometric prints, the brightest in years, are finding great acceptability.



MISS MARY ANNE ERWIN

Anne Erwin To Be July Bride Of Edmund Jacob Giering III

Saturday, July 29 is the date chosen for their wedding by Miss Mary Anne Erwin and Edmund Jacob Giering III, both of Monroe, whose engagement is announced today. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Joseph Erwin of Lake Providence and he is the son of Edmund Jacob Giering Jr., Natchitoches and the late Mrs. Lillian Frances Kelly Giering.

Wedding vows will be exhanged at 4:30 p.m. in St. Patrick's Catholic Church at Lake Providence with the Rev. John Cunningham of Our Lady of Fatima Church, Monroe, officiating.

The bride-elect has chosen her sister, Miss Frances Nelle Erwin of Mt. Morris, N.Y., to serve as maid of honor. Bridesmaids will be Mrs. James Milton Poteet, Monroe, and Miss Debra Ann Avery, West Monroe, niece of the bride-elect.

Carl Waymond David, Shreveport, will attend the bridegroom as best man and ushers will be Francis O. Giering, Helena, Ark and David A. Lee, New Orleans, brothers of the future groom.

Miss Erwin attended Lake Providence high school, Louisiana Tech, Northeast Louisiana State College and graduated from Bish Mathis Institute, Monroe. Her fiance graduated from St. Mary's high school in Natchitoches, attended Northwestern State College, and graduated from Louisiana Tech with a B.S. in civil engineering. Mr. Giering served four years with the missile program of the United States Air Force and is presently employed as a civil engineer with a Monroe firm.

Following their marriage the couple will be at home at 808 Warren Drive, West Monroe.

Morning Ceremony Unites Cecilia Wood, Calvin Arnold

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Samuel Boyce Cook, 1710 Cole Ave., Monroe and the late Edward Sydney Wood, Grady, Ark. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Mobley Arnold of Pine Bluff.

The bride was given in marriage by her stepfather, Samuel Boyce Cook. Her floor length gown of silk organza over taffeta featured an Empire waist and short sleeves highlighted with appliques of Alencon lace and seed pearls. A flowing chapel train extended from the Empire waistline over the A-line skirt and her veil of English illsion was attached to a pillbox of Alencon lace, accented with pearl teardrops and silk organza roses at the back. The bride carried a cascade bouquet of white roses accented with satin streamers and centered with a white orchid.

Miss Jane Elizabeth Cook, Monroe, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and bridesmaids were Miss Sharon Frances Royston of Pine Bluff, and Miss Alice Elisabeth Butler of Monroe. Their identical gowns of aqua silk organza over taffeta were fashioned with moulded bodices, scoop necklines and set-in sleeves. Sheer floating panels fell from the back neckline. Aqua silk organza bows with matching back flowing tulle formed their headpieces. Each carried one large magnolia blossom with strands of magnolia leaves.

Serving as best man was Sonny Kimbrell of Pine Bluff and groomsmen were Billy Ray Jones, Pine Bluff and Richard Guy Arnold, North Little Rock. Ushers were Charles Werninger and Garratt P. Plant of Pine Bluff.

Following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Cook entertained at a reception in the Parish Hall where the bride's table was covered with a white net cloth on which was appliqued hand-sequined love birds and wedding bells. Centering the table was a silver candelabra, garlanded with magnolia blossoms and white tulle. Mrs. Charles E. Smith of Monroe, presided at the bride's book and other members of the houseparty for the reception were Mrs. Eddie Craven, cousin of the bride; Mrs. J. Walter Cook, her aunt; Mrs. Garratt P. Plant and Miss Pat Wiggins, all of Pine Bluff; Mrs. Richard Guy Arnold, North Little Rock; Miss Charlotte Haley of El Dorado and Miss Paula Lawrence of Dallas, Tex.

For traveling when the couple departed on a wedding trip through North Arkansas, the bride donned a suit of sky blue silk, black straw roller and black patent accessories and the orchid from her bouquet. They will be at home in Pine Bluff for the summer after which they will reside in West Memphis, Ark., where both will be employed by Hulbert - West Memphis School District.

Mrs. Arnold graduated from Orleans American high school in Orleans, France; attended University of Maryland in Munich, Germany and received her B. S. in home economics from Northeast Louisiana State College. She is a member of Alpha Omicron Pi sorority. A graduate of Pine Bluff high school, Mr. Arnold received his B. S. in industrial education from Arkansas A & M College, and did graduate work at Memphis State University.

Italy Promotes Glove Fashions

Naples, Italy, has been a center for glovemaking for well over a century, with many firms, like Antonie Tortora, having been founded as far back as 1846. Most glovemaking houses are still family - owned.

The concentration is on quality rather than fashion, but now the families have joined to form The National Association of Glove Manufacturers. They hope to strengthen their position so as to back a fashion image .

Teresa Cimraino, only woman in a top position in this Neopolitan glove world, wants to go ahead of the best French firms, which still hold the style lead.

MRS. NEIL STEWART WEST

Patricia Ellen Arnold Weds Neil Stewart West Saturday

In a candlelight ceremony Saturday afternoon, June 17 at 4:30 p.m. in the First Methodist Church of Crossett, Miss Patricia Ellen Arnold and Neil Stewart West exchanged wedding vows. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Strang Arnold, Crossett and parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. James C. West of Shreveport.

The Rev. Ferris W. Norton Jr. performed the double ring ceremony against a background of Southern smilax and white gardenias banking the altar and choir rails. Seven-branched candelabra holding white tapers framed the chancel. Candles were lighted by Miss Laurie Hastings, cousin of the bride and Miss Jane Temple, during an organ concert by Mrs. W. B. Anderson, who also accompanied the soloist, Mrs. Dennis Carter.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore an empire gown of peau de soie designed with a Renaissance neckline and long tapering sleeves. Alencon lace encircled the bodice and formed a front panel, and the redingote skirt with pleated back fullness swept into a wide chapel train. A fingertip veil of Belgian lace formed a mantilla over the cascade of illusion which had been her mother's wedding veil. She carried a white Bible crested with a white orchid in a bouquet of lily of the valley.

Miss Kay Denton who served as maid of honor, wore a floor length cage dress of shell pink fashioned with scooped neckline and short sleeves. A small butterfly bow with a pouf veil formed a head-hugging cap. Dressed identically to the maid of honor were bridesmaids, Mrs. Richard L. Markell, Miss Debbie Doland of Little Rock, Miss Martha Lynn Kelly of Eudora and Miss Lynn McDonald of Dallas, Texas. They carried nosegays of pink cymbidium orchids surrounded by pink net. Miss Jan Alsup was flower girl.

Don West of Adrian, Mich., attended his brother as best man. Groomsmen were Richard Arnold, brother of the bride; Mike Couch of Magnolia; Keith Linderman of Topeka, Kans. and ushers were Gerald Clark of McGehee and Ollie Brown of Magnolia.

A reception following the ceremony was held in Fellowship Hall of the church. The bride's table was centered with an arrangement of white roses, gardenias, gypsophilia and lily of the valley in a silver bowl, flanked by five branched candelabra.

Miss Trina Gottfried, Los Angeles, Calif., cousin of the bride and Mrs. Carl Blythe presided at the punch bowl and Miss Pat Tarvin of Hot Springs and Mrs. Don West of Adrian, Mich., served the cake. Miss Linda Wellhausen of Little Rock was at the bride's book.

After a wedding trip the couple will be at home in Omaha, Nebr., where Mr. West will be stationed as a lieutenant with the Strategic Air Command at Offutt Air Force Base.

MRS. JOSEPH NELSON BROYLES

New Orleans Home Planned By Joseph Broyles, Bride

A noon mass in St. Agnes Catholic Church in Baton Rouge on Saturday, June 10 united in marriage Miss Mary Taylor Bourgeois and Joseph Nelson Broyles. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hannis Taylor Bourgeois of Baton Rouge. Mr. Broyles, son of Mrs. Joe C. Broyles, Leesville and the late Dr. Broyles, is the grandson of Mrs. N. P. Liles of Bastrop and Mrs. Mattie Broyles of Leesville.

The Rev. Warren Dicharry performed the double ring ceremony in a setting of boxwood topiary trees, tied with white satin bows and streamers, and gold urns holding peonies, stock and feverfew.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a gown of Italian silk chiffon, embroidered with lace medallions and rosebuds of chiffon. The jewel neckline was enhanced with a heart-shaped locket centered with a diamond, a gift of the bridegroom. Matching lace motifs and chiffon rosebuds banded the hemline and were repeated on the chapel train of chiffon. Worn mantilla style over a matching crown, her veil of Italian chiffon extended train length and was also adorned with the lace petals and roses. She carried a bouquet of lily of the valley with an heirloom handkerchief.

Mrs. Avonia B. Webb served as matron of honor for her sister and Miss Beryl Allen Broyles, sister of the groom, was maid of honor. Bridesmaids included Misses Erin O'Brien, Susan Cazedessus, Mary Ann Reymond, Margaret Mayhall, Miss Mary Frances Landry of Norco and Miss Connie Hudgins of Houston, Tex. The attendants wore floor length gowns of white organdy caged over sheath dresses. Pastel rainbow colors of floral embroidery frosted the billowy sleeves which were cuffed in tiny rows of pink, white and blue ribbons. Matching streamers fell from the back to border the hem. Their headpieces were crowns of ivy leaves and their pumps and gloves were white. They carried cascades of gardenias, ivy and streamers.

Steve Edward Broyles served his brother as best man and groomsmen were Edwin L. Cobra of Leesville; Arthur E. Liles of Monroe, cousin of the groom; John E. Broyles of Shreveport, also his cousin; W. Arthur Abercrombie Jr., George F. Webb, nephew of the bride; R. J. Fertitta of Leesville and Van R Mayhall Jr., cousin of the bride. Guests were seated by Edward F. Glusman Jr., A. Harvey Broyles, Shreveport, and E. L. Harp of Gretna, both uncles of the groom.

A reception followed at the Baton Rouge Country Club, where the stairs leading to the reception area were tied with garlands of boxwood roping and white satin bows. Suspended from the ceiling of the stairwell was a large flower ball of gardenias and smilax while on the landing were topiary trees.

Mrs. Bourgeois selected for the occasion a Dresden blue sheath with matching hat, both accented in crystal beads. A corsage of white orchids was pinned to her purse. Mrs. Broyles' apricot silk dress with pearl and crystal embroidered yoke and sleeves, was complemented by a cap of Belgian lace and pearls. Her corsage was also of white orchids.

Lilies of the valley were placed throughout the reception area with mass arrangements of white flowers. Hanging above the serving table were garlands of smilax and gardenias centered with a large flower ball. A white silk failie cloth covered the cake table and an embroidered cloth of French net, trimmed in white satin and featuring sprays of doves and roses encrusted with white sequins and pearls was used on the refreshment table.

Alternating at the cake service were Mrs. A. D. Jackson, Mrs. W. A. Broyles, Mrs. M. C. Hudgins, Mrs. E. L. Harp, Mrs. Van B. Mayhall, Mrs. Edward F. Glusman, Mrs. Alvin B. Lorio, Mrs. N. E. Liles, Mrs. Paul T. Landry Jr., Mrs. W. B. Liles, Mrs. Emile Roques Jr., Mrs. Harvey Broyles, Mrs. Ted R. Broyles, Mrs. John H. Livingston, Mrs. Phil Hollingsworth and Miss Charol Rogues.

Also in the houseparty were Mrs. Carlos Spaht, Mrs. O. M. Pollard, Mrs. Jodie Smith, Mrs. Herbert Hobgood, Mrs. A. J. Bankhead, Mrs. Ashton Robins, Mrs. Louis F. Borne, Mrs. Herman A. Clark, Mrs. Leo M. Odom, Mrs. Carter Brown, Mrs. T. W. Kleinpeter, Mrs. Marvin Hebert, Mrs. Phillip Eckert, Mrs. Kirk Lindsay, Mrs. N. S. Catchings, Mrs. C. L. Daniels, Mrs. Jean M. King, Mrs. R. J. Fertitta, Mrs. Sam J. Fertitta, Mrs. Creighton Owen, Mrs. Sidney Campbell and Mrs. R. J. Palmer. Rice girls were Misses Avonia Dean Webb and Stacy Lynn Webb, nieces of the bride; Laura and Susan Harp, Monica and Bambi Liles, all cousins of the groom.

For travel when the couple left on a wedding trip to Mexico City and Acapulco, the bride wore a pink linen sheath and jacket ensemble, white reptile accessories and an orchid corsage. Mrs. Broyles is a member of Kappa Delta, Les Belles, having been presented by the Baton Rouge Charity Ball Association in 1963 and Intersorority. She is an alumnae of St. Joseph's Acadmey and LSU. Mr. Broyles, who was graduated from Leesville high school and LSU, is a member of Kappa Alpha Order and Nu Sigma Nu medical fraternity. Upon their return the couple will reside in New Orleans, where the bridegroom is enrolled at LSU Medical School.

Coiffures Move Forward In Curls

Things will move forward on the coiffure scene in 1967, reports the Helene Curtis Guild of Professional Beauticians. Bangs will fall across the forehead in a gentle, full sweep. Ears will go partly undercover of soft, short curls that feather up and around the face. Women over 25, it was reported, will elect to wear their hair chin high and best balance with knee - cap skirts.

CHEESE IT

Cheesy onions are good with either steak or hamburgers. For 6 to 8 servings,spread 2 (4 ounce) packages of frozen french - fried onion rings in a shallow baking pan. Sprinkle with ½ cup of blue cheese — about 3 ounces — crumbled. Bake as onion package label directs.

Sheri Sheppard Is Bride Of Ben J. Tindall

Solemnized Saturday, June 17 at 3 p.m. in Highland Park Baptist Church, was the ceremony uniting in marriage Miss Sheri Sheppard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick R. Sheppard, 209 Clark St., Monroe, and Ben J. Tindall, son of Mr. and Mrs. R.H. Tindall, New Albany, Miss.

Rev. Edgar L. Wiggins performed the double ring vows before an altar decorated with two large baskets of gladioli and seven branched candelabra holding lighted tapers. Large pink and blue bows marked the family pews.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a floor length gown of white slipper satin with lace sleeves and lace appliques around the neckline. A watteau train, attached to the shoulders, extended chapel length. A large white satin bow held her waist length scalloped lace veil. She carried a bouquet of white carnations centered with a white orchid.

Miss Sherry Urbanek of Oxford, Miss., served as maid of honor and wore a pink sheath with lighter pink lace jacket and matching lace pillbox hat. She carried two dark pink roses, tied with pink ribbons. Bridesmaids, Miss Linda Telano and Miss Sue Young, Monroe, wore pink bonded crepe dresses with sleeves and yokes of lace. Their headpieces were also pillboxes covered in pale pink net and topped with pink satin bows. Each carried a single pink rose.

Bobby Tindall of Laurel, Miss. attended his brother as best man and ushers were Gary Telano and Larry Averett, Monroe.

A reception following the ceremony was held in the church community hall. Centering the pink and white lace covered table was an arrangement of Tropicana roses in a crystal container, flanked by candles in gold candelabra.

When the couple departed for a wedding trip to Fort Walton Beach, Fla., the bride was wearing a yellow A-line dress with white accessories and the orchid from her bouquet. They will reside in Niceville, Fla., where Mr. Tindall is stationed at Eglin Air Force Base.

The bride is a graduate of Ouachita Parish high school. Mr. Tindall graduated from high school in New Albany, Miss., and attended Northeast Junior College in Booneville, Miss., prior to enlisting in the air force as an air policeman.

Dr. George Buckner Jr., Bride On Wedding Trip In Bahamas

Solemnized Saturday, June 17 in St. Charles Church, Orlando, Fla., was the wedding of Miss Joan Therese Zimorski, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Edwin Zimorski and Dr. George Standley Buckner Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. George Standley Buckner, 1900 Spencer Blvd., Monroe. A wedding trip to the Bahama Islands followed the reception.

White chrysanthemums and yellow roses formed an altar setting where Monsignor Charles A. Bartok performed the double ring vows at 3 p.m. Mrs. Leslie Farrington, organist, provided nuptial music.

Wearing a gown of pale ivory silk organza over white taffeta, the bride was escorted by her father, who gave her in marriage. The high rise Empire bodice of peau d'ange lace, featured a Sabrina neckline and short lace sleeves. Motifs of the lace were scattered over the A-line skirt and formed a deep border around the skirt and the full court train attached at the shoulders. Her shoulder length veil was held by a lace cap and three organza roses. She wore a string of pearls, gift of the groom, and carried three long stem white roses.

Miss Ann Louise Zimorski, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and Miss Rhea Rivet Buckner, Dallas, Tex., sister of the groom, was bridesmaid. Their floor length gowns of maize silk linen featured Empire bodices and A-line skirts with full backs, bow trimmed at the high waistline. A cluster of small self-fabric bows formed their headpieces and each carried three yellow roses.

Dr. Robert Louviere of Jennings, served as best man for Dr. Buckner and groomsman was Richard D. Olsan II of Monroe. Ushers were Richard Buckner, brother of the groom; Dr. Sam Andrews, Lake Charles and Dr. Fred Culpepper III of Monro.

Following the ceremony the bride's parents were hosts at a reception at Dubsdread Country Club. Mrs. Zimorski received her guests wearing a self-embroidered pink and green linen suit with pink accessories and a corsage of pink roses. Mrs. Buckner, mother of the groom, wore a suit of mint green Alaskine with darker mint shoes and bag and hat of light mint organza. Her corsage was also of pink roses.

White chrysanthemums and stock formed the central decor for the white linen covered bride's table, against a background of potted palms, white chrysanthemums and ferns. The cake, encircled with yellow roses, was served by Mrs. Edward John Krittle, Mrs. Raymond A. Zimorski, Mrs. Foster Judlin, New Orleans, aunt of the groom. Alternating at the silver punch bowl were Miss Joan Desmond Cotter, Miss Carol Lynn Krittle, Miss Joyce Marie Bennett, Mrs. William Carter. Assisting with courtesies were Mrs. Bert Tuttle, Mrs. William Simpson and Mrs. Donald McLendon. Rice bags were presented by Misses Juliana and Martha Zimorski.

When the couple left on their wedding trip to Eleuthera in the Bahama Islands, the bride was wearing a printed linen shift with full length matching coat in shades of pink, green, blue, orange and white, with pink accessories and a pink rose corsage. Upon their return the couple will be at home in St. Albans, N.Y.

The bride was graduated from Bishop Moore high school in Orlando, Fla., and Charity Hospital School of Nursing. She is a member of Sigma Alpha Chi honorary sorority. A graduate of Neville high school, Dr. Buckner attended Northeast Louisiana State College, and was graduated from Louisiana State University School of Medicine, New Orleans. His social fraternity is Sigma Nu.

Pressing Irons Out Sewing Problems

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (UPI)—As you sew, so shall you correct. Pressing while sewing helps to achieve a professional look in clothes made by the housewife, according to Ruth Ann Nine, Penn State clothing specialist.

She said pressing shows up flaws in seams that can be corrected before sewing the next seam. Use a steam iron or a moist lightweight press cloth on wool or heat-sensitive fabrics. The temperature control should be set to correspond with the fabric.

Michael Parkerson Claims Galveston Girl As Bride

First Lutheran Church in Galveston, Tex., was scene of the wedding Saturday, June 17 of Miss Diann Edith Elizabeth Schaper and James Michael Parkerson.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. August C. Schaper of Galveston and parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. James W. Parkerson, 1902 Myrtle St., Monroe. A graduate of Ball high school and Durham Business College, the bride is presently employed as a secretary with NASA Manned Spacecraft Center in Houston, Texas. Mr. Parkerson was graduated from Northeast Louisiana State College, where he was listed in Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities and was a member of Omicron Delta Kappa, national honorary leadership fraternity for men. He is employed as staff writer with Galveston County Publishing Co.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore an original formal gown of pure silk organza and Venise lace. The Empire waist was fashioned with scalloped lace, encrusted with seed pearls and crystal beads. Venise lace, studded with the pearls and crystals, also outlined the A-line skirt and accented the Watteau chapel train. Her bouffant waist length veil of English silk illusion was held by a forward headpiece of organza petals, enhanced with pearls and aurora crystal tear drops.

Mrs. Carl Schoppe of Galveston, served as matron of honor and bridesmaids were Miss Rita Schaper, Texas City, Tex., Miss Nancy Marinelli, Miss Patricia Leonard, with Miss Jill Schaper, junior bridesmaid. All are of Galveston.

J. Lannis Roberts of Baton Rouge, attended Mr. Parkerson as best man and groomsmen were James T. Holman, A. C. Schaper Jr., Galveston; Frank Bruscato, Louisville, Ky., and junior groomsman was Ralph Albright, Sugarland, Tex. Serving as ushers were Kenneth Giusti, Norman Tobleman, LaMarque, Tex., Patrick Schaper, and Ronald Schaper, Galveston. Acolytes were Charles Grossman, and John Rabel, Galveston.

A reception followed in the VFW Hall at Galveston. Those assisting in the courtesies were Miss Beth Bell, Miss Christine Gonzales, Marianne Kovacevich all of Galveston and Nancy Shrimplin, Houston.

Following a short wedding trip the couple will be at home at 3412 Ave. Q, Apt. 4, Galveston.

Mother-Daughter Fashions Return

Mother - daughter fashions, which haven't been on the scene for a number of years, may be on the way back. Florence Eiseman thinks so, and has designed an entire collection of stretch swimsuits. At least three other companies now are making mother-daughter outfits — all quite casual and suitable only for country and at-home wear.

MRS. JAMES MICHAEL PARKERSON

Gerber-Noland Vows Read In Parkview Baptist Church

Parkview Baptist Church was scene of the ceremony Saturday, June 17 at 2 p.m. which united in marriage Miss Nancy Clare Noland, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leon C. Noland Jr., 2214 Ann, Monroe, and Richard Lawrence Gerber, Wheaton, Ill., and Fort Worth, Texas, son of Rev. and Mrs. Vergil Gerber of Wheaton.

Pink candles in arch and spiral arrangements and baskets of pink gladioli formed a background setting with banks of ivy and nandina outlining the altar, where the bridegroom's father performed the double ring vows.

A prenuptial concert was rendered by the organist, Mrs. William W. Wilkerson who also accompanied the vocalists, Jerry Roberts and Carolyn Brooks.

Escorted by her father who gave her in marriage the bride wore a gown of candlelight silk bridal satin, featuring a high rise bodice, long fitted sleeves tapering to lily points and a bateau neckline. The A - line skirt was embroidered with lace and seed pearls, and a chapel train of French lace, bordered by bands of satin, fell from a bow at the lowered back waistline. Her fingertip veil of sheer French lace was held in place by a high - peaked crown fashioned of pearls and iridescent crystals. She wore an heirloom diamond and pearl lavaliere, belonging to her mother and carried a nosegay of white rosebuds with white satin streamers.

Mrs. Bob Paul of Alexandria, who served as matron of honor, was wearing a long gown of pale yellow peau de soie, with bodice overlaid with matching lace, which also formed short sleeves. Dressed alike in rainbow shades of peau were the bridesmaids, Miss Ginger Earle, in pink; Miss Patricia Porter, in blue and the junior bridesmaids, Miss Jonette Young of Alexandria, wearing lavender and Miss Susan Wilson, mint green. Jeweled crowns in the color matching their dresses held circles of illusion in the same shades. Each also wore an ivory rose on a gold chain, a gift from the bride. They carried bouquets of pink gladioli with pink satin streamers.

Candles were lighted by Jared Gerber, Cindy Wilson and Carol Noland during the pre - wedding concert. The girls wore dresses identical to the bridesmaids' in shades of palest pink.

Serving as best man was Keith Phillips, Longview, Texas and Judson Gerber, brother of the groom, was groomsman. Ushers were Bob Paul, Louis Bernhardt and Rhett Porter. John Edward Young, Alexandria, acted as ring bearer.

Mrs. Noland wore for the occasion a chiffon cage over crepe shift in periwinkle blue with bands of crepe on long sleeves and at the hemline. Her shoes were matching shade and her hat was a whimsey of periwinkle and orchid roses on net. Mrs. Gerber, mother of the groom, chose a lace shift dress in dusty pink with scalloped sleeves and neckline, a small matching hat and bone accessories. Corsages for both were of pink carnations.

RECEPTION

Following the ceremony the bride's parents entertained in the reception room of the church. Silver and crystal candelabra holding pink roses and pink tapers were at either end of a long table which was covered in white organza and centered with the punch bowl. The tiered wedding cake, encircled with pink roses was served from a round table. Roses also wreathed the memory candle which was displayed on the guest book table, presided over by Miss Sandy Calk.

Miss Carolyn Young presided at the punch bowl and Miss Leila Young served the cake. Tea girls were Suzanne Dickerson and Mary Webb, who wore pastel formals.

For travel when the couple left on a wedding trip to Acapulco, Mexico, the bride changed into a cream knit ensemble, banded with lace, complemented by hat and shoes in tangerine. They will reside in Fort Worth, where they plan to continue their education.

A graduate of Neville high school, the bride received her B.A. in music from Northeast and is working on her masters degree in music at Southwestern Baptist Seminary. A well - known church and choir soloist here and in Fort Worth, she is also an officer in Delta Omicron.

Mr. Gerber received his bachelor's degree in languages from University of Americas, Mexico City and will receive his masters degree in religious education at the Seminary. He was a charter member of the varsity soccer team in North Carolina and at the University.

Cardin Focuses On Children's Wear

By FLORENCE DE SANTIS

The avant-grade Paris couturier, Pierre Cardin, having shaken up the menswear field, now focused on children's wear. Why not, when so much current fashion looks childish anyway?

Cardin has adapted his capes, cut-out jumpers and space-age pants suits to youngsters from 2 to 8 years of age. He puts big ring zippers on everything, both for decoration and ease of putting on the clothes. Some are side-placed as in his cosmonaut suit for little boys.

. . . On Dit . . .

by Marillyn Taylor

At any time of year, a surprise party is the very best kind. And just such an affair was planned on Wednesday evening complimentary to LOUISE and ED SEYMOUR on their fortieth wedding anniversary. Hosts were ANNA CLAIRE and ED SEYMOUR, JR., and brother PRENT SEYMOUR, who entertained in the home of the former on Point Drive.

For the party, summer flowers were used in profusion throughout the reception area. In the entrance, Tropicana roses filled each of three matching brass compotes. A pyramid of Montezuma roses on a brass stand stood on a side table in the living room. Yellow and white daisies were used in the den.

A large silver compote holding a pyramid of Majestic and yellow daisies centered the dining table. At each side were matching smaller compotes filled with salted nuts. Standing buffet was prepared for the fiteen couples invited to attend.

The elder Seymours granddaughters, CLAIRE and Louise, presented their grandmother with a corsage of white cymbidium orchids. Big Ed received a white rose boutonniere. Wishes for this popular couple are for many more happy anniversaries.

IN TOWN AND OUT finds our people travelling . . . out of town visitors here . . and the constant shifting about that comes with summer time. One of our travelers is MARY PRICE a recent graduate of Neville High school, who left yesterday for the summer session at University of Hawaii.

Mary was named guest of honor at a luncheon given Wednesday by ADRIENNE GASTON. Nine guests were invited for the party in the main dining room at Bayou DeSiard Country Club. The table was covered with a gold cloth and centered with an island centerpiece. On a flat base were arranged tiny palms and fresh yellow chrysanthemums, with a figure of a hula girl as focal point. Placecards ornamented with paper pineapples further carried out the theme. The menu included a fresh fruit plate with shrimp salad.

Guests last weekend of the CHARLES SLADES and DAVE AGNEWS were Aureline's and Helen's sister EMOLOVE HITE, and Paul COOPER of College Station, Texas. The visitors arrived on Friday, were here until Monday.

En route to the Orient is ANN CHAPMAN JONES, who is to meet her husband, LT. DOUGLAS R. JONES, in Tokyo. The latter has been serving as a helicopter pilot in South Vietnam and is to be in Japan on a weeks leave. Ann left with plans to spend a night in San Francisco, and a day and night in Hawaii both going and coming. She will be away about two weeks altogether.

PATTY PIERSON was here from Alexandria, guest of her grandmother, ANNA SLAGLE and great-grandmother, MAE WOOTEN, in their home on South Grand street. On Tuesday, Anna complimented Patty at a luncheon at home. Six members of the soon-to-be-college set attended.

When JOAN and FRED KING entertained their couples' supper club Friday evening, PAT and JACK MADDEN were among those present. The latter were part of the original neighborhood which organized the club, and now live in North Carolina. They are spending the summer in Monroe at the Chateau apartments.

The group met for this, their June feast, in the King home on Pargoud boulevard. Joan, who always emphasizes a theme in her parties, planned a Southern dinner. She used two tables for eight, one covered with green and one with brown nagahyde. Centerpieces were straw pots filled with cardboard daisies. Food was set out on the buffet in straw baskets and platters. The menu included a first course of lobster and crab mousse with Parmesan sticks; fried chicken with sliced tomatoes and onions, sweet potatoes, eggplant casserole with shrimp, peas and mushrooms; and for dessert, homemade apple pie.

On Friday morning, Marianne invited about eighteen friends to meet her visitor at a conversational hour at her home on Jasmine. Roses centered the dining room table, where bottled soft drinks were served with cookies and a variety of dips. The ping pong and pool tables shared the spotlight with conversation. . . Friday afternoon, Helen was invited for skiing at the bayou home of BONNIE BANCROFT. Saturday's schedule included a horseback trail ride and supper outdoors.

Guests of JUDY and PAT RILEY last week were MR. AND MRS. JACK ARDOWNO and their daughter, ELISE LYNN. Jack is just returned from service in Vietnam. The family were en route from Mobile, Alabama, where his wife and daughter have been residing, to his new station in Lemoore, California . . . Incidentally, the Riley's children, PATRICK and KELLY, returned last Sunday from Marksville, where they had spent a week with their grandparents, the JOHN LANDRYS.

Visiting in Texas are LYNDA and TOM DANSBY and their son, TOMMY. They left on Friday, planning to weekend in Galveston before going on to Houston to visit relatives. They will be away about two weeks.

'Twas a houseparty last weekend at the home of ROSALIE and FRED FUDICKAR, whose guests were ANN and BOB ALLEN of Shreveport; AUDREY (Mrs. Charles) MAYHEW and her daughter MANDY, of Dallas . . . The Fudickars' youngest son, CHARLES PATRICK, celebrated his sixth birthday on Monday. In honor of the occasion, six little neighborhood friends were invited for a swim in the Adcock pool, followed by hot dog supper and birthday cake.

Later in the week, there were visitors at the home of FRANCES and JIM ADCOCK. Their guests were LIZ TUCKER from Shreveport, and two of her daughters, NANCY and CAROL. They arrived on Wednesday to stay until Friday morning.

Michael Parkerson Claims Galveston Girl As Bride

First Lutheran Church in Galveston, Tex., was scene of the wedding Saturday, June 17 of Miss Diann Edith Elizabeth Schaper and James Michael Parkerson.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. August C. Schaper of Galveston and parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. James W. Parkerson, 1902 Myrtle St., Monroe. A graduate of Ball high school and Durham Business College, the bride is presently employed as a secretary with NASA Manned Spacecraft Center in Houston, Texas. Mr. Parkerson was graduated from Northeast Louisiana State College, where he was listed in Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities and was a member of Omicron Delta Kappa, national honorary leadership fraternity for men. He is employed as staff writer with Galveston County Publishing Co.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore an original formal gown of pure silk organza and Venise lace. The Empire waist was fashioned with scalloped lace, encrusted with seed pearls and crystal beads. Venise lace, studded with the pearls and crystals, also outlined the A-line skirt and accented the Watteau chapel train. Her bouffant waist length veil of English silk illusion was held by a forward headpiece of organza petals, enhanced with pearls and aurora crystal tear drops.

Mrs. Carl Schoppe of Galveston, served as matron of honor and bridesmaids were Miss Rita Schaper, Texas City, Tex., Miss Nancy Marinelli, Miss Patricia Leonard, with Miss Jill Schaper, junior bridesmaid. All are of Galveston.

J. Lannis Roberts of Baton Rouge, attended Mr. Parkerson as best man and groomsmen were James T. Holman, A. C. Schaper Jr., Galveston; Frank Bruscato, Louisville, Ky., and junior groomsman was Ralph Albright, Sugarland, Tex. Serving as ushers were Kenneth Giusti, Norman Tobleman, LaMarque, Tex., Patrick Schaper, and Ronald Schaper, Galveston. Acolytes were Charles Grossman, and John Rabel, Galveston.

A reception followed in the VFW Hall at Galveston. Those assisting in the courtesies were Miss Beth Bell, Miss Christine Gonzales, Marianne Kovacevich all of Galveston and Nancy Shrimplin, Houston.

Following a short wedding trip the couple will be at home at 3412 Ave. Q, Apt. 4, Galveston.

Mother-Daughter Fashions Return

Mother - daughter fashions, which haven't been on the scene for a number of years, may be on the way back. Florence Eiseman thinks so, and has designed an entire collection of stretch swimsuits. At least three other companies now are making mother-daughter outfits — all quite casual and suitable only for country and at-home wear.

Gerber-Noland Vows Read In Parkview Baptist Church

Parkview Baptist Church was scene of the ceremony Saturday, June 17 at 2 p.m. which united in marriage Miss Nancy Clare Noland, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leon C. Noland Jr., 2214 Ann, Monroe, and Richard Lawrence Gerber, Wheaton, Ill., and Fort Worth, Texas, son of Rev. and Mrs. Vergil Gerber of Wheaton.

Pink candles in arch and spiral arrangements and baskets of pink gladioli formed a background setting with banks of ivy and nandina outlining the altar, where the bridegroom's father performed the double ring vows.

A prenuptial concert was rendered by the organist, Mrs. William W. Wilkerson who also accompanied the vocalists, Jerry Roberts and Carolyn Brooks.

Escorted by her father who gave her in marriage the bride wore a gown of candlelight silk bridal satin, featuring a high rise bodice, long fitted sleeves tapering to lily points and a bateau neckline. The A - line skirt was embroidered with lace and seed pearls, and a chapel train of French lace, bordered by bands of satin, fell from a bow at the lowered back waistline. Her fingertip veil of sheer French lace was held in place by a high - peaked crown fashioned of pearls and iridescent crystals. She wore an heirloom diamond and pearl lavaliere, belonging to her mother and carried a nosegay of white rosebuds with white satin streamers.

Mrs. Bob Paul of Alexandria, who served as matron of honor, was wearing a long gown of pale yellow peau de soie, with bodice overlaid with matching lace, which also formed short sleeves. Dressed alike in rainbow shades of peau were the bridesmaids, Miss Ginger Earle, in pink; Miss Patricia Porter, in blue and the junior bridesmaids, Miss Jonette Young of Alexandria, wearing lavender and Miss Susan Wilson, mint green. Jeweled crowns in the color matching their dresses held circles of illusion in the same shades. Each also wore an ivory rose on a gold chain, a gift from the bride. They carried bouquets of pink gladioli with pink satin streamers.

Candles were lighted by Jared Gerber, Cindy Wilson and Carol Noland during the pre - wedding concert. The girls wore dresses identical to the bridesmaids' in shades of palest pink.

Serving as best man was Keith Phillips, Longview, Texas and Judson Gerber, brother of the groom, was groomsman. Ushers were Bob Paul, Louis Bernhardt and Rhett Porter. John Edward Young, Alexandria, acted as ring bearer.

Mrs. Noland wore for the occasion a chiffon cage over crepe shift in periwinkle blue with bands of crepe on long sleeves and at the hemline. Her shoes were matching shade and her hat was a whimsey of periwinkle and orchid roses on net. Mrs. Gerber, mother of the groom, chose a lace shift dress in dusty pink with scalloped sleeves and neckline, a small matching hat and bone accessories. Corsages for both were of pink carnations.

RECEPTION

Following the ceremony the bride's parents entertained in the reception room of the church. Silver and crystal candelabra holding pink roses and pink tapers were at either end of a long table which was covered in white organza and centered with the punch bowl. The tiered wedding cake, encircled with pink roses was served from a round table. Roses also wreathed the memory candle which was displayed on the guest book table, presided over by Miss Sandy Calk.

Miss Carolyn Young presided at the punch bowl and Miss Leila Young served the cake. Tea girls were Suzanne Dickerson and Mary Webb, who wore pastel formals.

For travel when the couple left on a wedding trip to Acapulco, Mexico, the bride changed into a cream knit ensemble, banded with lace, complemented by hat and shoes in tangerine. They will reside in Fort Worth, where they plan to continue their education.

A graduate of Neville high school, the bride received her B.A. in music from Northeast and is working on her masters degree in music at Southwestern Baptist Seminary. A well - known church and choir soloist here and in Fort Worth, she is also an officer in Delta Omicron.

Mr. Gerber received his bachelor's degree in languages from University of Americas, Mexico City and will receive his masters degree in religious education at the Seminary. He was a charter member of the varsity soccer team in North Carolina and at the University.

At any time of year, a surprise party is the very best kind. And just such an affair was planned on Wednesday evening complimentary to LOUISE and ED SEYMOUR on their fortieth wedding anniversary. Hosts were ANNA CLAIRE and ED SEYMOUR, JR., and brother PRENT SEYMOUR, who entertained in the home of the former on Point Drive.

For the party, summer flowers were used in profusion throughout the reception area. In the entrance, Tropicana roses filled each of three matching brass compotes. A pyramid of Montezuma roses on a brass stand stood on a side table in the living room. Yellow and white daisies were used in the den.

Cardin Focuses On Children's Wear

By FLORENCE DE SANTIS

The avant-grade Paris couturier, Pierre Cardin, having shaken up the menswear field, now focused on children's wear. Why not, when so much current fashion looks childish anyway?

Cardin has adapted his capes, cut-out jumpers and space-age pants suits to youngsters from 2 to 8 years of age. He puts big ring zippers on everything, both for decoration and ease of putting on the clothes. Some are side-placed as in his cosmonaut suit for little boys.

MRS. KENNETH BULLINGTON

MRS. ARTIS LYNN HUDNALL

MRS. DAVID RONALD McKEITHEN

Wedding Trip To Caribbean Follows Couple's Vows Here

The wedding of Miss Frances Leona Barnes of Monroe and Kenneth Bullington, Asbury Park, N. J., was solemnized Saturday, June 17 in the Chapel of First Methodist Church, West Monroe, with only members of the immediate families in attendance.

Rev. Kenneth McDowell performed the double ring ceremony at 10 a.m. with appropriate organ music provided by Fred Ussery III. White gladioli in copper urns formed a background for the large gold cross which centered the altar, at either side of which were lighted candles.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. William Edward Barnes and the late Mr. Barnes, formerly of Calhoun and parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. John R. Bullington, Wichita Falls, Texas.

Escorted by her brother George William Barnes, who gave her in marriage, the bride wore a dress of white embroidered lace over satin in afternoon length. Her headpiece was a mantilla of matching lace and she carried a white prayer book, crested with a white Japhet orchid.

Mrs. Cecil R. Dopson, sister of the bride, served as matron of honor and wore a blue lace dress with satin trim, matching shoes and headpiece. She carried a bouquet of white pompons accented with blue satin streamers. Flower girl was Miss Anne Dopson, niece of the bride, who wore a white eyelet embroidered dress with pink trim and matching accessories.

Ores Watson, brother-in-law of the groom, served as best man and ushers were Larry and Clifton Dopson. Eddie Barnes, nephew of the bride, acted as ring bearer.

A reception following the ceremony was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil C. Dopson in West Monroe. Centerpiece for the bride's table which was covered with a white imported cutwork cloth, was of white stock and pink carnations in a silver and crystal epergne flanked by silver candelabra. Similar arrangements were used throughout the rooms of the home.

After a wedding trip to Jamaica and other Caribbean Islands, the couple will reside in Asbury Park, where Mr. Bullington is head of Radio Transmission Studies Department of the Transmission Systems Research Center for Bell Telephone Laboratories in Holmdel, N. J. For travel the bride wore a three piece lime linen suit with matching hat, white accessories and a white orchid corsage.

The bride received her B.A. from Louisiana Tech; M.A. from Louisiana State University and M.S. from the University of Illinois and is a member of Psi Chi and Sigma Alpha Eta scholastic fraternities. Mr. Bullington received a B.S. degree in electrical engineering from the University of New Mexico and M.S. from M.I.T. He is a member of Phi Kappa Phi, Sigma Tau and Kappa Mu Epsilon honoraries.

Artis L. Hudnall, Dallas Girl Wed In Utah Temple

The wedding of Miss Rebecca Aliene Holland, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Douglas Holland of Dallas, Texas, to Artis Lynn Hudnall, son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Webster Hudnall, 1503 South 9th, Monroe, was solemnized June 7 at 8 p.m. in Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints Temple at St. George, Utah.

After a wedding trip to Los Angeles, Calif., though Arizona, New Mexico and West Texas the couple will be at home at 830 Blaylock, in Dallas where both are employed.

The bride graduated from Justin F. Kimball high school in Dallas and Brigham Young University, Provo, Utah. Mr. Hudnall, who attended Ouachita Parish high school, was graduated from Byrd high school in Shreveport and also attended Centenary College there. He is presently manager and music instructor at a record shop in Dallas.

On Saturday evening, June 17, the bride's parents entertained at a reception honoring the newlyweds, at their home in Dallas. Open house will be given by Mr. and Mrs. Hudnall, parents of the groom, at their home here on June 24, honoring their son and his bride.

McKeithen-Masters Nuptials Read In Candlelight Setting

In a candlelight ceremony at 7:30 p.m. Friday, June 16, Miss Linda Gale Masters, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. R. Masters, became the bride of David Ronald McKeithen, son of Mr. and Mrs. O. R. McKeithen, all of Monroe.

White chrysanthemums were interspersed with the branched candelabra holding lighted tapers on the altar of First United Pentecostal Church where the ceremony was performed by Rev. G. E. Chance and Rev. T. E. Ewing.

Nuptial music was presented by Mrs. G. E. Chance, organist and Mrs. Bobby Ewing, soloist.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a floor length gown of white organza, fashioned with long tapered sleeves and chapel train. Lace appliques embroidered with pearls embellished the bodice. Her elbow length veil of illusion was attached to a crown of crystals and pearls. She carried a bouquet of white bride's roses.

Attending the bride were Miss Melba Masters, maid of honor; Mrs. Billy Hale, matron of honor and Miss Le Sann Corrie and Miss Brenda Boliew, bridesmaids. They wore identical floor length Empire dresses in mint green with matching net eyelash veils. Each carried a single long stemmed pink rose.

Flower girl was Connie Johnson and miniature bride and groom were Gwenda Hale and Carol Wesley Lowry. Candlelighters were Gary Ewing and Debbie Hale. Randy Godwin escorted the flower girl.

Serving as best man was Joe Johnson and groomsmen were Jimmy Masters, Gene Hislop and Allan Busby. Ushers were Mike Chance and Barry Griffin.

For the occasion the bride's mother wore a beige lace dress with white accessories and a corsage of white roses. The groom's mother wore a pink crepe two piece model with white accessories and a white rose corsage.

Following the ceremony a reception was held in the church dining hall. When the couple left later for a brief wedding trip the bride was wearing a yellow and white lace dress with white accessories and a white rose corsage. They will be at home in Monroe, where both were graduated from Ouachita Parish high school and Mr. McKeithen attended Northeast.

Couple Wed By Candlelight At Crossett

Miss Kathleen Faye Ferrell became the bride of James Coleman Turner, Friday evening, June 16 in the Presbyterian Church at Crossett. Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Howard E. Ferrell and Mr. and Mrs. Drew J. Turner, all of Crossett.

White tapers in branched candelabra and floor baskets of shasta daisies formed a background setting for the ceremony at 7 p.m. performed by the Rev. Robert Lee McLeod Jr. Candles were lighted by George Howard Ferrell, brother of the bride and Larry Glenn Jordan during an organ prelude by Mrs. R. H. Hudgens, who also accompanied the soloist, R. H. Hudgens. Joe Ferrell, also a brother of the bride, was ring bearer.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a floor length gown of white silk crepe fashioned on princess lines with a yoke and bell sleeves of Alencon lace. A panel of the lace fell from the yoke back to a brush train. Her bouffant shoulder length veil of illusion was held in place by a tiara of seed pearls. She carried a cascade bouquet of Shasta daisies.

Miss Judith Jean Ferrell, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. She wore a full length yellow linen dress designed with the same lines of the bride's gown. Her headpiece was a cluster of daisies on a yellow bow which held a pouf of matching tulle. Miss Laura Beth Stone, flower girl, was in an identical dress and carried a basket of daisies. Her headpiece was a cluster of yellow ribbon which fell into streamers with a daisy at the end of each.

Dennis Bruce Turner attended his brother as best man and ushers were Buddy Kelly and Wayne Rhodes of Pine Bluff, Ark.

A reception followed in Fellowship Hall of the church. The bride's table was centered with Shasta daisies arranged in a footed silver bowl flanked by branched silver candelabra holding white tapers. Serving were Mrs. Carol Byrd, Miss Sheilla Ezelle and Miss Mary Cowen of McGehee. Miss Diane Turner of West Memphis, presided at the bride's book.

Ores Watson, brother-in-law of the groom, served as best man and ushers were Larry and Clifton Dopson. Eddie Barnes, nephew of the bride, acted as ring bearer.

A reception following the ceremony was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil C. Dopson in West Monroe. Centerpiece for the bride's table which was covered with a white imported cutwork cloth, was of white stock and pink carnations in a silver and crystal epergne flanked by silver candelabra. Similar arrangements were used throughout the rooms of the home.

After a wedding trip to Jamaica and other Caribbean Islands, the couple will reside in Asbury Park, where Mr. Bullington is head of Radio Transmission Studies Department of the Transmission Systems Research Center for Bell Telephone Laboratories in Holmdel, N. J. For travel the bride wore a three piece lime linen suit with matching hat, white accessories and a white orchid corsage.

The bride received her B.A. from Louisiana Tech; M.A. from Louisiana State University and M.S. from the University of Illinois and is a member of Psi Chi and Sigma Alpha Eta scholastic fraternities. Mr. Bullington received a B.S. degree in electrical engineering from the University of New Mexico and M.S. from M.I.T. He is a member of Phi Kappa Phi, Sigma Tau and Kappa Mu Epsilon honoraries.

Artis L. Hudnall, Dallas Girl Wed In Utah Temple

The wedding of Miss Rebecca Aliene Holland, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Douglas Holland of Dallas, Texas, to Artis Lynn Hudnall, son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Webster Hudnall, 1503 South 9th, Monroe, was solemnized June 7 at 8 p.m. in Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints Temple at St. George, Utah.

After a wedding trip to Los Angeles, Calif., though Arizona, New Mexico and West Texas the couple will be at home at 830 Blaylock, in Dallas where both are employed.

The bride graduated from Justin F. Kimball high school in Dallas and Brigham Young University, Provo, Utah. Mr. Hudnall, who attended Ouachita Parish high school, was graduated from Byrd high school in Shreveport and also attended Centenary College there. He is presently manager and music instructor at a record shop in Dallas.

On Saturday evening, June 17, the bride's parents entertained at a reception honoring the newlyweds, at their home in Dallas. Open house will be given by Mr. and Mrs. Hudnall, parents of the groom, at their home here on June 24, honoring their son and his bride.

McKeithen-Masters Nuptials Read In Candlelight Setting

In a candlelight ceremony at 7:30 p.m. Friday, June 16, Miss Linda Gale Masters, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. R. Masters, became the bride of David Ronald McKeithen, son of Mr. and Mrs. O. R. McKeithen, all of Monroe.

White chrysanthemums were interspersed with the branched candelabra holding lighted tapers on the altar of First United Pentecostal Church where the ceremony was performed by Rev. G. E. Chance and Rev. T. E. Ewing.

Nuptial music was presented by Mrs. G. E. Chance, organist and Mrs. Bobby Ewing, soloist.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a floor length gown of white organza, fashioned with long tapered sleeves and chapel train. Lace appliques embroidered with pearls embellished the bodice. Her elbow length veil of illusion was attached to a crown of crystals and pearls. She carried a bouquet of white bride's roses.

Attending the bride were Miss Melba Masters, maid of honor; Mrs. Billy Hale, matron of honor and Miss Le Sann Corrie and Miss Brenda Boliew, bridesmaids. They wore identical floor length Empire dresses in mint green with matching net eyelash veils. Each carried a single long stemmed pink rose.

Flower girl was Connie Johnson and miniature bride and groom were Gwenda Hale and Carol Wesley Lowry. Candlelighters were Gary Ewing and Debbie Hale. Randy Godwin escorted the flower girl.

Serving as best man was Joe Johnson and groomsmen were Jimmy Masters, Gene Hislop and Allan Busby. Ushers were Mike Chance and Barry Griffin.

For the occasion the bride's mother wore a beige lace dress with white accessories and a corsage of white roses. The groom's mother wore a pink crepe two piece model with white accessories and a white rose corsage.

Following the ceremony a reception was held in the church dining hall. When the couple left later for a brief wedding trip the bride was wearing a yellow and white lace dress with white accessories and a white rose corsage. They will be at home in Monroe, where both were graduated from Ouachita Parish high school and Mr. McKeithen attended Northeast.

Couple Wed By Candlelight At Crossett

Miss Kathleen Faye Ferrell became the bride of James Coleman Turner, Friday evening, June 16 in the Presbyterian Church at Crossett. Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Howard E. Ferrell and Mr. and Mrs. Drew J. Turner, all of Crossett.

White tapers in branched candelabra and floor baskets of shasta daisies formed a background setting for the ceremony at 7 p.m. performed by the Rev. Robert Lee McLeod Jr. Candles were lighted by George Howard Ferrell, brother of the bride and Larry Glenn Jordan during an organ prelude by Mrs. R. H. Hudgens, who also accompanied the soloist, R. H. Hudgens. Joe Ferrell, also a brother of the bride, was ring bearer.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a floor length gown of white silk crepe fashioned on princess lines with a yoke and bell sleeves of Alencon lace. A panel of the lace fell from the yoke back to a brush train. Her bouffant shoulder length veil of illusion was held in place by a tiara of seed pearls. She carried a cascade bouquet of Shasta daisies.

Miss Judith Jean Ferrell, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. She wore a full length yellow linen dress designed with the same lines of the bride's gown. Her headpiece was a cluster of daisies on a yellow bow which held a pouf of matching tulle. Miss Laura Beth Stone, flower girl, was in an identical dress and carried a basket of daisies. Her headpiece was a cluster of yellow ribbon which fell into streamers with a daisy at the end of each.

Dennis Bruce Turner attended his brother as best man and ushers were Buddy Kelly and Wayne Rhodes of Pine Bluff, Ark.

A reception followed in Fellowship Hall of the church. The bride's table was centered with Shasta daisies arranged in a footed silver bowl flanked by branched silver candelabra holding white tapers. Serving were Mrs. Carol Byrd, Miss Sheilla Ezelle and Miss Mary Cowen of McGehee. Miss Diane Turner of West Memphis, presided at the bride's book.

RATING GUIDE: A (adults), AMY (adults and mature young people), AYC (adults, young people and children), and C (especially for children, accompanied by adults). When no rating is available on foreign imports, etc., a listing of NRA will indicate "No Rating Available." Ratings are compiled from listings in The Green Sheet of the Film Estimate Board and from Parents Magazine.

EASTGATE

JIM

Today through Tuesday: "Double Trouble," with Elivs Presley — AYC. A naive 17-year-old heiress falls in love with singer Elvis and follows him as he travels around Europe to nightclub engagements.

Wednesday through Saturday: "The Absent-Minded Professor," with Fred MacMurry — AYC. Every zany possibility of "flubber," (flying rubber) is exploited in Walt Disney film about professor who discovers magic stuff that bounces into a Pentagon squabble. Also showing: "The Shaggy Dog," with Tommy Kirk—AYC. Scientifically curious teenager tries one too many tricks and is turned into a dog, to the consternation of his family and the discomfort of spies who discuss nefarious plans in front of seemingly sleepy canine.

JOY DRIVE-IN

Today through Wednesday: "Georgy Girl," with Lynn Redgrave and James Mason — A. Offbeat English comedy in which homely Georgy takes on responsibilities as wife and mother when her attractive, callous roommate weds. Also showing: "Born Free," with Virginia McKenna and Bill Travers — AYC. Joy Adamson's world wide best-seller, the true story of Elsa the lioness, has been faithfully brought to the screen in this charming, poignant and pictorially beautiful production.

Thursday through Saturday: "One Million Eyes of Sumuru," with Frankie Avalon and Shirley Eaton — NRA. Also showing: "Psycho-Circus," with Christopher Lee an Leo Genn — A. Missing loot from a robbery as well as the mastermind behind it are traced by a police inspector to a local circus in this British thriller.

PARAMOUNT

Today through Thursday: "The War Wagon," with John Wayne and Kirk Douglas — AMY. An action-loaded Western about five men who capture an impregnable horse-drawn steel fortress on wheels carrying half a million dollars in gold.

Starting Friday: "Hurry Sundown," with Burgess Meredith and Michael Caine — A. Based on the best-selling novel by K. B. Gilden, this is the story of the economic and racial tensions confronting the South immediately following World War II. Coming soon: "El Dorado," with John Wayne and Robert Mitchum.

RIALTO

Now showing: "Eight on the Lam," with Bob Hope and Phyllis Diller — AYC. This pleasant little slapstick comedy tells the story of a man who becomes suspect in a bank fraud when he finds $10,000 cash in a parking lot. Coming soon: "You Only Live Twice," with Sean Connery as James Bond.

STAR DRIVE-IN

Sunday through Tuesday: "Who's Afaird of Virginia Woolf?" with Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton— A. Gripping screen treatment of Edward Albee's play, complete with liquor and very strong language. Also showing: "Two on a Guillotine," with Connie Stevens and Dean Jones — NRA.

Wednesday through Saturday: "Kwaheri" — NRA. Also showing: "Laine, Jungle Goddess" — NRA.

STRAND

Treat yourself to something different tonight. A fiesta at El Chico. OLE!

Come, now. Isn't it time you broke that tired old dinner routine of steak and potatoes, potatoes and steak, chicken and french fries, french fries and chicken?

Tonight, trot your little tribe down to 1400 Louisville Avenue. Walk into that gaily decorated restaurant that says "El Chico" over the door. Settle down to a delightful adventure in appetite that will make you wonder why you haven't done it before. And before that. And before that.

And don't worry if you can't pronounce some of the delicacies. Just eat — and enjoy. It's fun. It's delicious. It's surprisingly economical. (all you can eat for $1.47!)

For you American-dish-diehards, El Chico has some surprises, too. Fried chicken, of course. Roast beef, naturally. And the best Char-Glo broiled steaks in Monroe, indeed!

But ahhhhhh — that tantalizing El Chico Mexican food!

You may even be tempted to ask for our recipes. Please don't. They've been a closely guarded family secret for over forty years, as well as the reason why El Chico restaurants have been the most popular Mexican dining spots in the country for several generations.

After all, you wouldn't give away your birthright, would you?

Curtain Call

By GAY ULRICH

"Half a Sixpence," though still in the embryo stage, is on its way and set to open July 21. Director Bill Haddad has selected the entire cast and tells us there are as many talented players participating as appeared in "Camelot."

Stop in at rehearsals and you get the same three ring circus atmosphere which was so evident at the auditions.

John Thyhsen, who has consented to act as mucial director for the show, rehearses the chorus on stage with Ronnie Brothers at piano. Next, Mary Louise Buckingham, choreographer for "Sixpence," takes over the stage and begins what's just gotta be a tough job — teaching dance routines to the group, many of whom have recently forsaken everything but the "jerk." However, with their rhythm, grace and enthusiasm, in no time at all they're performing the numbers like old pros.

SOLOISTS BUSY

Lucky Bill has a couple of other strong right arms who know their way around Little Theatre too. That Jack - of - all - trades, Allen Graves, has accepted the job of technical director for the summer, a slot which will certainly make use of all his talents, as well as his even disposition.

Sandra Walker, recently returned to Monroe from her teaching post in Gretna, is resuming her role as Bill's assistant for the summer.

With all these chiefs we're still looking for helpers backstage, primarily to work the lights, so come on out and join the fun — we guarantee you won't be lonesome.

ITEMS NEEDED

Now it's time to send up the flares again. Since "Half a Sixpence" takes place around the turn of the century, we need to locate some authentic clothing, furniture and other times from that period — not necessarily to be worn or used, but to copy; also high button shoes, men's straw hats (boaters), an older model English bicycle and a penny-in-the-slot telescope, or just an old telescope on a tripod. Then we need some wheels, with driver attached, to pick up all these items when the calls start coming in.

Curtain Call

By GAY ULRICH

"Half a Sixpence," though still in the embryo stage, is on its way and set to open July 21. Director Bill Haddad has selected the entire cast and tells us there are as many talented players participating as appeared in "Camelot."

Stop in at rehearsals and you get the same three ring circus atmosphere which was so evident at the auditions.

John Thyhsen, who has consented to act as mucial director for the show, rehearses the chorus on stage with Ronnie Brothers at piano. Next, Mary Louise Buckingham, choreographer for "Sixpence," takes over the stage and begins what's just gotta be a tough job — teaching dance routines to the group, many of whom have recently forsaken everything but the "jerk." However, with their rhythm, grace and enthusiasm, in no time at all they're performing the numbers like old pros.

SOLOISTS BUSY

Lucky Bill has a couple of other strong right arms who know their way around Little Theatre too. That Jack - of - all - trades, Allen Graves, has accepted the job of technical director for the summer, a slot which will certainly make use of all his talents, as well as his even disposition.

Sandra Walker, recently returned to Monroe from her teaching post in Gretna, is resuming her role as Bill's assistant for the summer.

With all these chiefs we're still looking for helpers backstage, primarily to work the lights, so come on out and join the fun — we guarantee you won't be lonesome.

ITEMS NEEDED

Now it's time to send up the flares again. Since "Half a Sixpence" takes place around the turn of the century, we need to locate some authentic clothing, furniture and other times from that period — not necessarily to be worn or used, but to copy; also high button shoes, men's straw hats (boaters), an older model English bicycle and a penny-in-the-slot telescope, or just an old telescope on a tripod. Then we need some wheels, with driver attached, to pick up all these items when the calls start coming in.

House's Major Living Area Centered Around Courtyard

By ANDY LANG

Increasing interest in the atrium as a device to create indoor vistas prompted architect Herman H. York to submit a house based upon a theme of indoor living with the outdoors at every turn.

The atrium, a kind of centrally located courtyard open to the sky, is sheathed in this case on three sides with glass, permitting a garden view from every major living area in the house. The atrium is immediately visible on moving from the covered front entry into the gallery-type foyer.

Toward the front of the house, with a large stone fireplace as the dominating architectural feature, the living room is placed down two risers to give the illusion of a "conversation pit" 19'4" by 12' 4". Glass in three directions makes this a cheerful, well-ventilated living area, with a direct view of the outdoor garden. Beyond, the dining room looks over the atrium, with both tied together with flagstone floors, a union not possible with typical flooring materials, since flagstone is not affected by the elements.

A full study of this architect-designed House of the Week may be obtained by writing THE HOUSE OF THE WEEK, c-o the Monroe Morning World, Monroe, La., and enclosing 50 cents to cover cost of handling and mailing. Please specify House Plan G-93.

An interesting planning departure is in the breakfast area. It usually is desirable to locate the table near an outside wall, but here it is on the inside because it overlooks the atrium and thus has its own outdoor atmosphere. The kitchen serves the rear terrace through a pair of sliding glass doors, with the sink so located that it can serve as a supervisory site for mother while the children are playing outside.

The rear terrace also is directly connected with the fireplaced family room through sliding glass doors, establishing the entire area as a complete family living complex for indoor and outdoor use.

Behind the two-car-garage and adjoining the kitchen are a laundry, lavatory, mud closet and a small room that can be used as a den, office or study sector. This area can be entered from the kitchen, the garage or through a door at the service walk.

There are three bedrooms at the right side of the house, with one of them very much in the nature of a suite. It has its own bathroom with a stall shower, two walk-in closets, a dressing table and a private solar terrace. A second bathroom is conveniently located in the hall, with a nearby linen closet.

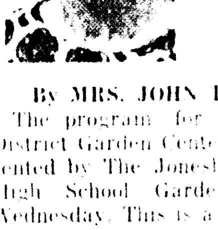
A glance at the floor plan of Design G-93 shows that, even with the atrium occupying a central position, every room in the house can be reached from the front without going through any other room, a maintenance feature appreciated by the housewife.

HANDSOME STYLE

The handsome contemporary style of the exterior uses stone and rough-sawn vertical boards, with an over-all appearance of "ground hugging." Should an owner desire brick instead of stone, a rough texture, in earth-tone hues, is advisable.

The scale of the exterior is heavy enough to warrant the use of large overhangs. The stone chimney at the front dominates the elevation and, although it is the focal point of the view from the outside, it has some visual competition from the double front entrance doors under the covered entry. The roof slope is low, carrying out the contemporary lines of this ranch plan.

While the two-car garage shows the doors at the front, they could be placed at the side if space allows a swing in the driveway. This usually requires 30 feet from the end of the garage to the property line, which would mean a lot of generous size. In any case, this is a house for a family requiring three bedrooms and desiring modern styling, with emphasis on indoor-outdoor living.



Garden Center Notes

Beauty Seen In Designs

By MRS. JOHN TOLAR

The program for the Fifth District Garden Center was presented by The Jonesboro-Hodge High School Gardeners last Wednesday. This is a Federated Unit sponsored by Jonesboro-Hodge Garden Club.

Miss Valerie Barnum who is their counselor, also serves as the State LGCF chairman of High School Gardeners. Aside from these activities Miss Barnum is home economics teacher in Jonesboro - Hodge High School, and during the extended program she has been conducting a flower arranging workshop for high school students.

Miss Bonnie Carson, secretary of Jonesboro - Hodge High School Gardeners, junior in the high school, came with Miss Barnum to present the four lovely designs, plus horticulture on the program.

Janice Kay Walker made the first design using all green foliage. Clipped pine formed the asymmetrical line in a round green pottery bowl. Sasanqua foliage was used as the secondary placement for variety in color, form, and texture. The focal area was established with an interesting rosette made of hollyhock leaves wired together, then taped to a pick and placed in the lower part of the design. This foliage added a contrast of rough texture.

The container was placed on a homemade base, plywood painted black then rubbed with green paint. This is a long-lasting design that would be suitable for home decor on long hot summer days.

Bonnie Carson made the next design, very modern in feeling, using aspidestra foliage for her line in a tall, soft green cylinder vase. Wire taped behind each leaf enabled her to bend them into graceful curves. One leaf extended over the lip of the container and down alongside the vase, achieving a slight diagonal effect. One large yellow dahlia was placed in the focal area with camellia foliage as a background. The design was featured on a thick round black wooden base, formerly the top of a kitchen stool.

Cheryle Porter made a fluid crescent of eucalyptus branches in an oval shaped black ceramic bowl. For striking contrast with the soft gray-green foliage, the design was completed with four open Tropicana roses, three in front and one to the back for added depth near the central section of the crescent design. A few Guava leaves added contrast and background. A wooden base, black with a finish of green, added proper balance.

Bonnie Carson made her second design for the program in two similar containers, sections of lead pipe, tiered to form a single unit. A tall line of gray-green rice paper plant formed the tallest placement. Within this line she placed the large "Dusty Rose" dahlias with buds in graded fashion to form a single line within the two containers.

Guava foliage added accent and filler around the dahlias. The design was placed on a piece of broken marble which harmonized in color with the other materials and added good balance.

Bonnie is quite talented and inspires those around her. I am sure this program will inspire many older club members as well as the younger groups. Bonnie wins blue ribbons because of her talent which is growing more and more. We would love to have many more high school gardener groups get started and have others like Bonnie and her members present our programs for many to enjoy. You may obtain information from the garden center or write to Miss Valerie Barnum, Jonesboro, La., if you wish to get a high school unit started.

Chinch Bug Is Problem

By AUDREY H. DAWSON

June, July and August are the months in which the chinch bug in St. Augustine grass gives gardeners in this area more trouble. So you, Mrs. Gardener, need to keep a close check and be prepared to control the pest as soon as it is noticed.

To determine if the brown spot in St. Augustine is caused by chinch bugs, cut the bottom out of a coffee or shortening can, sink the can into the sod and fill it with water. If chinch bugs are present, they will come to the top in just a few minutes.

They are small brownish to black bugs. To control the chinch bugs, treat 5,000 square feet of area with one of the following mixed in 100 gallons of water: Aspon 6E (6 lbs. gal) E. C. — 1⅛ p pints; Aspon 13 per cent E.C. — 7 pints; Ethion 4 E (4 lbs. gal) E.C. — 2½ pints. Apply Ethion 5 per cent granules dry and water in. Also, Diazinon 2½ per cent granules 4 per cent.

Be sure to remove lawn clippings periodically to prevent build up of thatch.

This is an excellent time to make cuttings of some of your favorite shrubs such as Yew, Viburnum, Gardenia, Pittosporum, Sasanqua, and Photenia. Make cuttings 4 to 6 inches long on current year's growth. Dip cut ends in a root inducing material. Keep the cutting bed warm and moist but well drained.

EQUIPMENT DURABILITY

Do you, Mrs. Homemaker, know about how long your electrical equipment should be expected to give service? Washing machines, automatic and semi-automatic, nine to 11 years; electric clothes dryer, 14 years; refrigerators, 15 to 16 years; freezers, 15 years; ranges, electric and gas, 15 to 16 years; vacuum cleaners, 15 to 18 years; television sets, 11 years. This information was obtained from the Economic Research Division Washington, D. C.

SEWING TODAY'S FABRICS

One of the biggest problems when sewing today's fabric is seam pucker. Some factors that may help you to eliminate the puckering, Mrs. Homemaker, are: selection of pattern, proper adjustment of machine tension pressure and stitch length. Select a pattern with few pieces. Seams on an A - line skirt will be less likely to pucker than those in a skirt cut on straight of grain.

When the stitching gathers the fabric, it may be necessary to loosen the ribbon tension screw (unless you have one of the new machines in which the manual, you received with your machine, advises otherwise. Then adjust the top tension to get a balanced stitch. Test the pressure on the fabric. When two layers of fabric do not travel at the same rate of speed under the press foot, an uneven seamline results. Reduce the amount of pressure on the presser foot if the top layer is being pushed too much as you sew. (The top layer of fabric will be longer when the seam is finished and the under layer of fabric will be puckered.) Usually a slightly longer stitch, 10 - 14 stitches per inch, will help prevent seam puckering. Stitch length will vary with thickness of the fabric, so test before sewing on your garment.

Other good sewing procedures include stitching with a slow even speed, stitching with the direction of the grain, holding the fabric firmly without push or pull, cutting threads at the end of the seam rather than breaking them to avoid pulling a seam.

A THOUGHT

This is a day of praise for Father, and how it sort of grips the heart to think of all he means to us.

Care Tips For Marble Table Top

AP Newsfeatures

With all the advantages of marble for table tops and other purposes, it is breakable and it does stain. But as long as you have all the pieces, a broken marble slab can be made whole again with hardly a trace of the repairs visible. And stains can be removed if you know how to go about it.

For repairing broken marble, you will need some acetone, which is used only for cleaning the edges to be joined; some polyester-resin in powder form; and a liquid catalyst. In purchasing the last two items from a marble dealer, buy the smallest quantity possible, since you will need only two tablespoons of resin and 15 drops of catalyst.

In matching up a batch of cement, the amount of catalyst determines the setting time of the mixture. The two tablespoon 15 drop proportion allows 20 minutes working time. Use a

Wild Berries Ground Cover

By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

"A prophet is not without honor save in his own country." Graham Thomas, the great authority on old roses recommends our wild little false or "Indian" strawberry as a ground cover for English gardens. In our northern states, too, people grow it as a delicate ground cover. Here in the south, however, although this little plant is a beautiful thing, it seems a little too rampant to use unless you are willing to fight the runners that keep coming out into your walks.

It has always seemed to me ironical that this little plant, with its beautiful but tasteless berries was named for the man who was practically the father of our wonderful cultivated strawberries.

Louis XV was presented with the first plant of the modern strawberry by a young man still in his teens about the year 1761.

CROSSED SPECIES

This remarkable young man had been passionately interested in strawberries, and, when he received plants of the Chilean species, he immediately crossed these with the European species and created fine large berries that were the fore-runners of the fruits we so enjoy today. Duchesne also wrote a splendid monograph on the strawberry. The King of France was so impressed with him that he ordered the finest botanical artist of the day to illustrate Duchesne's history.

Our little "Indian strawberry" is not a native plant of the North American Continent but native to India. It has come to us in ships from the Orient and is wild along all the maritime states in this country. The strawberry had already been named Fragaria when Duchesne made his famous cross, so the false strawberry was named Duchesnea.

The European strawberry had been cultivated long before the discovery of America. The monks grew strawberries in their gardens and records of strawberry cultivation go back to at least the eleventh century.

BEAUTIFUL ENGRAVINGS

Some of the most beautiful engravings of strawberry varieties are those done on stone in the earliest transactions of the Horticultural Society of London (later the Royal Horticultural Society). Early paintings of fruits included strawberries in fruit and flower, and, after the work of Duchesne, a great strawberry growing business was set up in France.

Many people think strawberries are worthy of a place in flower gardens. They do not mind removing the runners and keeping the plants in neat condition. The wild plants in our woods like to grow on pine needles, and some gardeners keep a pine needle mulch underneath their plants.

Chinch Bug Is Problem

By AUDREY H. DAWSON

June, July and August are the months in which the chinch bug in St. Augustine grass gives gardeners in this area more trouble. So you, Mrs. Gardener, need to keep a close check and be prepared to control the pest as soon as it is noticed.

To determine if the brown spot in St. Augustine is caused by chinch bugs, cut the bottom out of a coffee or shortening can, sink the can into the sod and fill it with water. If chinch bugs are present, they will come to the top in just a few minutes.

They are small brownish to black bugs. To control the chinch bugs, treat 5,000 square feet of area with one of the following mixed in 100 gallons of water: Aspon 6E (6 lbs. gal) E. C. — 1⅛ p pints; Aspon 13 per cent E.C. — 7 pints; Ethion 4 E (4 lbs. gal) E.C. — 2½ pints. Apply Ethion 5 per cent granules dry and water in. Also, Diazinon 2½ per cent granules 4 per cent.

Be sure to remove lawn clippings periodically to prevent build up of thatch.

This is an excellent time to make cuttings of some of your favorite shrubs such as Yew, Viburnum, Gardenia, Pittosporum, Sasanqua, and Photenia. Make cuttings 4 to 6 inches long on current year's growth. Dip cut ends in a root inducing material. Keep the cutting bed warm and moist but well drained.

EQUIPMENT DURABILITY

Do you, Mrs. Homemaker, know about how long your electrical equipment should be expected to give service? Washing machines, automatic and semi-automatic, nine to 11 years; electric clothes dryer, 14 years; refrigerators, 15 to 16 years; freezers, 15 years; ranges, electric and gas, 15 to 16 years; vacuum cleaners, 15 to 18 years; television sets, 11 years. This information was obtained from the Economic Research Division Washington, D. C.

SEWING TODAY'S FABRICS

One of the biggest problems when sewing today's fabric is seam pucker. Some factors that may help you to eliminate the puckering, Mrs. Homemaker, are: selection of pattern, proper adjustment of machine tension pressure and stitch length. Select a pattern with few pieces. Seams on an A - line skirt will be less likely to pucker than those in a skirt cut on straight of grain.

When the stitching gathers the fabric, it may be necessary to loosen the ribbon tension screw (unless you have one of the new machines in which the manual, you received with your machine, advises otherwise. Then adjust the top tension to get a balanced stitch. Test the pressure on the fabric. When two layers of fabric do not travel at the same rate of speed under the press foot, an uneven seamline results. Reduce the amount of pressure on the presser foot if the top layer is being pushed too much as you sew. (The top layer of fabric will be longer when the seam is finished and the under layer of fabric will be puckered.) Usually a slightly longer stitch, 10 - 14 stitches per inch, will help prevent seam puckering. Stitch length will vary with thickness of the fabric, so test before sewing on your garment.

Other good sewing procedures include stitching with a slow even speed, stitching with the direction of the grain, holding the fabric firmly without push or pull, cutting threads at the end of the seam rather than breaking them to avoid pulling a seam.

Care Tips For Marble Table Top

AP Newsfeatures

With all the advantages of marble for table tops and other purposes, it is breakable and it does stain. But as long as you have all the pieces, a broken marble slab can be made whole again with hardly a trace of the repairs visible. And stains can be removed if you know how to go about it.

For repairing broken marble, you will need some acetone, which is used only for cleaning the edges to be joined; some polyester-resin in powder form; and a liquid catalyst. In purchasing the last two items from a marble dealer, buy the smallest quantity possible, since you will need only two tablespoons of resin and 15 drops of catalyst.

In matching up a batch of cement, the amount of catalyst determines the setting time of the mixture. The two tablespoon 15 drop proportion allows 20 minutes working time. Use a

Southern Gardener

Wild Berries Ground Cover

By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

"A prophet is not without honor save in his own country." Graham Thomas, the great authority on old roses recommends our wild little false or "Indian" strawberry as a ground cover for English gardens. In our northern states, too, people grow it as a delicate ground cover. Here in the south, however, although this little plant is a beautiful thing, it seems a little too rampant to use unless you are willing to fight the runners that keep coming out into your walks.

It has always seemed to me ironical that this little plant, with its beautiful but tasteless berries was named for the man who was practically the father of our wonderful cultivated strawberries.

Louis XV was presented with the first plant of the modern strawberry by a young man still in his teens about the year 1761.

CROSSED SPECIES

This remarkable young man had been passionately interested in strawberries, and, when he received plants of the Chilean species, he immediately crossed these with the European species and created fine large berries that were the fore-runners of the fruits we so enjoy today. Duchesne also wrote a splendid monograph on the strawberry. The King of France was so impressed with him that he ordered the finest botanical artist of the day to illustrate Duchesne's history.

Our little "Indian strawberry" is not a native plant of the North American Continent but native to India. It has come to us in ships from the Orient and is wild along all the maritime states in this country. The strawberry had already been named Fragaria when Duchesne made his famous cross, so the false strawberry was named Duchesnea.

The European strawberry had been cultivated long before the discovery of America. The monks grew strawberries in their gardens and records of strawberry cultivation go back to at least the eleventh century.

BEAUTIFUL ENGRAVINGS

Some of the most beautiful engravings of strawberry varieties are those done on stone in the earliest transactions of the Horticultural Society of London (later the Royal Horticultural Society). Early paintings of fruits included strawberries in fruit and flower, and, after the work of Duchesne, a great strawberry growing business was set up in France.

Many people think strawberries are worthy of a place in flower gardens. They do not mind removing the runners and keeping the plants in neat condition. The wild plants in our woods like to grow on pine needles, and some gardeners keep a pine needle mulch underneath their plants.

Seminaries Face Hard Decision On Graduates

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

Should a man be ordained to the ministry if he rejects, or is agnostic about, some of the basic tenets of the historic Christian faith?

That may strike you as a far-fetched hypothetical question. But it's a real and agonizing one for deans and professors at many Protestant seminaries.

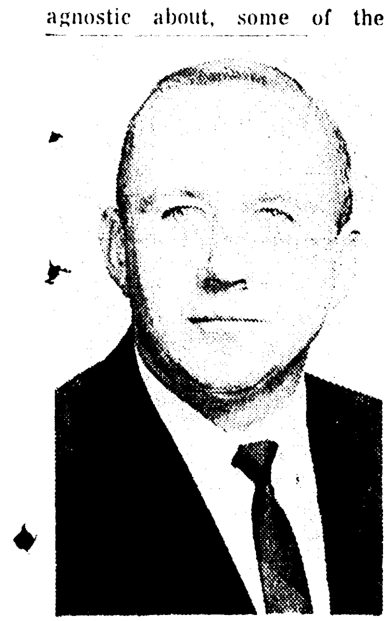
It's their responsibility to certify that a seminary graduate is ready for ordination. This is easy when the candidate is a committed Christian whose faith has been deepened and matured by three years of theological study. Most of the 6,000 seminarians being graduated from accredited Protestant theological schools this month fall into that category.

MANY NOT BELIEVERS

But there is also a substantial minority — in some seminaries, teachers say it includes more than a third of the graduating class—who are not Christian believers in any traditional sense of the term.

They don't contend that God is dead. But neither do they share Jesus' concept of God as one who can be confidently approached in prayer as "Our Father." They feel much more at home speaking of God in abstract, impersonal terms such as "ultimate reality."

They admire Jesus as a great human teacher and want to emulate. His example of unselfish dedication to the service of others. But they do not believe that He was, in any unique way, the son of God. Nor do they believe that He rose from the dead.



THE REV. D. O. FOSTER

Rev. D. Foster Is Evangelist For McClendon

The pastor of the First Baptist Church of Pearland, Tex., the Rev. D. O. Foster, will serve as evangelist for revival services starting Monday and continuing through Sunday, June 25, at McClendon Baptist Church, Downing Pines Rd., West Monroe.

Weekday services will be held at 10 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. The church nersery will be open during all services.

BILLY HELMS, pastor of the Jackson Street Church of Christ, will be guest evangelist for the Bawcomville Church of Christ, 1425 Hinton St., West Monroe, today through Saturday, June 24. Services today will be held at 9:45 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. Evening services will be held daily at 7:30.

Church To Honor Minister, Family

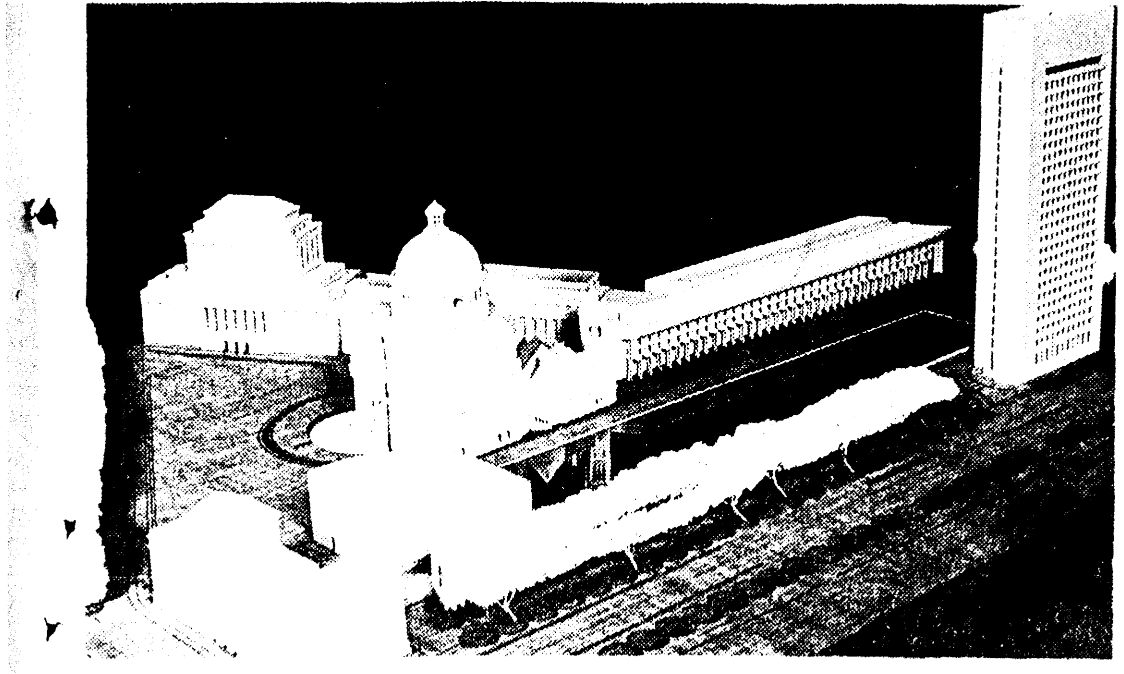
The congregation of Grace Presbyterian Church of Sterlington will honor the Rev. Phillip M. Spencer, pastor, and his family, with a reception today from 3 to 5 p.m. in the fellowship hall.

The Rev. Mr. Spencer has accepted a pastorate in Columbia, S.C. During the past six years, he has served Grace Church which draws its members from Sterlington and Fairbanks areas, and also has served as pastor of Woodlawn Presbyterian Church of Bastrop.

Guest Speakers Are Announced

An elder at Highland Presbyterian Church in West Monroe, James S. Rutledge, will be guest speaker at the 11 a.m. service today at Memorial Presbyterian Church, N. 4th and Mill, West Monroe.

Speaker at the 7 p.m. service today will be the Rev. D. L. O'Neal, Choudrant, executive secretary of Red River Presbytery.



THIS MODEL OF a new church center was displayed at the recent annual meeting in Boston of Christian Scientists. Groundbreaking for the project was held early this month. The center will include three new buildings, a seven-acre church park and plaza, and a 550-car underground garage. The entire complex will cover 15 acres in Boston's Back Bay section, adjoining the Prudential Center. The domed building at center is the existing church edifice known as the Mother Church Extension. Behind this is the Christian Science Publishing House, to which will be added a block-long Colonade Building (long, low structure at right). The projected 26-story Administration Building, which will house the church's office staff, is shown at right foreground. A 668-foot reflecting pool will extend from this building to the arc-shaped Sunday School and Conference Building at left foreground (second structure from left). The building at extreme left is Boston's famed Horticultural Hall.

Confident Living Daily Formula

Bring Out 'Big Self' In You

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

Enrico Caruso on opening night at the opera startled everyone backstage. The great tenor, waiting in the wings for his entrance, suddenly rasped in loud whispers, "Get out of my way! Get out! Get out!" No one was in his way and stagehands and singers nearby got quite a scare. They thought he must be cracking up.

PEALE

Then just as suddenly he was silent and composed. He made his entrance and sang his first aria with such beauty and power the audience stood, cheered and shouted, "Bravo! Bravo!"

Later Caruso explained his off-stage frenzied whispering: "I felt within the big me that wants to sing and knows it can, but it was being stifled by the little me that gets afraid and says I can't. I was simply ordering the little me out of my body." Caruso was at the time a young star on the rise, but it seems he never ceased to have spells of plaguing stage fright and self-doubt. His struggle with the little men continued even when he became one of the world's great operatic tenors.

DYNAMIC, JOYOUS

Enrico Caruso had a tremendously dynamic and joyous personality on stage. I had the good fortune to hear him sing a time or two and was always spellbound by his "voice of gold" and by his vibrant aliveness. What stage presence — 200 people on stage but your attention centered on Caruso. His voice rose powerfully above all others.

Voice quality and personality merged in his singing. And 46 years after his death he is still a best seller on records. According to a recent statement the inquiries about him coming to the Metropolitan Opera Company outnumber the combined mail on all other artists, living and dead.

Yet this extraordinary man said,"I never step on a stage without asking myself whether I will succeed in finishing the opera." Francis Robinson, a biographer, believes that much of Caruso's greatness lay in this very element of doubt and in his merciless demands on himself, his relentless self-appraisal. I think that figures.

We all have a big self, or best self. Also, a little self. The big self, seeking fulfillment, encounters interference by the little self. To be aware of this in yourself is to grasp an important secret of achievement and vitality. Rise to the challenge of overcoming the little self. Release your big self and you will be on your way.

FULL OF POSSIBILITIES

Life is full of bright possibilities and golden opportunities. When your big self has the upperhand its magnetic power attracts more of these to you.

If this is not happening to you consider whether inferiority feelings, failure thoughts and negative thinking may not be repelling your opportunities. The little self appears in many guises! Perhaps a timid self holds you back. This is a common little self manifestation.

If you give in to the little self too long you can lull your mind to sleep so that you no longer hear the big self clamoring for release and achievement. There are many people in this sad state, and if you get them talking about themselves you are likely to find they are not realizing their objectives and desires. They are missing the boat. They know it and are miserable.

Well, no one has to stay frustrated. A person can break free from his little self. And just how? I believe such change comes in part with God's help — but you also have to do your part.

Some perceptive person once wrote: "There is an unseen battlefield in every human heart, where two opposing forces meet and where they seldom part." It is inherent in the scheme of things that we experience this incessant inner battle. What matters is which force, which self, triumphs.

Rufus Jones, Quaker educator and philosopher, pointed out that the word "individual" implies a being who resists being divided. When you throw yourself on the side of your big self and let it take over, you come alive, accomplish more, gain a sense of greater worth and live with joy. The effort which it takes really pays off in satisfaction.

Preaching Emphasized In Catholic Worship

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Preaching, which in the past took a secondary place in the Roman Catholic Mass, is being stressed today as essential to full-gauged worship.

"It's a real change, a recognition of the prime importance of the 'Word' in generating and deepening faith," says the Rev. John Burke of Washington, a Catholic specialist on using the pulpit.

The trend is part of a two-way development in which Catholic worship, long concentrated on the sacraments, is giving more attention to the sermon, while Protestant services, characteristically focused on preaching, are restoring the symbolic aspects.

BALANCING

The tendencies, as liturgical scholars see it, point to a balancing of the two elements in both traditions.

Among Catholics, the accent on preaching was spurred by the Second Vatican Council, which ordered a stop to the casual omission of sermons, and called them the prime means of spreading the gospel.

In its decree on the ministry, the council said: "The preaching of the Word is needed for the very administration of the sacraments. For these are sacraments of the faith and faith is born of the Word and nourished by it."

"No other form of communication can take its place," he said. "Preaching is the primary apostolate. Our apostolate. . .is above all the ministry of the Word."

To implement that evaluation, and to upgrade the caliber of preaching, Roman Catholic seminaries are stepping up training in that field, and various refresher seminars have been held for pastors to polish up their pulpit approach.

WORKSHOP AIM

Notable among such programs is the Catholic University of America's Summer Workshop on Preaching, held annually since 1956. The current 11-day session began Monday. Its aim, says its director, Father Burke, is "to build good preachers."

This isn't just a matter of sharpening up rhetorical technique, he added, but of getting pastors to abandon their "clerical tone" and stereotyped generalities and to start dealing forthrightly with modern men's questions.

He said this demands "bridging the gap" between the sacred mysteries and "the reality of daily life," and tackling frankly the complexities of existence today, including "the fact that religion is one of those complexities."

"Many Catholics have been taught the truth without being given the means to believe it," he said. He added that it is up to preaching to "present that truth in terms so that people actually believe" in the context of the 20th century.

"Ultimately religious proclamation must square with one's own experience of reality, and must take into account the experience of people in their contemporary lives," he said.

"God does not work in a vacuum. He works in the experience of every day life. And preachers must learn to appreciate that fact...that God is in this world, that there really has been an incarnation."

Big Church Center Is Being Built

Work is progressing in Boston on a $15-million Christian Science Church Center, as a part of a 31-acre, $80-million development for the headquarters area of the First Church of Christ, Scientist.

The project was announced in 1965 by the Church's Board of Directors as a necessary step to house expanding activities of the denomination, represented in more than 50 countries. Land clearance was begun in 1966, and foundation work this year.

LAND LEASED

In addition to church uses, a little over half of the land is being leased to private developers for construction of some 3,500 middle-income apartment units, with retail shops, office space, and underground parking.

Heart of the project is a 15-acre, triangular shaped area between Boston's huge Prudential complex and Symphony Hall. Rising in the middle is the original church edifice and its white-domed extension, built between 1894 and 1906, flanked on one side by a block-long publishing house erected in 1934.

These structures form the nucleus for a Church Center that within three years will include a new 26-story Administration Building, a Colonnade Building for audio-visual production and other activities, and a new Sunday School and Conference Building seating 1200 people. Extensive landscaped plazas, a reflecting pool and a large underground garage will complete the Center.

Witnesses To Conduct District Meet

Monroe will be represented at the "Disciple-making" district assembly of Jehovah's Witnesses to be held in Shreveport Thursday through Sunday, June 25.

Six thousand delegates from 18 states are expected to attend the meeting at the Youth Center.

The Monroe congregation will have 108 ministers and their families present for the Bible education program which will consist of talks, experiences and dramatic presentations of Bible events.

Last year in Dallas and Mobile, more than 50,000 were in attendance. Although this year's convention in Shreveport won't be as large, Mr. N. Panasenko, who is presiding minister of the Monroe congregation, said this is due to 49 such assemblies being held this summer in the United States. Other assemblies in the south will be held in Columbus, Ga., Montgomery, Ala., Galveston and Waco, Tex.

The Watchtower Bible Society, which is an international educational agency, arranges for three assemblies each year for each congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses to attend. All sessions are open to the public without charge.

THE REV. TOMMY WILBORN

New Pastor At Central Assembly

The former pastor of Luling, La., Assembly of God Church, the Rev. Tommy Wilborn, has assumed the pastorate of Central Assembly of God Church, Hall at Calypso, Monroe. He will conduct his first service there today.

He had served the Luling Church for five years. Previously he had served as pastor of Swartz Assembly of God Church, and was Christ Ambassador director for the Monroe Section five years ago. While at Luling in the Raceland Section, he served as sectional board member and as Christ Ambassador for the section.

Originally from Port Lavaca, Tex., he has been in the ministry for about 13 years. He is married. The Wilborns have two girls and one boy and reside at 509 Calypso.

He and his wife attended Southwestern Bible School in Waxahachie, Tex.

The regular schedule for church services and activities includes:

Sunday Bible school, 9:45 a.m.; worship, 11 a.m.; youth service, 6:30 p.m.; worship service, 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, Family night, 7:30 p.m.

Rev. Rowland To Preach At Grace Today

The Rev. William P. Rowland, native of Monroe, and former member of Grace Episcopal Church, will be the preacher at the 9:30 a.m. services today at Grace Church.

He is the son of Mrs. Ed Rowland, 507 Glenmar Ave., and the late Mr. Rowland. A graduate of the Ouachita Parish School System, he attended Seabury, Weston Theological School, Evanston, Ill., and was ordained into the ministry in 1958.

He has served as vicar of Trinity Church, St. James, Mo., and as assistant rector of St. Andrew's Episcopal Church, Kansas City, Mo., prior to assuming duties in Las Vegas.

He and his wife, the former Margaret Laetsch, have two children, Mary Elizabeth, 8, and Arthur Michael, 6.

Church Council Seeks Funds For War Victims

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

The World Council of Churches has asked its 200 member denominations to contribute $2 million to an emergency fund to aid victims of the Mideast war.

The council, which includes most of the world's major Protestant and orthodox bodies, said the money will be used in "compassionate work among distressed of all nationalities and religions in every country affected by the conflict."

The Rev. Dr. Marshal L. Scott, chairman of the United Presbyterian Church's commission on religion and race, believes that "the real test" of the churches' commitment to racial justice "is just now coming."

Many white church members, who once espoused desegregation in a vague spirit of good will, are now frightened by "black power" and urban rioting, he says.

"It was no distinction for a church to be involved in racial work four years ago, but it takes commitment to stay in it now."

The Protestant magazine "Christian Century" published last week an article which, the editors said, "is likely to become the subject of controversy."

The author, Dr. James P. Carse, asserts that the church should not only condone but "by every reasonable means encourage marriage between persons of different races."

Dr. Carse, a religion instructor at New York University, argues that interracial marriage can do more than any number of civil rights laws to break down barriers of mutual prejudice and hostility between whites and Negroes.

He supports this thesis with the observation that "the one area in America where interracial marriage has been frequent—Hawaii—is also the area in which racial prejudice is least in evidence."

He says the argument most frequently made against interracial marriage is that "the children of such unions will experience considerable hardship and disadvantage."

The disadvantages visited upon such children arise not out of their 'mixed' parentage but out of their being 'Negro.' If the church is to be consistent it cannot single out the children of interracial marriages as victims of cruelty. The church must be concerned for everyone who suffers any kind of injustice."

The new statement of doctrine known as "the Confession of 1967," has attracted favorable comment from a prominent Catholic theologian.

Fr. John B. Sheerin, C.S.P., editor of the Catholic World, said he is "impressed by its close correspondence to Catholic belief."

"True, there are differences," he said, one of the biggest being that the Presbyterian document does not acknowledge the authority of the Pope.

"In general, however, we are surprised to find so many similarities rather than differences in Catholic and Presbyterian teaching."

Specifically, he said the Confession's statements about the Bible, which some Protestant fundamentalists protested as too weak, "are not very far from the Catholic teaching on the scriptures."

The Presbyterian statement says that the Bible, while given under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, is nevertheless written in "the words of men, conditioned "the words of men, conditioned by the language, thought forms and literary fashions of the places and times at which they were written."

THE REV. JOHN REYNAUD

Rev. Reynaud New Pastor At Highland

The pastor of the First Baptist Church of Port Acres, Port Arthur, Tex., since August, 1963, the Rev. John W. Reynaud, will assume duties today as pastor of Highland Baptist Church, Arkansas Rd., West Monroe.

He succeeds the Rev. Filer Seal, who retired from the pastorate at Highland Church earlier this month.

A native of Alexandria, La., he is 44. He was called to preach in Sept., 1947. He pastored churches in Winn, Sabine, and Catahoula parishes. His last Louisiana pastorate was at Baptist Temple Church in Alexandria.

STUDY BACKGROUND

He studied at Louisiana College and New Orleans Baptist Theological Seminary.

The Rev. Mr. Reynaud is married to the former Billie Fae Ryder. They have two daughters, Jeanne Ann, 18, a student at Port Arthur Business College, and Janet Lee, 15, a 10th grader.

Missions Tour Slated By Baptists

JONESVILLE (Special) — A south Louisiana Baptist Cooperative Program missions tour is planned and is being sponsored by the Woman's Missionary unions of Ouachita, LaSalle and Delta associations, according to the Rev. Walter G. Barnard Sr., field secretary, of Jonesville.

The dates are July 13 - 14, Thursday and Friday, with men and young people being invited to make this tour with the ladies. On Thursday visits will be made to the Southern Baptist Home Mission Centers in New Orleans, which includes Sellers Home for unwed mothers and adoption center, Rachel Sims Mission, Men's Rescue Mission, Carver Negro Center and other Home Mission Centers.

Also the group will see the Southern Baptist Hospital and the New Orleans Baptist Theological Seminary. A visit to historic French Market and to Ponchartrain Beach are planned also. The Rev. Charles McCullin is the New Orleans Baptist Mission Center director.

OTHER VISITS

On Friday the group will visit in the area of City Price, Buras, Louisiana Baptist mission points, Triumph, Venice, Point La Hache, Davant and Reggio. The Rev. Carl E. Conrad, state director missions secretary, will tour guide for the state mission points.

Full details concerning itinerary and cost have been mailed to the pastors and W.M.U. presidents in the local churches. An advanced reservation fee of $3 which will apply on transportation is required. Those in Ouachita association may make advanced reservations with Mrs. G. O. McGuffee, Harrisonburg, association W.M.U. president.

The group will leave by chartered Trailways Thursday morning, July 13, spend the night in New Orleans and return home Friday night, July 14.

MY ANSWER

By BILLY GRAHAM

I am desperate. All my life I have been a self-centered, deceitful, vindictive person. Consequently, I have few friends, and even my relatives have no respect for me. Is there any way I can make amends? I have a few years left. Please answer in the newspaper. D. C.

You sound to me like a good candidate for Christian conversion. Jesus said: "If any man would come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me." Your life, according to your letter, has been self-centered, it needs to be God-centered, and "other-people" centered. This change of attitude is a complete reversal of what you have been. It is up to you to shift the center of your life from self ("deny yourself") to Christ and others. Then, the Lord said you must "take up your cross." The Christian life is one of cross-bearing and it means that you are willing to bear the reproach of Christ's cross, to accept His deed upon Calvary as atonement for your sins, and to walk in gratitude to God to live for the One who died for you. And then last, to "follow" Him. This means that Christ becomes your model of Christian service and love, that you love as He loved and walk as He walked. The Bible says: "He that saith he abideth in Him, ought himself also so to walk, even as he walked." (I John 2:6.) How to do this? Repent of your selfish life, and accept Christ's new life for you.

But there is also a substantial minority — in some seminaries, teachers say it includes more than a third of the graduating class—who are not Christian believers in any traditional sense of the term.

They don't contend that God is dead. But neither do they share Jesus' concept of God as one who can be confidently approached in prayer as "Our Father." They feel much more at home speaking of God in abstract, impersonal terms such as "ultimate reality."

They admire Jesus as a great human teacher and want to emulate. His example of unselfish dedication to the service of others. But they do not believe that He was, in any unique way, the son of God. Nor do they believe that He rose from the dead.

THE REV. D. O. FOSTER

Rev. D. Foster Is Evangelist For McClendon

The pastor of the First Baptist Church of Pearland, Tex., the Rev. D. O. Foster, will serve as evangelist for revival services starting Monday and continuing through Sunday, June 25, at McClendon Baptist Church, Downing Pines Rd., West Monroe.

Weekday services will be held at 10 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. The church nersery will be open during all services.

BILLY HELMS, pastor of the Jackson Street Church of Christ, will be guest evangelist for the Bawcomville Church of Christ, 1425 Hinton St., West Monroe, today through Saturday, June 24. Services today will be held at 9:45 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. Evening services will be held daily at 7:30.

Church To Honor Minister, Family

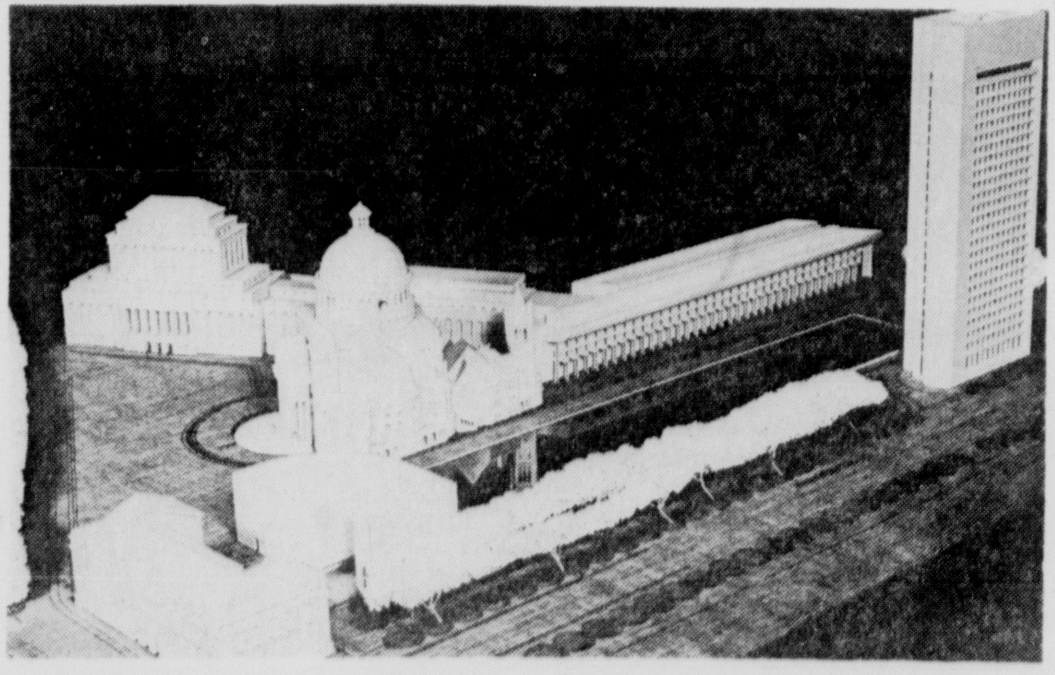
The congregation of Grace Presbyterian Church of Sterlington will honor the Rev. Phillip M. Spencer, pastor, and his family, with a reception today from 3 to 5 p.m. in the fellowship hall.

The Rev. Mr. Spencer has accepted a pastorate in Columbia, S.C. During the past six years, he has served Grace Church which draws its members from Sterlington and Fairbanks areas, and also has served as pastor of Woodlawn Presbyterian Church of Bastrop.

Guest Speakers Are Announced

An elder at Highland Presbyterian Church in West Monroe, James S. Rutledge, will be guest speaker at the 11 a.m. service today at Memorial Presbyterian Church, N. 4th and Mill, West Monroe.

Speaker at the 7 p.m. service today will be the Rev. D. L. O'Neal, Choudrant, executive secretary of Red River Presbytery.



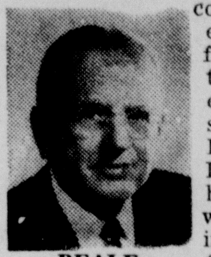
THIS MODEL OF a new church center was displayed at the recent annual meeting in Boston of Christian Scientists. Groundbreaking for the project was held early this month. The center will include three new buildings, a seven-acre church park and plaza, and a 550-car underground garage. The entire complex will cover 15 acres in Boston's Back Bay section, adjoining the Prudential Center. The domed building at center is the existing church edifice known as the Mother Church Extension. Behind this is the Christian Science Publishing House, to which will be added a block-long Colonade Building (long, low structure at right). The projected 26-story Administration Building, which will house the church's office staff, is shown at right foreground. A 668-foot reflecting pool will extend from this building to the arc-shaped Sunday School and Conference Building at left foreground (second structure from left). The building at extreme left is Boston's famed Horticultural Hall.

Confident Living Daily Formula

Bring Out 'Big Self' In You

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

Enrico Caruso on opening night at the opera startled everyone backstage. The great tenor, waiting in the wings for his entrance, suddenly rasped in loud whispers, "Get out of my way! Get out! Get out!" No one was in his way and stagehands and singers nearby got quite a scare. They thought he must be cracking up.



PEALE

Then just as suddenly he was silent and composed. He made his entrance and sang his first aria with such beauty and power the audience stood, cheered and shouted, "Bravo! Bravo!"

Later Caruso explained his off-stage frenzied whispering: "I felt within the big me that wants to sing and knows it can, but it was being stifled by the little me that gets afraid and says I can't. I was simply ordering the little me out of my body." Caruso was at the time a young star on the rise, but it seems he never ceased to have spells of plaguing stage fright and self-doubt. His struggle with the little men continued even when he became one of the world's great operatic tenors.

DYNAMIC, JOYOUS

Enrico Caruso had a tremendously dynamic and joyous personality on stage. I had the good fortune to hear him sing a time or two and was always spellbound by his "voice of gold" and by his vibrant aliveness. What stage presence — 200 people on stage but your attention centered on Caruso. His voice rose powerfully above all others.

Voice quality and personality merged in his singing. And 46 years after his death he is still a best seller on records. According to a recent statement the inquiries about him coming to the Metropolitan Opera Company outnumber the combined mail on all other artists, living and dead.

Yet this extraordinary man said, "I never step on a stage without asking myself whether I will succeed in finishing the opera." Francis Robinson, a biographer, believes that much of Caruso's greatness lay in this very element of doubt and in his merciless demands on himself, his relentless self-appraisal. I think that figures.

We all have a big self, or best self. Also, a little self. The big self, seeking fulfillment, encounters interference by the little self. To be aware of this in yourself is to grasp an important secret of achievement and vitality. Rise to the challenge of overcoming the little self. Release your big self and you will be on your way.

FULL OF POSSIBILITIES

Life is full of bright possibilities and golden opportunities. When your big self has the upperhand its magnetic power attracts more of these to you.

If this is not happening to you consider whether inferiority feelings, failure thoughts and negative thinking may not be repelling your opportunities. The little self appears in many guises! Perhaps a timid self holds you back. This is a common little self manifestation.

If you give in to the little self too long you can lull your mind to sleep so that you no longer hear the big self clamoring for release and achievement. There are many people in this sad state, and if you get them talking about themselves you are likely to find they are not realizing their objectives and desires. They are missing the boat. They know it and are miserable.

Well, no one has to stay frustrated. A person can break free from his little self. And just how? I believe such change comes in part with God's help — but you also have to do your part.

Some perceptive person once wrote: "There is an unseen battlefield in every human heart, where two opposing forces meet and where they seldom part." It is inherent in the scheme of things that we experience this incessant inner battle. What matters is which force, which self, triumphs.

Rufus Jones, Quaker educator and philosopher, pointed out that the word "individual" implies a being who resists being divided. When you throw yourself on the side of your big self and let it take over, you come alive, accomplish more, gain a sense of greater worth and live with joy. The effort which it takes really pays off in satisfaction.

Preaching Emphasized In Catholic Worship

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Preaching, which in the past took a secondary place in the Roman Catholic Mass, is being stressed today as essential to full-gauged worship.

"It's a real change, a recognition of the prime importance of the 'Word' in generating and deepening faith," says the Rev. John Burke of Washington, a Catholic specialist on using the pulpit.

The trend is part of a two-way development in which Catholic worship, long concentrated on the sacraments, is giving more attention to the sermon, while Protestant services, characteristically focused on preaching, are restoring the symbolic aspects.

BALANCING

The tendencies, as liturgical scholars see it, point to a balancing of the two elements in both traditions.

Among Catholics, the accent on preaching was spurred by the Second Vatican Council, which ordered a stop to the casual omission of sermons, and called them the prime means of spreading the gospel.

In its decree on the ministry, the council said: "The preaching of the Word is needed for the very administration of the sacraments. For these are sacraments of the faith and faith is born of the Word and nourished by it."

"No other form of communication can take its place," he said. "Preaching is the primary apostolate. Our apostolate. . .is above all the ministry of the Word."

To implement that evaluation, and to upgrade the caliber of preaching, Roman Catholic seminaries are stepping up training in that field, and various refresher seminars have been held for pastors to polish up their pulpit approach.

WORKSHOP AIM

Notable among such programs is the Catholic University of America's Summer Workshop on Preaching, held annually since 1956. The current 11-day session began Monday. Its aim, says its director, Father Burke, is "to build good preachers."

This isn't just a matter of sharpening up rhetorical technique, he added, but of getting pastors to abandon their "clerical tone" and stereotyped generalities and to start dealing forthrightly with modern men's questions.

He said this demands "bridging the gap" between the sacred mysteries and "the reality of daily life," and tackling frankly the complexities of existence today, including "the fact that religion is one of those complexities."

"Many Catholics have been taught the truth without being given the means to believe it," he said. He added that it is up to preaching to "present that truth in terms so that people actually believe" in the context of the 20th century.

"Ultimately religious proclamation must square with one's own experience of reality, and must take into account the experience of people in their contemporary lives," he said.

"God does not work in a vacuum. He works in the experience of every day life. And preachers must learn to appreciate that fact...that God is in this world, that there really has been an incarnation."

Big Church Center Is Being Built

Work is progressing in Boston on a $15-million Christian Science Church Center, as a part of a 31-acre, $80-million development for the headquarters area of the First Church of Christ, Scientist.

The project was announced in 1965 by the Church's Board of Directors as a necessary step to house expanding activities of the denomination, represented in more than 50 countries. Land clearance was begun in 1966, and foundation work this year.

LAND LEASED

In addition to church uses, a little over half of the land is being leased to private developers for construction of some 3,500 middle-income apartment units, with retail shops, office space, and underground parking.

Heart of the project is a 15-acre, triangular-shaped area between Boston's huge Prudential complex and Symphony Hall. Rising in the middle is the original church edifice and its white-domed extension, built between 1894 and 1906, flanked on one side by a block-long publishing house erected in 1934.

These structures form the nucleus for a Church Center that within three years will include a new 26-story Administration Building, a Colonnade Building for audio-visual production and other activities, and a new Sunday School and Conference Building seating 1200 people. Extensive landscaped plazas, a reflecting pool and a large underground garage will complete the Center.

Witnesses To Conduct District Meet

Monroe will be represented at the "Disciple-making" district assembly of Jehovah's Witnesses to be held in Shreveport, Thursday through Sunday, June 25.

Six thousand delegates from 18 states are expected to attend the meeting at the Youth Center.

The Monroe congregation will have 108 ministers and their families present for the Bible-education program which will consist of talks, experiences and dramatic presentations of Bible events.

Last year in Dallas and Mobile, more than 50,000 were in attendance. Although this year's convention in Shreveport won't be as large, Mr. N. Panasenko, who is presiding minister of the Monroe congregation, said this is due to 49 such assemblies being held this summer in the United States. Other assemblies in the south will be held in Columbus, Ga., Montgomery, Ala., Galveston and Waco, Tex.

The Watchtower Bible Society, which is an international educational agency, arranges for three assemblies each year for each congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses to attend. All sessions are open to the public without charge.

THE REV. TOMMY WILBORN

New Pastor At Central Assembly

The former pastor of Luling, La., Assembly of God Church, the Rev. Tommy Wilborn, has assumed the pastorate of Central Assembly of God Church, Hall at Calypso, Monroe. He will conduct his first service there today.

He had served the Luling Church for five years. Previously he had served as pastor of Swartz Assembly of God Church, and was Christ Ambassador director for the Monroe Section five years ago. While at Luling in the Raceland Section, he served as sectional board member and as Christ Ambassador for the section.

Originally from Port Lavaca, Tex., he has been in the ministry for about 13 years. He is married. The Wilborns have two girls and one boy and reside at 509 Calypso.

He and his wife attended Southwestern Bible School in Waxahachie, Tex.

The regular schedule for church services and activities includes:

Sunday: Bible school, 9:45 a.m.; worship, 11 a.m.; youth service, 6:30 p.m.; worship service, 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, Family night, 7:30 p.m.

Rev. Rowland To Preach At Grace Today

The Rev. William P. Rowland, native of Monroe, and former member of Grace Episcopal Church, will be the preacher at the 9:30 a.m. services today at Grace Church.

He is the son of Mrs. Ed Rowland, 507 Glenmar Ave., and the late Mr. Rowland. A graduate of the Ouachita Parish School System, he attended Seabury, Weston Theological School, Evanston, Ill., and was ordained into the ministry in 1958.

He has served as vicar of Trinity Church, St. James, Mo., and as assistant rector of St. Andrew's Episcopal Church, Kansas City, Mo., prior to assuming duties in Las Vegas.

He and his wife, the former Margaret Laetsch, have two children, Mary Elizabeth, 8, and Arthur Michael, 6.

Church Council Seeks Funds For War Victims

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

The World Council of Churches has asked its 200 member denominations to contribute $2 million to an emergency fund to aid victims of the Mideast war.

The council, which includes most of the world's major Protestant and orthodox bodies, said the money will be used in "compassionate work among distressed of all nationalities and religions in every country affected by the conflict."

The Roman Catholic relief agency, Caritas Internationa, also is raising money to assist war victims.

The Rev. Dr. Marshal L. Scott, chairman of the United Presbyterian Church's commission on religion and race, believes that "the real test" of the churches' commitment to racial justice "is just now coming."

Many white church members, who once espoused desegregation in a vague spirit of good will, are now frightened by "black power" and urban rioting, he says.

"It was no distinction for a church to be involved in racial work four years ago, but it takes commitment to stay in it now."

The Protestant magazine "Christian Century" published last week an article which, the editors said, "is likely to become the subject of controversy."

The author, Dr. James P. Carse, asserts that the church should not only condone but "by every reasonable means encourage marriage between persons of different races."

Dr. Carse, a religion instructor at New York University, argues that interracial marriage can do more than any number of civil rights laws to break down barriers of mutual prejudice and hostility between whites and Negroes.

He supports this thesis with the observation that "the one area in America where interracial marriage has been frequent —Hawaii—is also the area in which racial prejudice is least in evidence."

He says the argument most frequently made against interracial marriage is that "the children of such unions will experience considerable hardship and disadvantage."

The disadvantages visited upon such children arise not out of their 'mixed' parentage but out of their being 'Negro.' If the church is to be consistent it cannot single out the children of interracial marriages as victims of cruelty. The church must be concerned for everyone who suffers any kind of injustice."

The new statement of doctrine known as "the Confession of 1967," has attracted favorable comment from a prominent Catholic theologian.

Fr. John B. Sheerin, C.S.P., editor of the Catholic World, said he is "impressed by its close correspondence to Catholic belief."

"True, there are differences," he said, one of the biggest being that the Presbyterian document does not acknowledge the authority of the Pope.

"In general, however, we are surprised to find so many similarities rather than differences in Catholic and Presbyterian teaching."

Specifically, he said the Confession's statements about the Bible, which some Protestant fundamentalists protested as too weak, "are not very far from the Catholic teaching on the scriptures."

The Presbyterian statement says that the Bible, while given under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, is nevertheless written in "the words of men, conditioned "the words of men, conditioned by the language, thought forms and literary fashions of the places and times at which they were written."

THE REV. JOHN REYNAUD

Rev. Reynaud New Pastor At Highland

The pastor of the First Baptist Church of Port Acres, Port Arthur, Tex., since August, 1963, the Rev. John W. Reynaud, will assume duties today as pastor of Highland Baptist Church, Arkansas Rd., West Monroe.

He succeeds the Rev. Filer Seal, who retired from the pastorate at Highland Church earlier this month.

A native of Alexandria, La., he is 44. He was called to preach in Sept., 1947. He pastored churches in Winn, Sabine, and Catahoula parishes. His last Louisiana pastorate was at Baptist Temple Church in Alexandria.

STUDY BACKGROUND

He studied at Louisiana College and New Orleans Baptist Theological Seminary.

The Rev. Mr. Reynaud is married to the former Billie Fae Ryder. They have two daughters, Jeanne Ann, 18, a student at Port Arthur Business College, and Janet Lee, 15, a 10th grader.

Missions Tour Slated By Baptists

JONESVILLE (Special) — A south Louisiana Baptist Cooperative Program missions tour is planned and is being sponsored by the Woman's Missionary unions of Ouachita, LaSalle and Delta associations, according to the Rev. Walter G. Barnard Sr., field secretary, of Jonesville.

The dates are July 13 - 14, Thursday and Friday, with men and young people being invited to make this tour with the ladies. On Thursday visits will be made to the Southern Batist Home Mission Centers in New Orleans, which includes Sellers Home for unwed mothers and adoption center, Rachel Sims Mission, Men's Rescue Mission, Carver Negro Center and other Home Mission Centers.

Also the group will see the Southern Baptist Hospital and the New Orleans Baptist Theological Seminary. A visit to historic French Market and to Ponchartrain Beach are planned also. The Rev. Charles McCullin is the New Orleans Baptist Mission Center director.

OTHER VISITS

On Friday the group will visit in the area of City Price, Buras, Louisiana Baptist mission points, Triumph, Venice, Point La Hache, Davant, and Reggio. The Rev. Carl E. Conrad, state director missions secretary, will tour guide for the state mission points.

Full details concerning itinerary and cost have been mailed to the pastors and W.M.U. presidents in the local churches. An advanced reservation fee of $3 which will apply on transportation, is required. Those in Ouachita association may make advanced reservations with Mrs. G. O. McGuffee, Harrisonburg, association W.M.U. president.

The group will leave by chartered Trailways Thursday morning, July 13, spend the night in New Orleans, and return home Friday night, July 14.

MY ANSWER

By BILLY GRAHAM

I am desperate. All my life I have been a self-centered, deceitful, vindictive person. Consequently, I have few friends, and even my relatives have no respect for me. Is there any way I can make amends? I have a few years left. Please answer in the newspaper. D. C.

You sound to me like a good candidate for Christian conversion. Jesus said: "If any man would come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me." Your life, according to your letter, has been self-centered, it needs to be God-centered, and "other-people" centered. This change of attitude is a complete reversal of what you have been. It is up to you to shift the center of your life from self ("deny yourself") to Christ and others. Then, the Lord said you must "take up your cross". The Christian life is one of cross-bearing and it means that you are willing to bear the reproach of Christ's cross, to accept His deed upon Calvary as atonement for your sins, and to walk in gratitude to God — to live for the One who died for you. And then last: to "follow" Him. This means that Christ becomes your model of Christian service and love, that you love as He loved, and walk as He walked. The Bible says: "He that sayeth he abideth in Him, ought himself also so to walk, even as he walked." (I John 2:6.) How to do this! Repent of your selfish life, and accept Christ's new life for you.

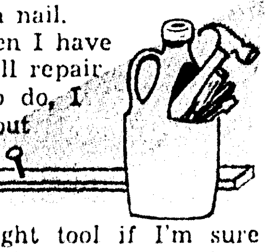
hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:
Here is a hint I haven't seen you print—another use for bleach bottles:

I cut out the upper front half of the bottle, leaving the handle and top intact. Then I stick the tools I use most frequently around the house, such as hammer, pliers, screw driver and wrench, into the opening. I hang this "tool caddy" on the wall of my workshop by just hooking the handle over a nail.



When I have a small repair job to do, I pick out the right tool if I'm sure that it is all I will need, or I take the caddy with me. The tools are easy to carry this way, and I always know where they are.

Dr. David Peete

Now, this is a lulu if I ever heard one!

You can also leave the cap off and stick a long screw driver in the bottle or make a few holes on the other side for small tools. It fits beautifully under the kitchen sink, too.

Heloise

IT'S ON THE CUFF

DEAR HELOISE:
I read your column even though I'm only 10.

Instead of sewing in hems on my brother's trousers, my mother just cuts some iron-on tape into strips with pinking shears. She turns the pants leg inside out and irons the strips onto the top of the trouser hem. It's much easier and quicker.

Betsy Loughran

KITCHEN FIRES

DEAR HELOISE:
My neighbor told me that you said we shouldn't use flour or cornstarch to try to put out a kitchen fire that had started from cooking. Is this true?

Jenny H.

* * *

Hon, you should believe it! First, let's hope that you don't have a fire, but if you do:

Try to remember BAKING SODA . . . (and ladies, it's so inexpensive I don't know why you all don't go out and buy a couple of boxes to have on hand just in case.)

A senior fire inspector told us that when bicarbonate of soda is heated, it produces carbon dioxide gas which excludes the oxygen and extinguishes the fire!

He also said that cornstarch or flour might cause an explosion. They are combustible materials when suspended in the air.

So don't take a chance. Remember . . . BAKING SODA.

Heloise

PUT TO THE RACK

DEAR HELOISE:
Every time I reach into my oven to pull out a rack in order to check a roast or something, I end up either burning my pot holders or, worse yet, my fingers.

After burning myself again the other night, I decided to do something about it: I went to the closet and got a regular wire coat hanger. By cutting it in half, and throwing away the part with the hook, I had a perfect "U" shape left. I bent the two ends under so they looked like claws.

Presto, a handy gadget to hook over that hot rack to gently pull it out.

Judy Wertsch

* * *

And all our thanks to you, Judy, for figuring this one out.

Anybody can push an oven rack back in while it's hot, but it's mighty doggone hard to pull it out.

Heloise

6-18

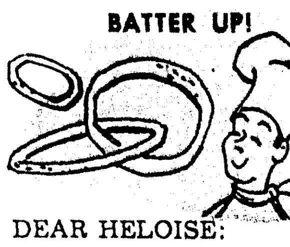
BATTER UP!



DEAR HELOISE:
When I ran a cafe, I used to make the best French-fried onion rings in town.

I dipped the onion rings in a batter made from a prepared pancake mix, and had no measuring or sifting to do.

A. H. B.

GRANDPA'S NECKTIES

DEAR HELOISE:
I am an 83-year-old grandpa. I read your newspaper hints and enjoy them very much.

I have a lot of neckties. When I put them on a coat hanger, they always slipped to the floor. So I tied two wire hangers together at each end and slipped the ties in the slot between the hangers.

The ties can be slipped in and out easily, but there is just enough pressure to hold them in place. No more ties on the floor.

I hook the hanger over the closet rod and remove only the tie I select to wear each time.

Old Gramp

JUST THE TYPE!

DEAR HELOISE:
If you are in need of a name and address label for your identification tag — such as on a suitcase—and a typewriter is not available, cut out and insert the printed name from something you received in the mail.

Mrs. Peterson

SWEET VIOLETS

DEAR HELOISE:
When you have plants, such as African violets, that shouldn't get water on their leaves, a kitchen funnel is great.

Place the funnel between the leaves and pour water into the funnel. You won't have trouble with water running down the glass or getting on the leaves.

Y. Corbett

EAT YOUR SOUP!

DEAR HELOISE:
Have you ever tried putting instant potatoes in soup for babies?

It gives more 'body' to soup and is nourishing, too. Our daughter is starting to feed herself and she likes it this way.

Before, there was more soup on her than in her, but now she gets it all.

Roseltha Solomon

IRONING TRICK

DEAR HELOISE:
When ironing ruffles, lace edgings and small items, I first put a large straight piece on my ironing board (usually a tablecloth or pillowcase) so that I am ironing two things at once.

Mrs. J. W. A.

SAFE BY A YARD

DEAR HELOISE:
If you have a problem keeping little children out of your lower bureau drawers, here's what to do:

Put a yardstick down through the handles of the

Joette Wegeler

* * *

Those little darlings seldom learn to push the yardstick up out of the drawer handles, and all three drawers are too heavy for them to pull out at the same time.

Those little darlings seldom learn to push the yardstick up out of the drawer handles, and all three drawers are too heavy for them to pull out at the same time.

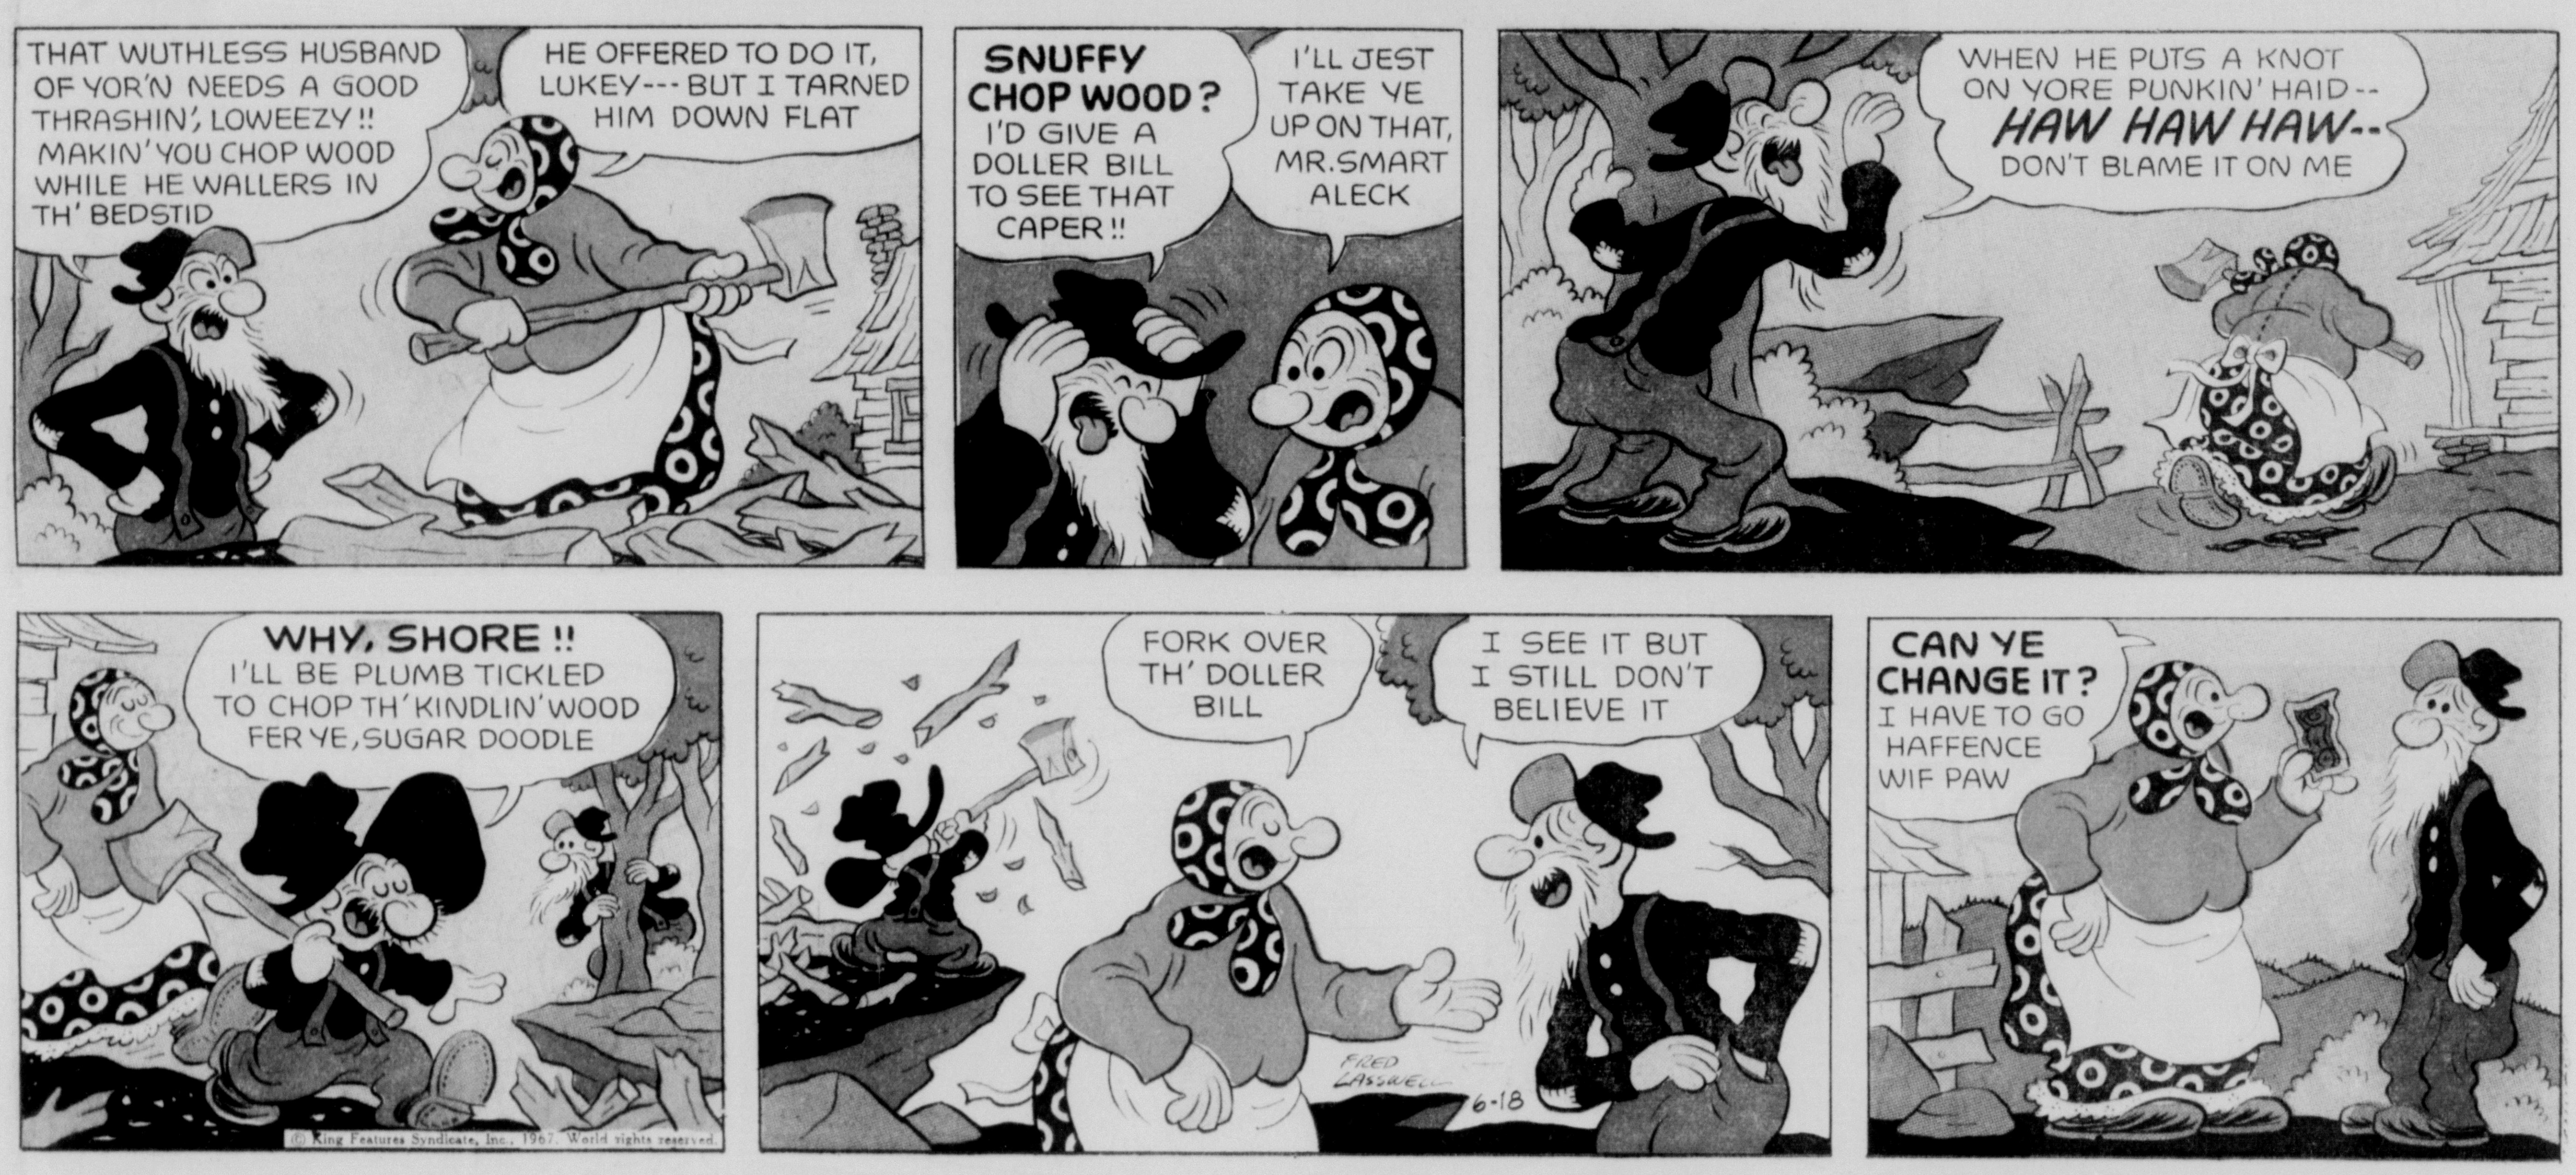
BARNEY GOOGLE and SNUFFY SMITH

by FRED LASSWELL



THAT WUTHLESS HUSBAND OF YOR'N NEEDS A GOOD THRASHIN', LOWEEZY!! MAKIN' YOU CHOP WOOD WHILE HE WALLERS IN TH' BEDSTID
HE OFFERED TO DO IT, LUKEY--- BUT I TARNED HIM DOWN FLAT
SNUFFY CHOP WOOD? I'D GIVE A DOLLER BILL TO SEE THAT CAPER!!
I'LL JEST TAKE YE UP ON THAT, MR. SMART ALECK
WHEN HE PUTS A KNOT ON YORE PUNKIN' HAID-- HAW HAW HAW-- DON'T BLAME IT ON ME
WHY, SHORE!! I'LL BE PLUMB TICKLED TO CHOP TH' KINDLIN' WOOD FER YE, SUGAR DOODLE

SENSING THAT MARY MAY BE A POTENTIAL OBSTACLE TO HER AMBITIONS, VANNA CROY APOLOGIZES...
...YOU WERE RIGHT TO BE SORE! IT'S... IT'S JUST THAT I COULD NEVER TAKE CRITICISM! MY BACK GOES STRAIGHT UP AND I DO SOMETHING STUPID!
IT'S ALL RIGHT, VANNA. FORGET IT.
NO— I'VE BEEN THINKING ABOUT WHAT YOU SAID! ONE'S NAME IS LIKE A FLAG, ISN'T IT?! IT STANDS FOR WHAT YOU ARE... GOOD OR BAD...
WELL, YES— I GUESS THAT'S ABOUT IT...
...AND IF IT STANDS FOR SOMETHING GOOD, YOU FIGHT FOR IT! I GUESS RIGHT NOW, MY FLAG HAS SWASTIKAS ALL OVER IT... HASN'T IT?...
ALL RIGHT. WHAT'S DONE IS DONE. YOU AND I HAVE A TOUGH SCENE TO REHEARSE LATER, SO GET OUT OF HERE AND GET A GOOD LUNCH!
THANK YOU, MISS PERKINS! I'VE LEARNED A VERY VALUABLE LESSON!

PARDON ME, MISS... WOULD YOU KNOW WHERE I COULD FIND JOSHUA PRICE?
HE'S PROBABLY STILL AT LUNCH! SHALL I TRY TO FIND HIM FOR YOU? IS IT VERY IMPORTANT?
OH, NO— NOT AT ALL! I'M MERELY A LOWLY BACKER. I'VE BEEN GIVEN PERMISSION TO SIT HERE QUIETLY AND OBSERVE THE PROCEEDINGS IF I DON'T MISBEHAVE!
...I SEEM TO HAVE AMUSED YOU. HAVE I DONE SOMETHING WRONG ALREADY?
I KNOW I SHOULDN'T GIGGLE ...BUT YOU'VE GOT THIS MASSIVE DIGNITY... LIKE A DUKE OR SOMETHING! I JUST CAN'T IMAGINE YOU MISBEHAVING!
NO... I HAVEN'T BEEN ABLE TO IMAGINE IT EITHER... FOR A LONG TIME...

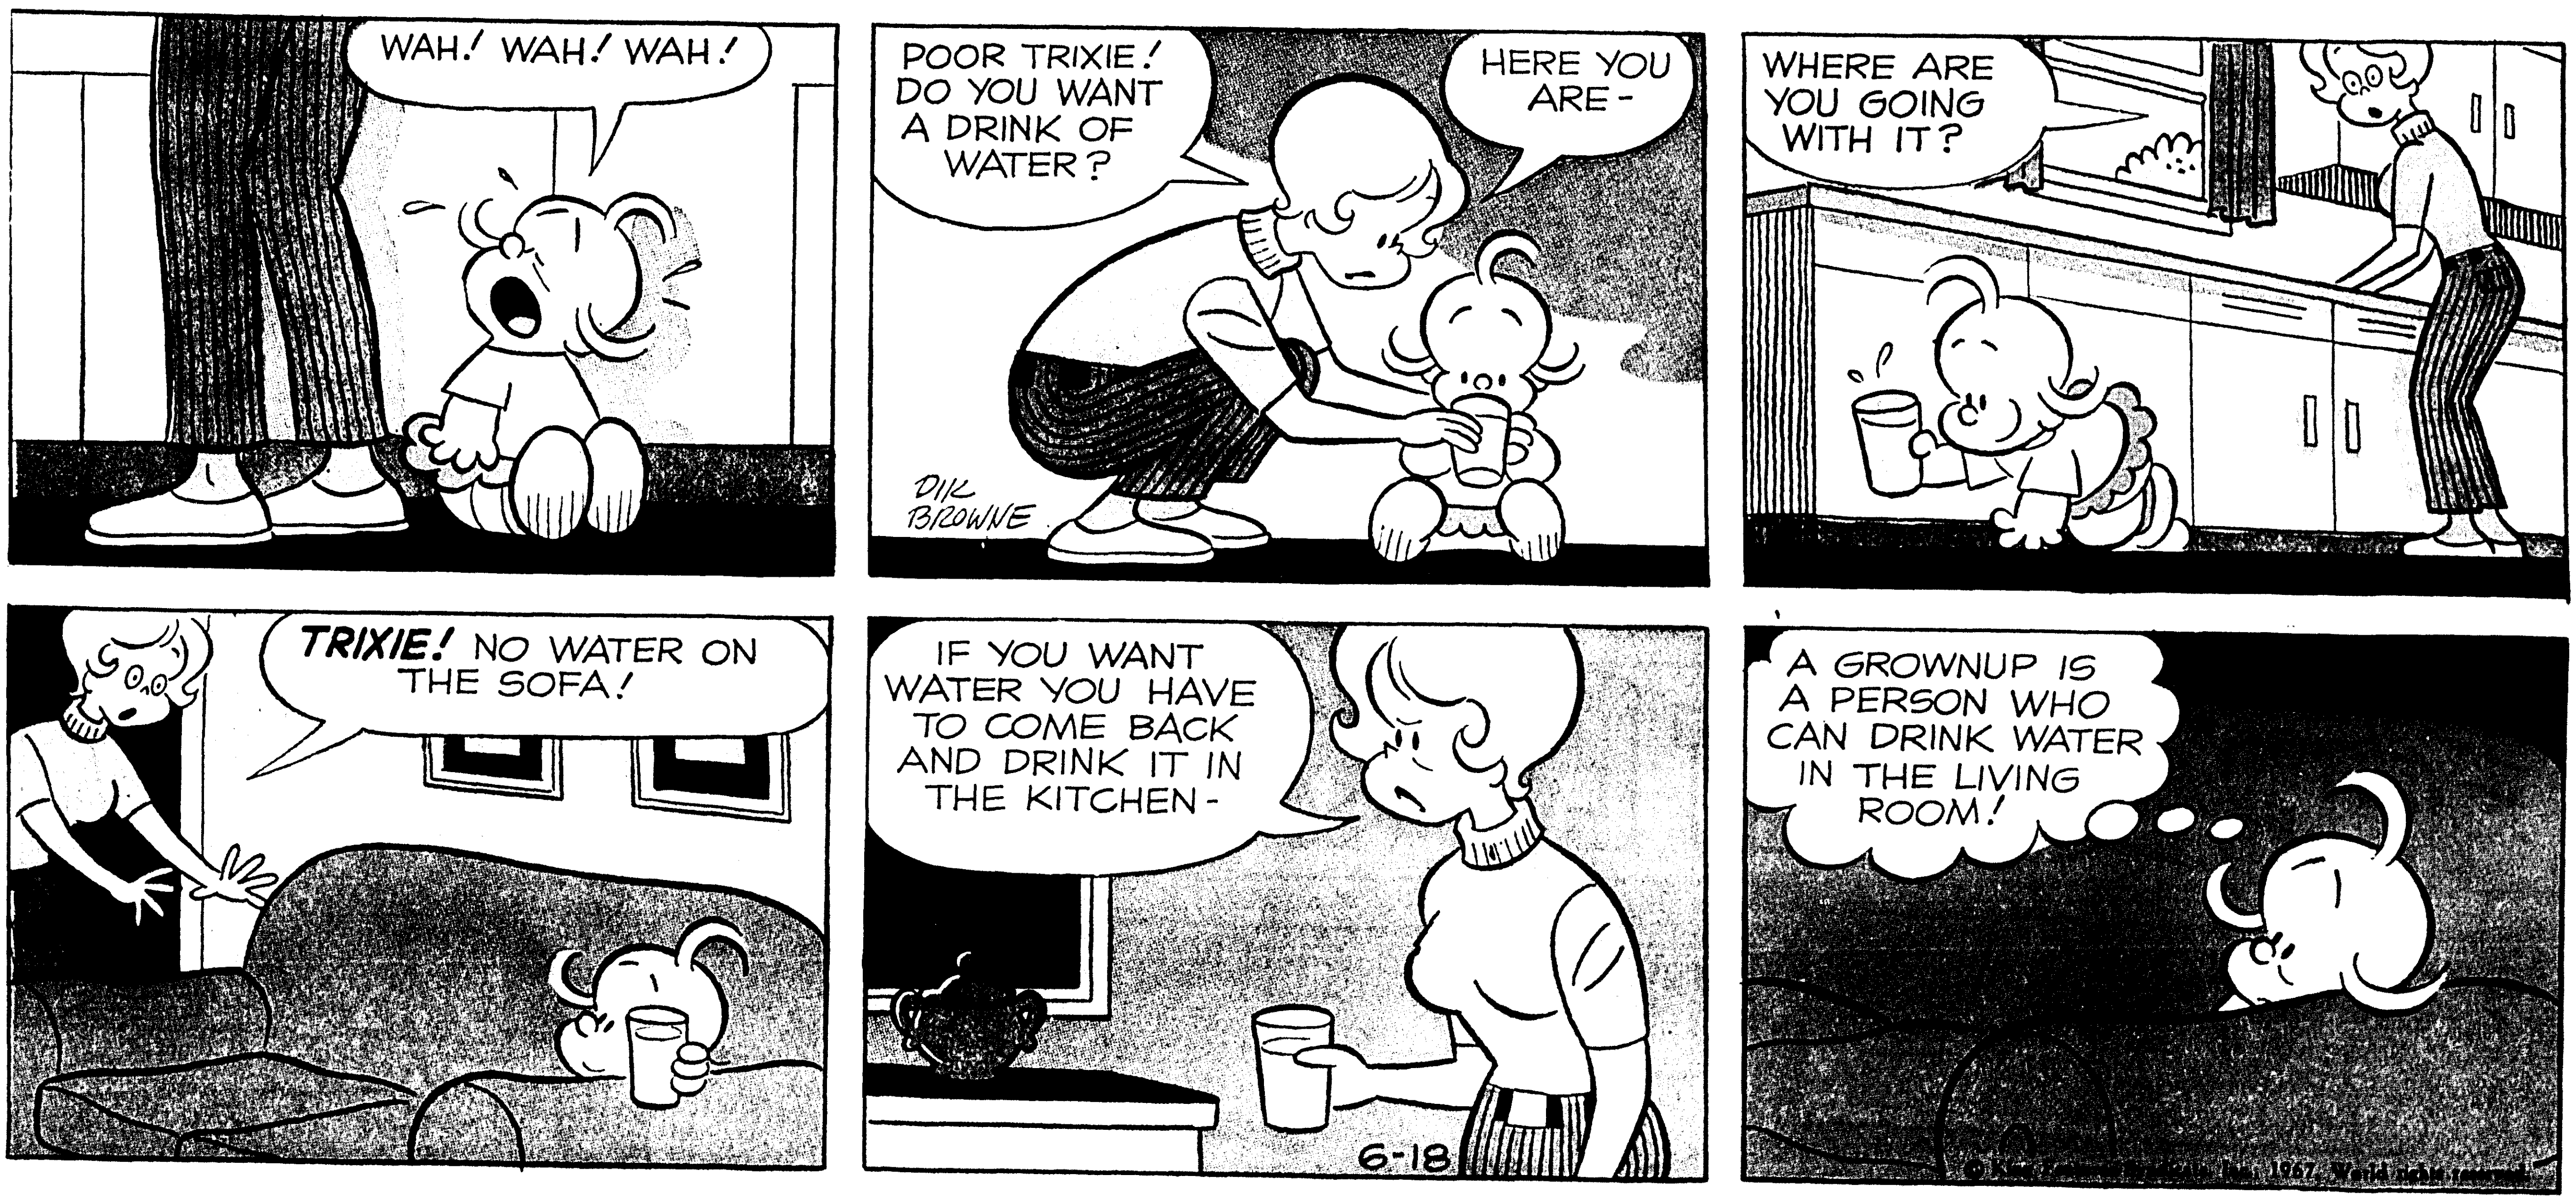
Hi and Lois

by MORT WALKER and DIK BROWNE



WAH! WAH! WAH!
POOR TRIXIE! DO YOU WANT A DRINK OF WATER?
HERE YOU ARE - DIK BROWNE
WHERE ARE YOU GOING WITH IT?
TRIXIE! NO WATER ON THE SOFA!
IF YOU WANT WATER YOU HAVE TO COME BACK AND DRINK IT IN THE KITCHEN -

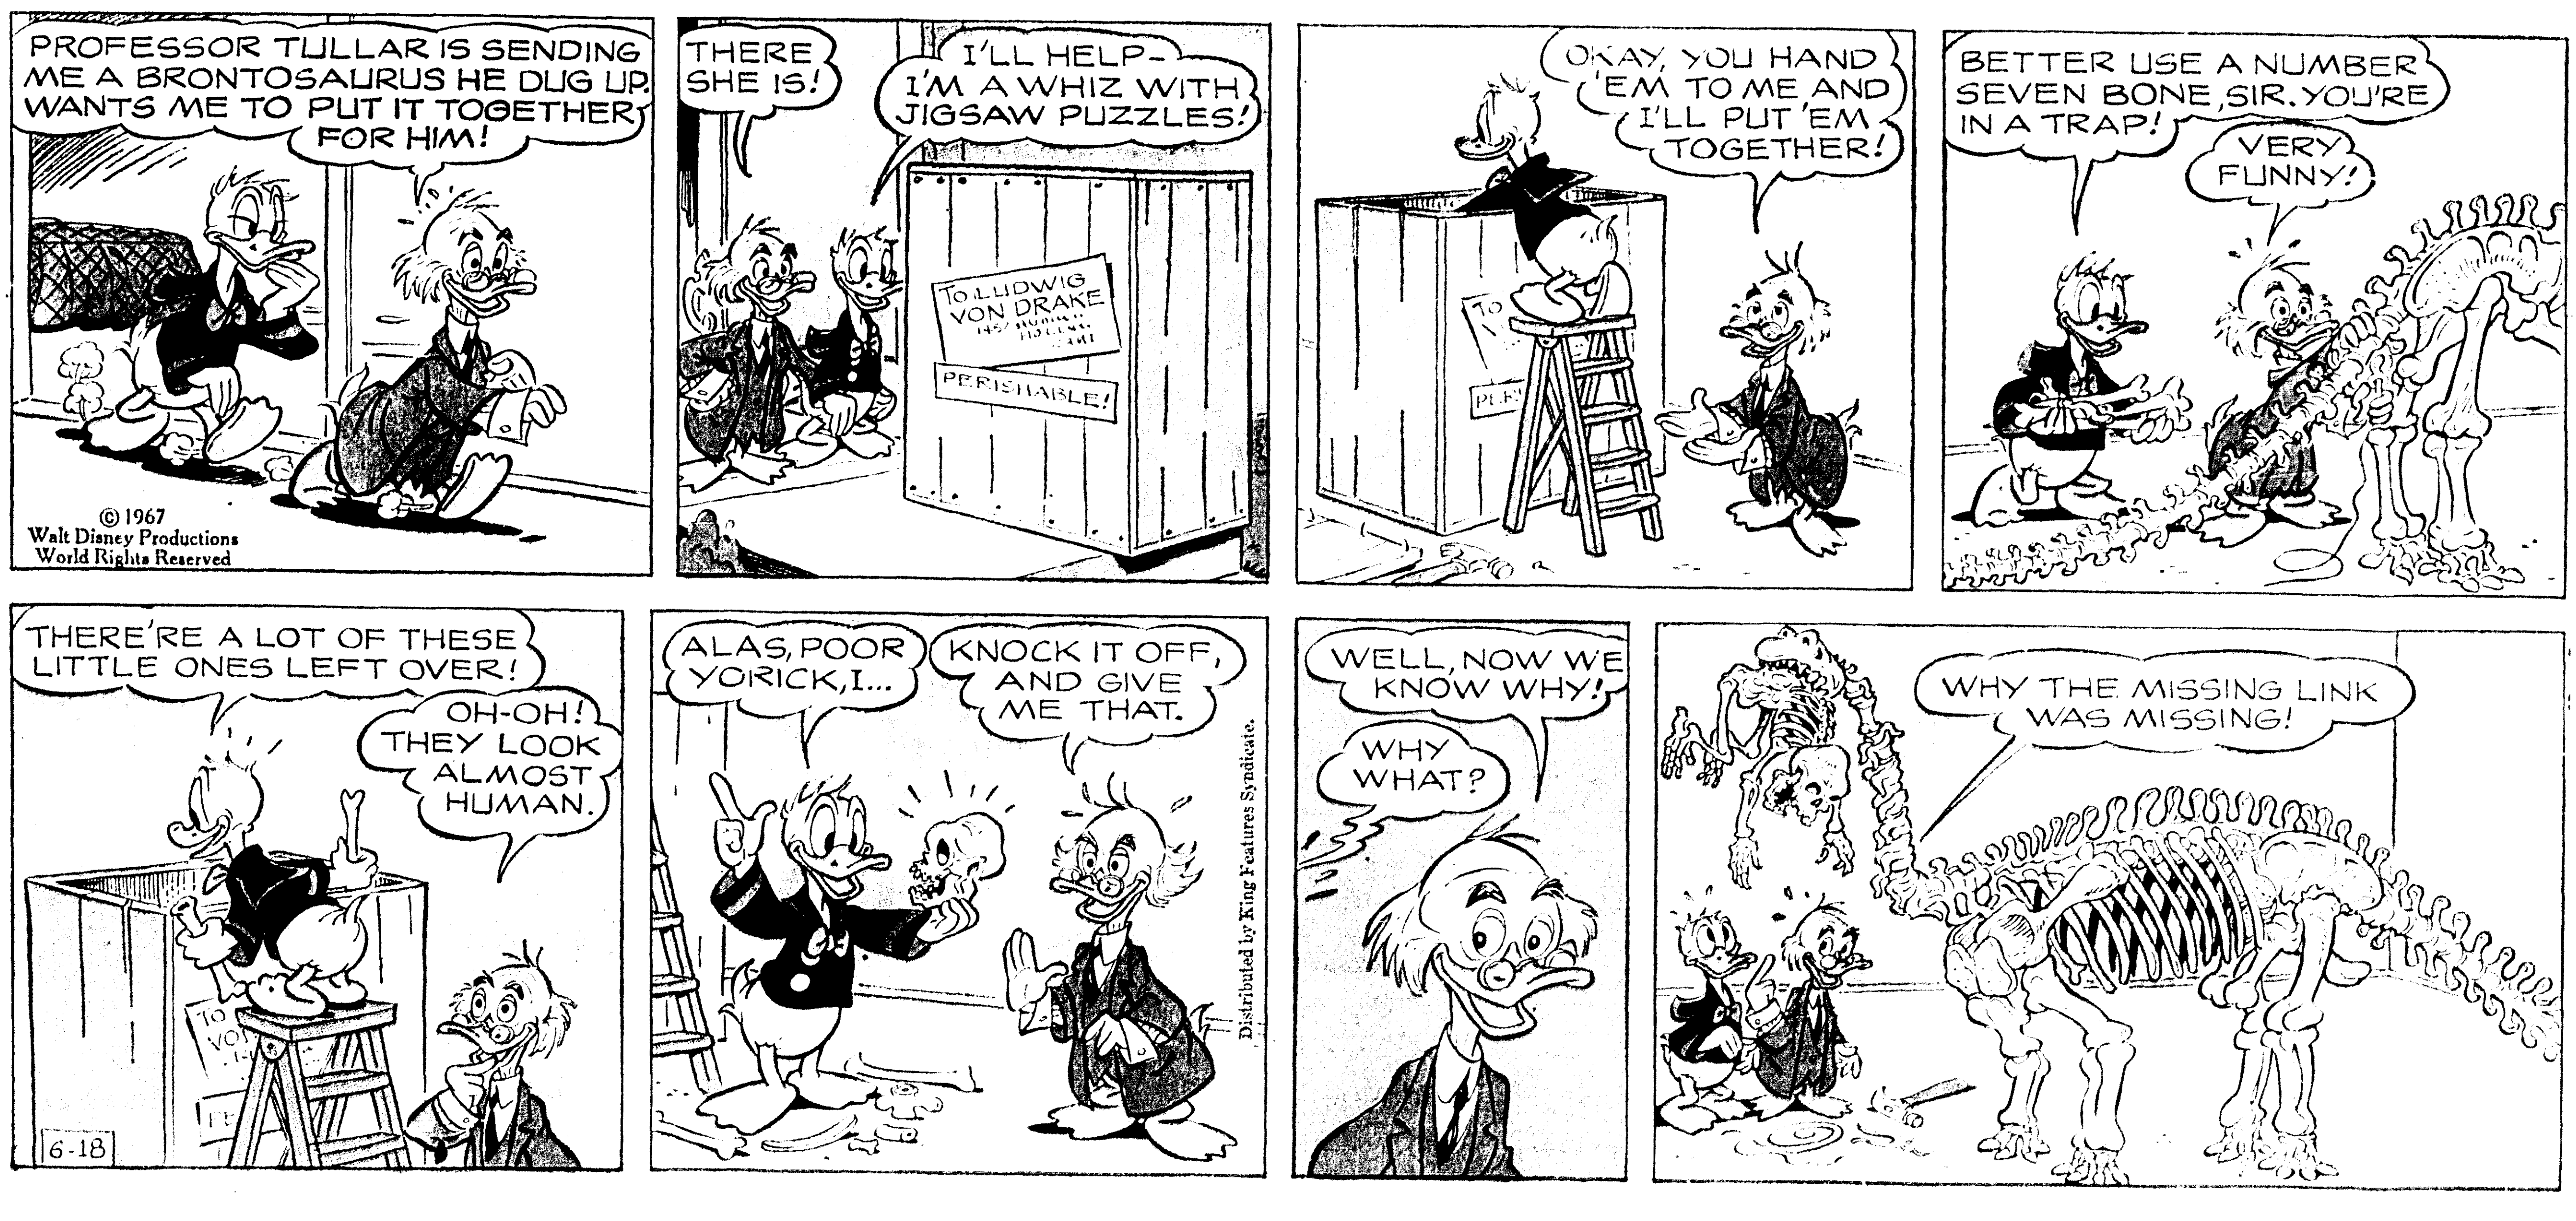
WALT DISNEY'S DONALD DUCK



PROFESSOR TULLAR IS SENDING ME A BRONTOSAURUS HE DUG UP. WANTS ME TO PUT IT TOGETHER FOR HIM!
THERE SHE IS!
I'LL HELP- I'M A WHIZ WITH JIGSAW PUZZLES!
TO LUDWIG VON DRAKE PERISHABLE!
OKAY, YOU HAND 'EM TO ME AND I'LL PUT 'EM TOGETHER!
BETTER USE A NUMBER SEVEN BONE, SIR. YOU'RE IN A TRAP!
VERY FUNNY!
OH-OH! THEY LOOK ALMOST HUMAN.
